FINAL REPUBLICAN ELECTION RALLIES

Evening Meeting at Boyne Falls—Warn Voters in Ballot Change

As the pre-election period of political rallies draws to a close, Republican candidates and their supporters are gathering around the standards of Senator Vandenberg and Frunk D. Fitzgerald in a final drive for votes.

Tonight, prosecutor MacDougal of Otsego county will speak at Boyne Falls. Tomorrow evening, Thursday, November 1st, Judge Parm C. Gilbert delivers an address at East Jordan. Friday night, at Boyne City, is marked for a la-st county round-up before election. Clare S. Beebe, prominent attorney of Kalamazoo, past exalted ruler of Michigan Elks and World War veteran will be the principal speaker, assisted by the eloquent William C. Bishop, rising young attorney of Alpena, who is an honor graduate of the University of Michigan in elocution and public speaking. Those who heard the latter at Charlevoix, last Monday evening, enjoyed an unusual treat. It is hoped that the attendance and enthusiasm at this meeting will he hearty.

Republican voters should be warned against the change on the ballot to be used at this election of the respective positions of the Republican and Democratic columns. These positions have been exactly reversed, placing the Democratic column first and the Republican column second. The emblems at the top of the columns, at first glance, are very similar—one being a likeness of Lincoln and the other of President Franklin D. Roosevelt, with the same background for each.

TWENTY GROUPS OPPOSING ALL AMENDMENTS

Men from Varied Organizatcns Condemn Six Proposals

A condemnatory resolution adopted by representatives of 20 agricultural, educational and industrial organizations of the state stands in the path of successful passage of the six proposed amendments to the state constitution.

The resolution was drawn Monday night following a conference at Lansing in which several interests pledged their organizations to a six-day campaign aimed at defeating each of the proposals before the voters November 6th.

At the same time the several organizations including the Michigan Education Association, the Manufacturers Association, the Farm Bureau and others elected Clark L. Brody, Lansing, secretary of a campaign committee which will fight passage of the amendments. The fight, however, will be carried through the channels of each group.

The resolution passed unanimously charged in part "that the best interests of the state are not being served by the growing practice of initiating ambiguously drawn amendments."

CAUTION MOTORISTS TO BEWARE OF DEER

Several Recent Accidents Kill Animals, Damage Automobiles

Motorists driving through deer cover are urged by the Department of Conservation to proceed cautiously. Deer are restless at this time of the year and bewildered by headlights, often jump in front of a car.

Two cars were badly damaged east of Baldwin when a buck and a doe were caught between them. The doe escaped, but the buck was struck by one car and hurled against the other.

Four persons were severely injured west of Evart when their car struck a deer. The vehicle turned over on the roadside.

Delos Rockwell, conservation officer of Lake county, surprised the principals in the Baldwin crash when he appeared immediately after the accident to claim the carcuss. He had been driving by.

FINISH SCHOOL IMPROVEMENTS

PROGRAM OUTLINED LAST JULY IS COMPLETED

Change High School Heating System, Install Fuel Stoker, Construct Tunnel Between Buildings

Improvements outlined by members of the board of education at the annual school meeting last July, work on which has been in progress for several weeks, have been completed, according to a report made public by Supt. O. P. North.

Included in the program was changing the high school heating system from high to low pressure and connection with the heating plant under the new grade building at a cost of $919; construction of a tunnel between the high school and grade building and other changes at a cost of $786; installation of thermostatic heat control in the high school, costing $975; installation of a fuel stoker serving the heating plant in the grade building at a cost of $1,688. The entire outlay entailed an expenditure of $4,718, which also includes furnishing free text books to all grades at an estimated cost of $1,350. Labor was furnished by the FERA.

It will be recalled that taxpayers of the district voted an extra two mills to cover the cost of these improvements, with the provision, however, that if the county board of equalization spread the tax upon a valuation which did not allow a 20 per cent cut by the city assessors the extra two mills would not be raised. Inasmuch as the city's 20 per cent cut was not allowed at the October meeting of the board of supervisors, the extra two mills will not be spread.

The improvements just completed have long been needed and will go a long way toward insuring the health of the pupils as well as ultimately saving the taxpayers of the district much expense. Changing the high school heating system and installation of thermostatic control provides regulation of temperature heretofore not possible. The fuel stoker, through use of inferior grades of coal and subsequent lower cost will decrease the heating expense. The tunnel allows communication between the high school and grade buildings without the necessity of going out-of-doors. It goes without saying that the free text book plan has proven popular with school patrons.

SCHOOL TEACHERS TO AID NURSERY PROJECT

Present Play November 15 to Raise Additional Finances

The faculty of the public schools and Freshman College as their contribution to the Nursery School are presenting a lively comedy at the gymnasium on Thursday evening, November 15th. The play, "To Our Wives," showing the subtle influence of women in the lives of their husbands, has not one dull moment.

Miss Belding and Miss McMillan as the wives give most convincing performances and Mr. Bingham and Mr. North, the husbands will keep the audience in continual roars of laughter. Mr. Stoughton as the well meaning but blundering neighbor furnishes some of the rarest humor found in any recent American comedy.

Other members of the faculty assisted by some students of the Freshman College, representatives of the school board and P. T. A. complete the large cast.

"To Our Wives," a deliciously funny, and altogether diverting evening's entertainment, will be enjoyed by both young and old. The High School Drama Club will make a canvass of the city for the sale of tickets.

SOLOMON-SOBLESKY WEDDING ON MONDAY

Popular Local Girl Became Bride of Petoskey Young Man

At a wedding ceremony solemnized Monday afternoon at the Congregational parsonage on State street, Miss Virginia Mae Solomon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. A. Solomon, this city, was united in marriage to Edward Soblesky of Petoskey.

The service was read by Rev. G. R. Parker. Attending the couple were Doris Solomon, sister of the bride, and Ed. Golden of Petoskey. The couple left immediately following the ceremony for a short stay in Detroit and other southern Michigan points. Upon their return, they will reside at 109 W. Lincoln avenue, this city.

The former Miss Solomon is a popular member of the local younger social set and has a large following of friends who will extend their congratulations to the young couple.

LET SEWAGE DISPOSAL CONTRACTS

COUNCIL MEETS TONIGHT TO TAKE FORMAL ACTION

Lansing Firm Is Low Bidder; Contract Requires Work Start in 10 Days; 7-Month Job

In all probability the contract for Charlevoix's sewage disposal system, to be financed by PWA grant approved some months ago, will be let at an adjourned meeting of the city council Wednesday evening.

This formality will bring to an end several months of delay occasioned by legal difficulties and technicalities which were unforeseen and have held up the project far beyond the time anticipated by the city council when negotiations to bring about this municipal improvement were started.

The low bidder was the H. G. Christman-Lansing Co., of Lansing, Mich., and without doubt this firm will be awarded the contract, although this formality awaits council action. The contract will require that actual work be started within 10 days from the time the contract is awarded and also requires that work be finished within seven months of that date.

Previous bids were rejected due to irregularities and the fact the amounts were in excess of the PWA grant. The bid to be acted on Wednesday night is also in excess of the grant, but in order to eliminate the necessity of going through all the delay of applying for and awaiting approval of a supplementary grant, the city, it is understood, has decided to take over the financing of a small portion of the sewer work. This action will save considerable expense as well as eliminate any further delays.

Preliminary work on the sewage disposal project is already under way. The old buildings are being wrecked by workmen furnished through the FERA and the Sears Dock & Dredging Co. has started the work of pulling old piling in preparation for the construction of a new municipal dock fronting the former Wilbur property.

Commencement of the actual construction work on the sewage disposal project will furnish employment for a great many local men. The procedure of applying for employment and other details in connection with the project will be announced as soon as information is available.

REPUBLICAN SURVIVOR OF DEMOCRATIC LANDSLIDE TWO YEARS AGO HAD 50,000 MAJORITY OVER ARTHUR J. LACY WHO CONCEDES DEFEAT

VANOENBERG IS CERTAIN OF ELECTION

THREE DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATES FOR STATE OFFICE HAVE LEAD. TOY, ATWOOD, REP., IN FRONT

COUNTY TURNS DOWN ALL AMENDMENTS

Entire Republican Slate of Candidates for County Offices Elected, But Majorities Cut as Democrat and Socialist Votes Increase—Charlevoix Republican Stronghold

Frank D. Fitzgerald, the only Republican candidate to survive the Democratic landslide two years ago, will be Michigan's next governor. Arthur J. Lacy, his Democratic opponent at the general election Tuesday, has conceded defeat, according to reports. Latest tabulations give Fitzgerald a 50,000 majority.

That the swing to the Republican standard will fail to carry the entire state ticket to victory along with Fitzgerald, appears quite apparent, however, as indications point toward some Democrats retaining office. While Harry S. Toy, Rep., has a 45,-

Frank D. Fitzgerald

000 lead over Patrick H. O'Brien, Dem., for attorney general, and Orville E. Atwood, Rep., is leading Guy M. Wilson, Dem., by 26,000 votes for secretary of state, United Press reports at 11:30 gave Theodore I. Fry, Dem., a lead of 11,000 votes over Gilbert H. Isbister for state treasurer, John K. Stack Jr. a lead of 1100 votes over Harry D. Brackett for auditor general, and Allen E. Stebbins a lead of 400 votes over Thomas Read for lieutenant-governor.

It also appears Michigan will retain its Republican U. S. senator, Arthur H. Vandenberg, who is leading Frank A. Picard, Dem., by 25,000 votes.

The race between Prentiss M. Brown, Democratic incumbent, and John J. O'Hara, Rep., for Congressman from the 11th district, is still a toss-up. Latest tabulations give Brown a lead of 1800 votes with half the precincts reported. Otto W. Bishop is conceded the election as senator of the 29th district with a 1600 lead over Elmer G. Smith, Dem., and Douglas D. Tibbitts, Republican representative from the Charlevoix-Leelanau district, defeated William J. Schram, Dem., 3962 to 2785.

Charlevoix County Wavers

While Charlevoix county remained in the Republican ranks, giving a majority to all candidates on the slate, the margin was the smallest on record as a wave of Democratic and Socialist favor revealed itself. Only a decided Republican majority voted in Charlevoix's three wards bolstered the leads of all Republican candidates. Boyne City's majority was Democratic, as was also that of Boyne Valley, Chandler, Peaine and St. James townships. East Jordan cast a Democratic majority for some of the candidates, although splitting their tickets for favored ones.

Perhaps one of the most surprising results of the election was the large Socialist vote cast. In past years ten would have been a lot. While accurate figures are not available at this time, nearly 200 were cast Tuesday.

Turn Down Amendments

With the vote available from 13 of the 25 county precincts, it appears all six amendments were defeated. Down-state reports reveal a similar trend throughout Michigan.

DUCK SEASON CLOSES SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 11

Brings to a Close Thirty-Day Shooting in Michigan

Due to federal regulations limiting the shooting of migratory waterfowl to 30 days, duck hunting will become illegal in Michigan after Sunday, November 11th, according to the Department of Conservation.

After that date the shooting of ducks, geese, brant, Wilson snipe, coot, Florida gallinules and rails will be unlawful until the open season of 1935.

Under the plan enforced by the federal Bureau of Biological Survey, hunting for migratory waterfowl was limited to 30 shooting days throughout the country this year. In Michigan Mondays and Tuesdays from October 1 to November 11 were declared closed as rest-days for ducks, geese, jacksnipe, coot and brant. The season this year, is approximately 30 days shorter than that of 1933.

CITY TO PROVIDE DOCK FACILITIES

WILL BUILD WAREHOUSE FOOT OF MASON STREET

Structure to Furnish Marine Terminal Formerly at Wilbur's—Aid Welfare, Tourist Assn.

Provisions for docking and freight tranfer facilities removed with the tearing down of the Wilbur dock and warehouse, Charlevoix's marine terminal for over 40 years, were made by the city council Monday night.

By unanimous vote, the council approved the construction of a temporary warehouse and passenger depot, 14x20 feet, on the city-owned dock at the foot of Mason street. This structure will have to fill the city's needs until completion of the new municipal dock, warehouse and terminal fronting the sewage disposal property.

Among other important matters disposed of was the city's participation in the Michigan Tourist & Resort Association's advertising program for 1935 and the approval of moves to aid welfare projects.

The sum of $300 was voted for a full page depicting Charlevoix's resort advantages in the Michigan Resort Association Booklet for 1935. In addition to this appropriation, the county is providing another $300 for next year.

The council approved a motion made to plow the welfare garden plot south of the American Legion quarters on Garfield avenue this fall. This project has been a successful one the past two years, providing food for a large number of welfare families.

The city also voted to furnish electric current free of charge for the kitchen at the high school used to prepare meals served in connection with the Nursery School project inaugurated last week.

CHARLEVOIX WINS BY 3-POINT MARGIN

HANDED ROGERS CITY FIRST DEFEAT 9 TO 6

Bring Season's Schedule to Close With Brilliant Exhibition — Rogers Conference Champs

Charlevoix high wound up its 1934 football schedule here Saturday afternoon, scoring a 9 to 6 victory over the heretofore undefeated Rogers City aggregation.

The victory, Charlevoix's third in five games, gave the Kipmen a tie with East Jordan for third place in the Tip of Michigan conference standing. Despite defeat, Rogers City succeeds Charlevoix as conference champions, for Boyne City downed East Jordan in their annual tussle, thus ending the season with one defeat and a tie for second place. Harbor Springs, defeated in every conference game, landed in the cellar position.

The Kipmen, pointed for this closing game, gave a fine exhibition Saturday. All the thrills usually resulting when two evenly matched teams take the field were present. Charlevoix's ability to cash in on "breaks" proved the deciding factor.

The two teams battled on even terms through most of the first two periods. Late in the second Carey passed to Radle for 20 yards, Charlevoix's first long gain.

Charlevoix Scores

Rogers City opened a new bag of tricks with the second half, combining passes and a long run around left end to reach the four-yard strip, where Charlevoix held for downs. Rogers City fumbled Foster's punt on their 35-yard line and then knocked down a placement on their five-yard strip. Charlevoix recovering. The period ended, but on the first play of the fourth, Foster slipped through center for a touchdown to give Charlevoix a 9 to 0 lead.

The balance of the period was a hectic struggle. Rogers City interference on a pass gave Charlevoix the ball on the visitor's 28. A pass, Carey to Radle, left Charlevoix four inches to go. Two line plays failed and a 15-yard penalty followed by a wide placement ended the threat.

With only a few minutes left to play, Rogers City filled the air with passes in a final scoring attempt which ended with a touchdown on a long heave, Mulka to Parndise, after an 85-yard advance. A placement for extra point was low. The contest ended with the ball in Charlevoix's possession on the visitor's 25-yard line, where Foster intercepted a pass.

Foster and Shapton were outstanding for Charlevoix, while Mulka, Rogers captain, was their individual star.

The line-ups:

NORWOOD

Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Beurd of Petoskey, called on Mr. and Mrs. I. L. Dice Sunday afternoon.

Wava Gene Thompson spent last week-end with Miss Bessie Baumbach, who is teacher of the school at Ironton, where the little guest attends.

Birds are migrating to warmer climates, leaving their nests in leafless trees and all the autumn activities of nature are making final preparations for winter.

The annual chicken pie dinner held at Norwood last Tuesday evening netted $25, and several of the republican candidates for re-election to county offices were present, each taking his turn on the platform with a very fine speech.

Mrs. Glenn Holecheck was surprised when a group of 12 of her young married lady friends called at her home Wednesday evening filled with the spirit of Hallowe'en. All enjoyed a delightful evening, the ladies bringing with them a fine pot luck lunch.

Mrs. Lester Harwood entertained a group of little tots Saturday afternoon from 4 until 5 o'clock honoring her daughter, Esther, who was celebrating her sixth birthday anniversary. Games were enjoyed and refreshments served including birthday cake, home-made candy and popcorn balls.

Mrs. William Alward entertained a group of relatives at their home Sunday, honoring her husband's birthday anniversary. The dining table was centered with a beautiful bouquet of asters, where 15 relatives enjoyed a bountiful dinner. Mr. Alward received several useful gifts, and relatives, wishing him many more happy birthdays, left for their homes.

CENTRAL LAKE

Rev. Guy Liskum and wife attended church at the Free Methodist in Central Lake.

O. R. Morse has shopped out six carloads of potatoes from the Bay View store. He has paid 21 cents. Ellsworth and Central Lake paid 15 cents.

Mr. Donelson says he will finish moving to the Niles farm north of Mancelona from Antrim City this week. He has purchased the farm from the St. Paul Land Bank.

Philip Ohmans have finished moving to the Vera Carpenter house east of the railroad from their farm at Creswell. Albert Christensen of Kewadin has rented their farm.

Mrs. James Ison plans on visiting relatives in California and Washington this winter, but has been detained on account of the lady she was intending going with having broken n leg.

Lee Donelson and Harold Aenis have been drawing potatoes to the Bay View store for Mr. Donelson. Harold drew 125 bushels at one load. Quite a difference from drawing 40 bushels with a team.

Ivan Morse was a business visitor to the Alfred Miller potato warehouse at East Jordan last Monday. His father needed more supplies, as he is also buying potatoes for the Miller company.

There was a large attendance at the funeral of Ben Zimmerman at the Free Methodist church last week. Rev. Glen Cornett preached the funeral sermon, and interment was in Southern Cemetery.

Bay View Gleaners will hold their next meeting in December in the daytime. Meetings for the winter will be held in the daytime. They plan an oyster supper for their next meeting, each member to invite a friend to accompany them.

Born: To Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Dawson last week, an eight-pound boy. Mrs. Dawson was formerly Beatrice McGuire. They have been staying for a time with Mrs. Cora Dunlap, east side of the river, but have gone back to their farm at Grand View.

Grand View had an attendance of 21 at Sunday school last Sunday. Mr. Morse gave out the prizes for best attendance to 12 members who have attended the whole quarter. There was no Sunday school on October 28th, on account of the Zimmerman funeral.

Rev. G. A. W. Weaver, missionary of Petoskey, went to Creswell Sunday school but Sunday but found no one present. He then came up and visited the Bay View Sunday school which had a rather small attendance. From there he went to Green River. Twelve years ago the correspondent and Rev. Weaver organized the Creswell and Bay View Sunday schools and they have been going good until lately. But interest in Sunday school and church work appears to have waned everywhere. Rev. Weaver said he preached a week ago at his home in Trantman, Ohio, near Dayton, to a congregation of 30 that once had 150. He also conducted services in a Presbyterian church in Cincinnati to about 30 where membership had been 200. He says many churches have been changed to blacksmith shops, private dwellings. Some have been used for lodge halls where card parties are held, some for dance halls, some for garages, and some for restaurants.

Odd, isn't it that gentlemen card players do not take defeat graciously? Nevertheless, it is so when the ladies of the circle are victorious, and they sometimes are believe it or not.

On our list of patients this week we have Lloyd McDonough and W. J. Gallagher. The diagnosis is quinsy. Their conditions are improving, however, and we hope to see them out soon again.

A plane, piloted by Bud Hammond, swooped down here last Thursday bringing as a passenger, Ward Quinn, a prominent business man of St. Ignace. Mr. Quinn spent the afternoon in pleasant discourse with several of the Island citizens.

To Keep Jars Airtight

If you wish to keep food in jars airtight and have no paraffin or rings and covers, try this method. Dip tissue paper into milk. Place the paper over your jars while very wet. Tie it in place and allow it to dry. It will dry like parchment and the jars will be airtight as long as it is left on.

Now Science Explains Why So Many People Past 40

Feel That They're Slipping Losing Their "Grip" on Things

Many people 'round 40 think they're "growing old." They feel tired a lot . . . "weak." Have headaches, dizziness, stomach upsets.

Well, scientists say the cause of all this, in a great many cases, is simply an acid condition of the stomach. Nothing more.

All you have to do is to neutralize the excess stomach acidity.

When you have one of these acid stomach upsets, take Phillips' Milk of Magnesia after meals and before going to bed. That's all!

Try this. Soon you'll feel like another person! Take either the familiar liquid "PHILLIPS'" or the convenient new Phillips' Milk of Magnesia Tablets.

ALSO IN TABLET FORM: Phillips' Milk of Magnesia Tablets are now on sale at all drug stores everywhere. Each tiny tablet is the equivalent of a teaspoonful of Genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

PHILLIPS' Milk of Magnesia

Might Have Changed

Smith (to beauty parlor proprietress)—Has my wife been here?

Proprietress—What is she like, sir?

Smith—Well, I can tell you what she was like when she went in.—Humorist Magazine.

DRUGS?

Boys and girls who have reached their "teens" are not ready to be given powerful drugs!

It is not wise to give laxatives of adult strength to a child, just because you give them less frequently or in less amounts. Many stomach upsets and bowel troubles of growing children can be traced to this single mistake.

Use a liquid laxative containing senna (a natural laxative). California Syrup of Figs has the right amount for children's use, and this rich, fruity syrup does not harm or upset a child's system.

Give that headachy, bilious child a little of this gentle laxative when constipated, and a little less, if dose is repeated until bowels seem to be moving regularly and thoroughly without need of help.

Get the true California Syrup of Figs containing senna and cascara, which will not weaken the bowels or irritate the kidneys. You'll soon have full evidence that it safely relieves constipation in children.

THE "LIQUID TEST." First: select a liquid laxative of the proper strength for children. Second: give the dose suited to the child's age. Third: reduce the dose, if repeated, until the bowels are moving without any help at all.

An ideal laxative for this purpose is the pure California Syrup of Figs, but be sure the word "California" is on the bottle.

TRUE DETECTIVE STORY

by Vance Wynn © Public Ledger

The Secret of the Walnut Closet

MADAME DE POLVERE, member of the French nobility, was in great dread—she felt instinctively that the sword of death was hanging over her head.

In her extremity she communicated with Fouche, the French minister of police, asking that he send one of his representatives to her in order that she might give him a startling piece of information.

She laid stress on the fact that she did not want Fouche himself but one of his subordinates.

With characteristic perversity Fouche went himself—but in disguise.

His own brother would not have known him any more than did the butler at the handsome ancestral mansion on the Rue des Fosse-Saint-Victor, although the famous detective had attended more than one reception there.

There were two Madame de Polveres in the house—the young woman and the dowager of the same name.

He asked for the younger one, and presently was greeted by a ravishingly beautiful woman.

After some hesitation she told the detective that she was in deadly fear of being poisoned by her mother-in-law.

She said she was the third wife of the nobleman and that the other two had died very mysteriously.

When it became certain that the first two wives would bring no heirs to the nobleman they had languished and died.

The narrator told the minister of police that she had been married two years now, and it was improbable that she would have any children.

The mother-in-law had commented on this and thrown out ugly hints.

She had gone to the country and invited young Madame de Polvere to follow her.

She was afraid to do so and in her terror had sent for the detective.

Fouche listened to this amazing story and agreed to stay in the house and see the adventure through.

That night the countess returned home and was furious at the disobedience of her daughter-in-law.

She went to her room and gave orders that she was not to be disturbed under any circumstances.

Fouche felt that the solution of the mystery would come before morning.

He managed to get a room opposite to that of the elderly one and he watched the door like a hawk.

An arrest could not be made on suspicion. He must have facts.

They came in the most unexpected and convincing manner.

The countess had the great misfortune—to herself—to be a sleepwalker.

About midnight the door of her room opened and the countess came out, clothed only in her nightdress and slippers and carrying an unlighted candle.

The police minister, who was in the hall, crouched against the side of the wall.

The woman passed without seeing him.

She walked up the staircase until she came to the third floor, which contained the servants' quarters.

Presently she reached a dingy passage which led to an unfrequented chamber.

Selecting one of these, she placed it in her nightdress and returned to her room.

The next morning she was placed under arrest and made an abject confession.

The police minister reported the case to the emperor, who declared that such a monstrous crime should not be permitted to go unpunished.

But he wished very much to save the honor of the noble house.

How could justice be done without casting lasting shame on an honored name?

"Leave it to me, sire," said the resourceful Fouche, "and I will guarantee that justice will be done."

He arrested the countess for an alleged political crime.

She was cast into prison for life.

The fate she chose for herself—she made the punishment fit the crime by taking a dose of poison and dying in great agony.

U. S. Chamber of Commerce

Although the United States Chamber of Commerce was formed at a conference called at Washington in 1912 by President Taft, it is not a government organization, writes G. R. Turner in the Kansas City Times. It is, instead, a federation of local chambers of commerce, boards of trade, national trade associations and similar bodies. Its purpose is to co-ordinate and express the views of the various groups that constitute it, to supply information on economic conditions, and to serve the whole nation in much the same manner as local chambers of commerce serve their communities.

Tunic Versus Short Jacket Effects

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

RUMOR has become fact. The tunic, so long in prospect according to fashion forecasts, has at last arrived. In full force, too! It is an endless procession of tunics that is descending upon us. One cannot move in fashion's realm without encountering tunics of every description along the way. From strictly tailored to the glittering gorgeous sort there's a tunic for every occasion.

Wherefore, you can do no smarter than to have your newest costume, be it for street, campus, office or school, for dressy afternoon or for glamorous evening wear, fashioned tunic-wise.

For practical hours your tweed, your light wool, your sturdy velveteen tunic, should be straight, slim and strictly tailored in the spirit of austerity. To be ultra chic you might take it up in the new Cossack manner with braid and buttons, fur bandings, wide belt, metal trappings and other revealing touches of Russian influence.

Tunics take on a somewhat dressier air when they go forth to afternoon social gatherings. One of the newest ideas is the tunic manipulated with little fan pleatings and flares about its hemline to ensemble it up a bit. This same is frequently styled of light woolen with contrasting sleeves often on full bishop lines and, like as not, sheer to the point of transparency. Often these contrasting sleeves, made peasant fashion, are ornate with colored embroidery or glittering sequin embellishment.

When the shades of night fall, then it is that the spotlight of fashion reveals the tunic at the height of its glory, for the really formal tunics play a role of dazzling splendor. The grandest ones are evolved of scintillating lame weaves so sumptuous they baffle description. To make it more so, if you are sparkling-minded, your tunic may be elaborately worked with thousands of shiny, twinkling sequins.

Even a dressy afternoon tunic is apt to go glittery. For example, the handsome model centered in the illustration is of silver lame worked all over with millions of wee shimmering jet paillettes. This striking model comes straight from Paris—a Bruyere creation.

The fur-bordered tunic is the "talk o' town" this season. On crisp autumn days it comes out in tweeds and novelty woolens with lavish trimmings of the fur of your choice. At night it sallies forth in such regal aspect as the picture to the left portrays. This very elegant evening gown is made of gold-spotted black velvet, this minaret silhouette being a favorite theme on the fall and winter fashion program.

Not all the honors, however, are going to the tunic for there is a rival in the field—the short jacket or jacket blouse if you prefer to call it so. While tuck-ins are by no means out of the picture, yet there is a decided trend toward blouses and jacket effects which are worn over the skirt. This is true not only of daytime blouses of plaids and taffetas and metal-shot woolens, so many of which are like jackets or basques, but for evening and formal afternoon wear the big message is the jacket-blouse made of gold or silver cloth. The youthful model to the right in this group is a silver knitted type. With a black velvet skirt it is tremendously good looking.

WITH WIDE SASH

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Belts are by no means out of the picture this season but sashes are "in." Dilkusha, who is sending out such lovely things from Paris, girdles this charming evening dress of blue and white striped wool with a wide sash of tangerine red velvet. The fact that this gown is fashioned of a sheer woolen weave is significant, for the latest fashion reports laud thin wool for evening gowns.

Challis Blouses

LEADING DESIGNERS SHOW LONGER COATS

Costumes composed of three-quarter coat, skirt, long blouse or tunic are sponsored by leading couturiers both for morning and afternoon wear. In some houses the coats remain really three-quarter and swagger in line, with fullness starting from the shoulders or kimono sleeves. In other houses, like Marcel Rochas, the three-quarter coats have been lengthened into seven-eighths. On more dressy models the swagger coat is replaced by a close-fitted garment with the indicated mid-flared effect on the skirt. This is particularly sponsored by—Worth. In all cases the skirt underneath remains quite straight and narrow.

Quilting Hues Will Be Popular for Fall Styles

Call in the neighbors and have a quilting bee. It's quite the thing this season, what with the revival of quilted silk and velvet wraps.

Quilted fabrics are all over the place, not only in evening wraps, but for daytime clothes, sports outfits and practically anything else you may think of.

New Hand-Knits for Fall Adopt Color Contrasts

Brown, with either chartreuse or old gold for contrast, is a favorite color for hand-knits for fall. Next in line is dark green, set off by maize-gold or dusty beige. Bright reds have created quite a furor for two-piece dresses, with cerise and flamingo leading the field.

Woman's Right to a Second Chance

Did you read in the newspapers how a woman in China is being honored by the government for refusing to marry after the death of her husband?

"This woman had married at the age of eighteen and after three years her husband died. She refused to marry again and remained a widow for 75 years. Recently her case came under the notice of the magistrate of the district where she lives, and he reported it to the capital of the province. As a result the woman is to be officially honored and given the title 'Model of Virtue.'

"What do you think about that. Is it necessarily a sign of virtue or self-sacrifice for a woman not to marry again?"

"It's an old Chinese custom that, of honoring a widow for not remarrying. During the republic it went somewhat out of fashion. But in the imperial days a woman who refused to remarry after the death of her husband was regarded always as a model of virtue, and it was the custom when she, too, was gathered to her ancestors, to erect a marble arch over her grave.

"But does failure or refusal to remarry necessarily indicate virtue or extreme devotion to the departed husband? In asking that, our reader expressed the thoughts that came to my mind as I read her letter.

"Assuming that all widows have an opportunity to marry again—and most of them do have it—are there still not other factors that might enter into their preference to remain single, factors that would hardly entitle them in general to the distinction of a marble arch?

"To the modern American woman it is quite conceivable that a woman once married might prefer for quite selfish reasons to retain her freedom. The joys of matrimony having been explored, also the price to be paid for them, it is not at all beyond the bounds of possibility that the freedom of the single life might again attract her.

"We forget, of course, that in the viewpoint of the Chinese woman of the old school a husband can do no wrong, therefore marriage can have no flaws, therefore if she does not remarry, given the opportunity, it must be out of purest virtue and devotion to the dead. So be it."

ARMISTICE DAY

Sixteen years have sped by as upon the wings of the morning since the signing of the proctocal on the blood-stained battle-fields of France that brought an end to hostilities. It seems but yesterday that we witnessed the spectacle of a nation deliriously mad with joy—our boys and girls would soon be coming home.

Today finds this a nation of sober and saddened people. The glamor that was of war has slowly faded into the dim march of the year, the glory of conquest and victory dimmed by the grim spectacle of millions of human beings touching the abject dregs of life because of that conquest which was to be a war to end all wars.

The lesson taught by the World War should last America for a hundred years. We are a peace-loving people, we neither hope for new worlds to conquer or a desire to sweep the ocean lanes with great flotillas bearing the sword of arrogance and suppression. It is a national obsession we be left to peaceful pursuits, that slowly we may bind up the cruel wounds of conflict and bring back smiles to the faces of a happy and contented people.

Armistice Day this year should remind us there is much remaining to be done in the great task of reconstruction. It calls for the best that is in us all, lest we go the way of Old World nations where liberty has been sacrificed to expediency, where dictatorship sits enthroned in the ancient halls of justice. We cannot unlive the past, but we can guard well the future. In the spirit of Washington and Lincoln, and of all the great leaders of the Republic, dedicate ourselves to this inspired service in the sight of God and man. For therein lies the destiny and salvation of the nation.

TEMPERANCE TO BE TAUGHT IN THE SCHOOLS

The daily press recently announced that an educational temperance program had been launched in the public schools of Michigan and that the department of public instruction was enclosing a list of reference literature on the subject of temperance in its news letter mailed to 1700 school superintendents, commissioners and teachers throughout the state.

Michigan at one time had a very significant law requiring scientific temperance instructions in the public schools. It required instructions in all grades and one-fourth the material in all health text-books must be devoted to the subject.

When the school laws were recodified a few years ago this act was repealed and a much shorter one "without teeth" enacted in its place. This was done without the knowledge of the temperance people.

Teachers are busy people and the time is all too short to carry out the assigned program. If temperance is to be again taught in the schools as in former days it will take more than a form letter from the state superintendent's office to bring it about. The people of each community will have to demand it and see that their wishes are carried out even if some other subjects are dropped from the course.

This is a worthy subject for discussion in the P. T. A. and other clubs. So many are agreed that education is the solution of the liquor question, there should be no objection from any quarters to giving temperance instruction its former place in the school curriculum.

A RECORD OF SERVICE

The National Grange—The Patrons of Husbandry is its legal, though less familiar title—is about to hold its sixty-eighth annual meeting this year at Hartford, Connecticut's handsome capitol.

The Grange is the patriarch among organizations of farmers and planters, but it is approaching the three-score-and-ten mark of its presumably allotted span as vital and as vigorous as the day it was organized.

With dignity and integrity the Grange has represented the worthiness of agriculture and the honorable rights of the tillers of the soil. It has witnessed the rise and fall of many mushroom leagues, some worthy, some only selfish, and a few that were merely politically contemptible. Yet all the while it has kept its own record stainlessly clean and beyond reproach.

It is a noteworthy tribute to the American farmer that his oldest organization should still be his biggest and his best. In its seven decades of activity its membership has grown from slim beginnings to around 800,000, not including the juveniles. It covers more than two-thirds of the states of the Union. It has always placed the intellectual, the spiritual, and the civic improvements of the nation's farm population above material betterments or political advantage. Perhaps that is why it has thrived as have few if any of its rivals.—From Country Home.

DECAYING DEMOCRACY

It is not necessary to uproot or fell a tree in order to destroy it. It can be killed by the slower but equally fatal process of girdling its trunk. It is the essence of representative democracy, is it not, that men shall live under fixed laws, framed in plain terms and passed by their representatives freely chosen by popular vote? It means that or nothing. These laws to be just must be specific, clear, and within reason, stable. In a democracy men have a right not only to be heard through their representatives when laws are passed, today, without fear of momentary change, the rules of conduct they are called upon to follow tomorrow.

Not only in America but in other lands as well, recent years have seen the coming of a practice which pays lip service to these doctrine but denies them any effect. Statutes in ever-increasing numbers are passed that purport to declare a policy or outline a purpose or even express a trustful wish that things shall be so and so; and then to the Executive Department is left the making of such rules and regulations, decisions, proclamations, ukases and edicts as in the opinion of the Executive, not of the legislature itself, are appropriate to bring about the desired state of affairs. Parliaments and congresses and legislatures, one and all, sometimes with and sometimes without the poor pretense of debate or deliberation, wash their hands of the responsibility, and deliver the citizen over to be burned by the secular—which is to say the bureaucratic—arm.—Hon. John W. Davis, former Democratic candidate for President.

LABOR TROUBLES

The attempt of union labor to force the "closed shop" policy on the Great Atlantic & Pacific stores in Cleveland resulted in 432 stores being closed, relieving 2,200 workers of employment. The company, having invested its capital in these stores, probably has the old-fashioned idea it ought to be permitted to determine the policy of management. Out in the rural sections of the nation but little is heard concerning open and closed shop policies. Probably because of this fact most people inhabiting these districts favor an open shop policy, believing that most employers of labor are disposed to be fair and will reward their employes according to their ability to produce. Where a dishonest employer is found public sentiment is not long in bringing about a change. Both capital and labor have certain duties to perform, and whenever one fails the public suffers. In these perilous times neither side can afford to be dishonest or unfair, because only through their united efforts will the nation be able to prevent social and economic decay.

ONE WAS A THIEF

Distressed by a distressing tendency, on the part of the public, to condemn the whole electric industry for the offenses of a few individuals, Alex Dow, president of the Detroit Edison Co. recently delivered a characteristically blunt and pungent address before the Pennsylvania Electric Association. Mr. Dow is known and respected throughout the United States as a patriarch among sound electric utility pioneers and leaders. When he speaks, there seldom is any doubt as to just what he means. His Pennsylvania address was no exception as the following excerpts will indicate:

"I could never see the justice in trying to punish a whole industry because of a few individual offenders," said Mr. Dow.

"If we of the electric industry were a church which could require applicants for communion to first prove their good conduct; if we were a club which could refuse to admit all undesirables; if we were the United States Senate, which has been quite finicky at times about the acceptance of some elected members and most illogically indifferent as to the qualifications of others, we might be able to police our own industry. Unfortunately, we have no police power.

"Any skunk with money can go out and buy a few electric properties, organize himself as a corporation, 'skin' these properties for a few years and in the meantime unload the ownership on honest investors. In the past, this was too often the history of the 'butting-in' of an undesirable in our industry. I could name a few persons who have thus 'butted-in' and whose entrance was most emphatically unwelcome to the rest of us. I can name others who, in their way, were creditable members of the industry until they got drunk with power and success and became discredits.

"But, is there any group or organization in business or in politics, or even in religion, in which it cannot be said there are, within the group, a few undesirables?

"It is written that Christ said to his disciples: 'There are twelve of you and one of you is a thief.' One-twelfth is eight and one-third per cent. Does that proportion of undesirables hold good for the electric industry? I believe the percentage is too large. It certainly is too large judged from my own wide acquaintance in the industry. Suppose we apply it to the most eminent legislative body in the country.

"There are ninety-six United States senators. One-twelfth of ninety-six is eight. Without stretching my intellect at all, I can name at least eight senators with whom I do not care to associate on earth or alongside whom I should hate to be buried. Does anyone think it necessary to denounce the United States senate because of the manifest faults of say, one-twelfth of its members?

"I could just as readily name out of my years' experience in the electric industry certain people once active in the industry with whom I have been no more willing to associate than I might be with the eight duly elected gentlemen of the senate whose names I have refrained from listing.

"Does that entitle me to be sour on the whole industry and all the people in it?"

Mr. Dow continued his line of thought with reference to old world ancestors in his own family "with whom" he said, "he would not have wished to be caught dead. Such things do happen even in families." He concluded with a story credited to Dr. Samuel Johnson, to the effect that a lady to whom the doctor paid his addresses, warned him she might not be entirely eligible because one of her relatives had been hung. Mr. Dow said the good Dr. Johnson's response was that "he had never had a relative hung, but he had several who ought to be!"

ANOTHER GOOD REASON

Did you know, asks the Michigan Tuberculosis Association that an estimate made recently places the number of cases of tuberculosis in Michigan at 21,000?

This is an estimate—not all these cases are known, but previous experience has shown that for every death from tuberculosis there exist nine living cases and in Michigan alone last year, 2,348 persons died of this disease.

To repeat—many of these cases are not known—many do not know themselves that they have tuberculosis, yet they must be found, for their own sakes and to help safeguard the lives of those around them.

Since 1931, when the Michigan Tuberculosis Association began its present program of finding cases, Christmas seal money and that of co-operating agencies has financed the tuberculin testing of 56,000 Michigan residents and the x-raying of 12,000. Tuberculin testing and x-raying because this method will find tuberculosis in its early form—when it is most easily treated—more surely than any other.

Twenty-eight thousand school children have asked for these tests next year. They must not be refused and they won't be. Buy Christmas Seals!

ANOTHER FABLE EXPLODED

(By the Christmas Seal Doctor)

"Stuff a cold" and its companion piece, "starve a fever" are two health fallacies usually heard most at this time of year when the first warnings of winter make their presence known throughout Michigan.

A health office prominent in the state recently made public a statement to the effect that this ancient axiom of patent medicine men days is not true and that it most certainly is not good advice.

The Christmas Seal Doctor knows no better advice to give the cold sufferer than to tell him to see his family physician as soon as possible. Colds, nasty, troublesome and most common of all minor afflictions, are not so harmful in themselves, but they lead to serious complications.

One of these is pneumonia, often quick-striking, but like tuberculosis, curable when found early. Pneumonia is not particularly a disease of old persons. Last year it was responsible for almost one-third of the deaths among Michigan's very young—those up to fifteen years of age.

"Stuff a cold?" Old, but untrue, advice. Better—"Got a cold? See your doctor."—Michigan Tuberculosis Association.

HAYES VOTERS REJECT SALE OF HARD LIQUOR

Voting a special ballot at the general election Tuesday, electors of Hayes township defeated by a vote of 114 to 70 a proposal to legalize the sale of spirits for consumption on the premises in Hayes township. Application for license had been sought by owners of The Austin and Shintangle.

GET BETTER PRICES FOR FINER TURKEYS

High Quality Birds Obtained by Correct Feeding and Right Killing

Proper rations for fattening turkeys and correct methods of dressing the birds when they are ready for market are two factors which help increase the prices received by the growers, according to the poultry department at Michigan State College.

A series of meetings has been arranged by the department during early November to tell turkey raisers how to feed the birds to get a good finish and to show how birds should be killed and dressed. Specialist from the college will attend all the meetings.

Liberal amounts of mash and of scratch grains should be used to finish turkeys for market. Milk should be added to the grain ration if any is available. Birds fed in this way have better quality than those fattened on corn alone and the price received should be higher.

Growers should not make the mistake of marketing all their best turkeys before selecting the breeding stock for next year. The practice of keeping the smaller immature birds that are not ready for market is not the best way of building up a good flock.

United States Leads With Big Telescopes

Work is now in progress at Newcastle on a new 36-inch teleacope for Greenwich observatory.

This telescope, it is stated, will be the biggest in use in Britain, but it is much smaller than some of those elsewhere.

In this respect North America leads the world. With the completion recently of the new 60-inch telescope for the Perkins observatory in Delaware, it now has the world's three largest telescopes.

The biggest of all is the 100-inch instrument at the Mount Wilson observatory in California, and the second biggest is 72 inches at the Dominion Astronomical observatory, Victoria, B. C., Canada.

Britain had the earliest of the really big telescopes, a 60-inch specimen, made in 1842. It has now been dismounted, and is at the Science museum at Kensington. It is unlikely that England will have any more telescopes of this size—climatic conditions aren't good enough to justify the expense of making them for a British observatory.—London Answers.

Why Liquid Laxatives Do You No Harm

The dose of a liquid laxative can be measured. The action can thus be regulated to suit individual need. It forms no habit; you need not take a "double dose" a day or two later. Nor will a mild liquid laxative irritate the kidneys.

The right liquid laxative will bring a more natural movement, and with an discomfort at the time, or afterward.

The wrong cathartic may often do more harm than good.

An approved liquid laxative (one which is most widely used for both adults and children) is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, a prescription. It is perfectly safe. Its laxative action is based on senna—a natural laxative. The bowels will not become dependent on this form of help, as they may do in the case of cathartics containing mineral drugs. Ask your druggist for Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

Sabbath Slumber

"How late do you usually sleep Sunday morning?"

"It all depends."

"Depends on what?"

"The length of the sermon."

If you tire easily—

why not reason out the cause of this unnatural condition?

Your first thought may be, "I must eat more." That's not all. You should enjoy what you do eat. Frequently, the blood cells are low... and this, perhaps, is what makes you feel weak. If this is your trouble the stomach may not be calling for sufficient food. Zest to eat may be lacking. But what a difference S.S.S. makes when taken just before meals. Just try it and notice how your appetite and digestion improve.

S.S.S. stimulates the flow of gastric juices and also supplies the precious mineral elements so necessary in blood-cell and hemo-glo-bin up-building. Do try it. It may be the rainbow you need to brush away present discouragement over your health condition.

Do not be blinded by the efforts of a few unethical dealers who may suggest substitutes. You have a right to insist that S.S.S. be supplied you on request. Its long years of preference is your guarantee of satisfaction.

Bird That Directs Lightning

Perhaps it will be news to many to learn that the "hammerkop" is a much-respected bird, and by far the luckiest in Basutoland, for no native will molest it. The reason, according to a firm and widespread belief, is that the "hammerkop" has the power to direct lightning, and so to blast any persecutor. Besides, the natives say it is a very kind-hearted bird—it will not even interfere with a puff-adder. Should a puff-adder enter a "hammerkop's" nest, the birds leave and build another nest notwithstanding the labor involved, letting the snake remain in occupation. —Montreal Herald.

Treaty May Be Sent to Wallace

Wrathful over the recent statement of Secretary of Agriculture Wallace that Hawaii is not an integral part of the United States, citizens of that territory are considering sending for his inspection the carefully guarded treaty of June 16, 1897, which ceded the then republic to the United States. Withdrawn from the darkened vault in Honolulu where it is protected against the ravages of light and time, the document is shown being inspected by Lorrin P. Thurston, whose father was the original signer on behalf of Hawaii (right), and Edmund Hart, keeper of the territorial archives.

Lindy's Cottage on Long Island

This cottage on the Daniel Guggenheim estate at Sands Point, Long Island, is said to have been fitted up for occupancy by Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh and their baby son. The house is located seven miles from Roosevelt field, and it adjoins the Astor estate on which there is a flying field. It also fronts on Long Island sound, whereon seaplanes and amphibians can land.

Justice Is Cockeyed

"What terrible crime has this man committed?"

"He has done nothing. He was merely an innocent bystander when Tough Jim tried to kill a man, and we are holding him as witness."

"And where's Tough Jim?"

"He's out on bail."

An Established Name

A friend asked a merchant why he had changed his name to Montague.

"Because," said Mr. Montague, "it is so old and so firmly established in history."

"What was your name before?" asked the friend.

"Moses."—Pearson's Weekly.

NOT YET DISTURBED

"They are asking how you got your money," said the friend.

"That's all right," answered Senator Sorghum. "It will be time enough to worry when they begin to figure on how to get it away from me."

Wrong Party

Stranger—I'm a farmer.

Broker—Oh, we have no good farms for farmers! I thought you were a city chap.—Montreal Star.

And a Careless One

She—Sure, go ahead.

He—Take away my first letter, take away my second letter, take away all my letters, and I am still the same. What am I?

Practical Enforcement

"What's the idea of going down the street at 10 o'clock each night and shooting out the lights?" asked the traveling salesman.

"Crimson Gulch has a curfew law," answered Cactus Joe, "and as respectable citizens are going to see that it's obeyed."

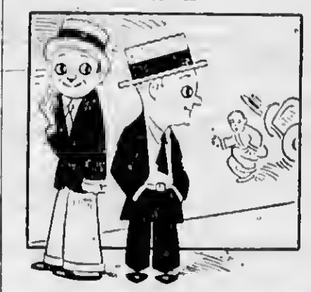
The Injustice of It

All through dinner Percy sat so silent that his parents at last began to wonder what was troubling him. "Pa," he said at last, "do school teachers get paid?"

"Of course they do, sonny," replied father.

"Then it's not fair," burst out the small boy, indignantly. "Why should the teachers get paid when us kids do all the work?"

GRAVE ERROR



"Brown doesn't seem to manage so well as a pedestrian. I thought he owned a car."

"He does, but he made the mistake of teaching his wife and daughter to drive."

Neck-and-Neck Contest

"I don't know what to give my father for his birthday. Sometimes the idea to give him a shirt wins out, then the thought of a cigarette case seems to be the choice."

"How will it end?"

"Oh, I suppose it will be a tie."

Useless Discussion

"Which do you prefer, money or brains?"

"There's no use to bother about making a choice," answered Miss Cayenne. "A person is uncommonly lucky not to find himself without either."

Honor

"Mrs. Bumble," said the bank cashier, "your account is overdrawn $12.29."

"Dear me!" exclaimed Mrs. Bumble. "I'll attend to it right away."

As good as her word, she straightway wrote and mailed to the bank a check for $12.29.

Time Limit Expired

Customer—You said the tortoise I bought from you would live 200 years, and it died the day after I bought it.

Shopkeeper—Now, isn't that too bad! The 200 years must have been up.

Cause for Murder

Traveler—What do you do, my good man?

Announcer—I call trains.

Traveler—Well, call me one; I'm in a hurry.

Here's Slip That Has "Everything"

PATTERN 1807

There are only a few things that we can count on in this funny old world, but one of them is that no woman ever really has enough slips. She just gets all set when along comes a new frock and the whole business has to be done over again. With this pattern she is prepared for any emergency. It is no trouble to make, fits beautifully, and it is shadow-proof—just about all any dress can ask of the slip which goes under it. It is nice in white and simply grand in a color to go under transparent dresses.

Pattern 1897 is available in sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 36 takes 3¼ yards 39-inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly name, address and style number, BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.

BAD BUSINESS

Charitable Lady—Here, my poor fellow, is a quarter for you. It must be terrible to be lame, but I think it must be worse to be blind.

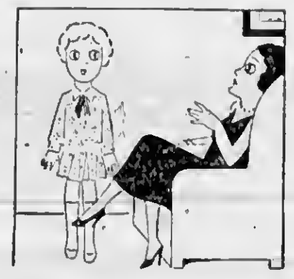
The Young Mind

"Mother, is grandma grandpa's wife?" asked little Edith.

"Yes, of course," answered the mother.

A few minutes elapsed and the child said: "Why did he marry such an old woman?"

INFORMATION QUEST



"Ma."

"What is it, Susie?"

"Is a sweet tooth a tooth from a honey comb?"

Yes, Daddy Followed

"Did your wife's father follow you when you eloped?"

"I should say so; he's flying with us yet."

Fortunate

Poet—Darling, I love you more than words can tell.

She—Good. I was afraid you were going to write another poem for me.

MANY EXHIBITS AT GAYLORD EXHIBITION

Secretary Avers Displays Promise to Exceed Former Years

The Top O' Michigan Potato, Apple, and Seed Show to be held at Gaylord on November 6th, 7th, and 8th promises to be the outstanding show of its kind to the state. Indications point to a large display of fine quality potatoes, apples, and alfalfa seed. Favorable weather conditions during the harvesting season have made it possible for farmers in the show district to select exceptional exhibits from their fine crops of potatoes and apples. The number of alfalfa seed entries is not expected to be as large as in previous years as weather conditions in general were not favorable for alfalfa seed production. However the seed which was produced is of exceptionally good quality.

Exhibitors are asked to bear in mind that the show is to be held on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday this year. No entries will be made after 7:00 p. m. on Monday, November 5th.

A complete outline of the interesting program which has been arranged can be found in an advertisement appearing elsewhere in this issue.

DISTRICT HEALTH UNIT BULLETIN

Obligation of the Community to the Infant and Preschool Child

The statistics for 1930 show that more than 3,500 babies die in Michigan before they have completed their first month of life. The average number of deaths of infants under one year of age for each 1000 births in Michigan for the year 1930 was 63. This statement indicates that for every 1000 children born during 1930 in this state, 63 of them died during the first year of life.

England showed us what it was possible to do toward actually reducing the infant mortality rate by reducing its rate greatly during the world war period. This was accomplished by providing for the compulsory notification of births within 36 hours, government aid for local maternity and infant welfare, and for publicity explaining the government plan with its details for antenatal, natal and postnatal work.

The duty of our own communities is set forth by the Children's Bureau in the following set of standards for child welfare relating to infants and pre-school children:

1. Complete birth registration by adequate legislation requiring reporting within three days after birth.

2. Preventing infantile blindness by making and enforcing adequate laws for treatment of eyes for every infant at birth and supervision of all positive cases.

3. Sufficient number of children's health centers to give health instruction under medical supervision for all infants and children not under the care of a private physician, and to give instruction in breast feeding and in care and feeding of children to mothers, at least once a month throughout the first year, and at regular intervals throughout preschool age. This center to include a nutrition and dental clinic.

4. Children's health center to provide or to cooperate with sufficient number of public health nurses to make home visits to all infants and children of preschool age needing care—one public health nurse for average general population of 2,000. Visits to the home are for the purpose of instructing the mother in: (a) value of breast feeding; (b) technic of nursing; (c) technic of bath, sleep, clothing, ventilation, and general care of the baby, with demonstrations; (d) preparation and technic of artificial feeding; (e) dietary essentials and selection of food for the infant and for older children; (f) prevention of disease in children.

5. Dental clinics; eye, ear, nose and throat clinics; venereal and other clinics for the treatment of defects and disease.

6. Children's hospitals, or beds in general hospitals, or provision for medical and nursing care at home, sufficient to care for all sick infants and young children.

7. State licensing and supervision of child-caring institutions or homes in which infants or young children are cared for.

8. General educational work in prevention of communicable disease and in hygiene and feeding of infants and young children.

Doctor Told This Lady How to Safely

Reduce FAT

Mrs. Helen Greene writes: "A physician advised my mother to take Kruschen Salts for overweight so I immediately started taking it myself. I weighed 192 and after taking 3 bottles I now weigh 165 and never felt so well. It's a tonic as well as reducer."

Reduce safely and sensibly by taking one half level teaspoonful of Kruschen in hot water every morning—you'll be overjoyed with your improved health and slender, stylish figure. One bottle lasts 4 weeks. You can get Kruschen Salts at Central Drug Store or any drug store in the world.

SAVE ORCHARD TREES BY POISONING MICE

Rodents Can Be Killed With Baits Made at Low Cost

Now is the time to apply control methods and prevent winter injury by mice in orchards, says G. C. Oderkirk, U. S. Biological Survey.

A bait such as steam crushed oats, rolled oats, wheat, cracked corn, or sliced sweet potatoes, properly treated with strychnine poison is taken readily by mice. One application of bait in an orchard now and another treatment within three or four weeks will greatly reduce the infestation of these pests. In distributing the bait, place teaspoonful quantities in holes and along mouse runways that are found under matted grass, Oderkirk advises.

The small home orchard frequently suffers severe injury by mice through lack of attention at this time of the year. Stripping the sod for a distance of three or four feet from the base of trees is helpful in preventing injury by mice, but, when there are large numbers of these pests present, strychnine treated grain bait applied throughout the orchard will give the best protection, he says.

SUNDAY DINNER SUGGESTIONS

By Ann Page

Grapefruit and new crop Florida oranges are the outstanding features of this week's market. Both are inexpensive, though grapefruit are relatively cheaper than oranges because their season is further advanced.

Butter is expected to go higher though eggs are not. Beef and pork are generally a little lower and lamb is a little higher but not enough to put it out of reach of the smaller budget.

The vegetable picture continues about as it has been with only slight increases in the price of certain items such as string beans and cucumbers.

The following menus are made up from the latest market news available.

Low Cost Dinner

Braised Veal Potatoes
Buttered Carrots
Bread and Butter
Vanilla Pudding with Preserves
Tea or Coffee Milk

Medium Cost Dinner

Roast Pork Baked Sweet Potatoes
Creamed Spinach
Bread and Butter
Baked Apples with Mincemeat Filling
Tea or Coffee Milk

Very Special Dinner

Tomato Juice Cocktail
Roast Lamb Scalloped Potatoes
Carrots and Peas
Pear and Grape Salad

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCH

205 Clinton Street

Sunday morning service, 10:45.

First Wednesday of month, 7:45 p. m.

Reading room Tuesdays and Saturdays, 3 to 5 p. m.

We cordially invite the public to our services and reading room.

"Adam and Fallen Man" will be the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Christian Science churches throughout the world on Sunday, November 11th.

Among the Bible citations is this passage (Romans 8:1): "There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit."

Correlative passages to be read from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, include the following (p. 249): "Let us feel the divine energy of Spirit, bringing us into newness of life and recognizing no mortal nor material power as able to destroy. Let us rejoice that we are subject to the divine 'powers that be.' Such is the true Science of being."

Those millions of dollars promised Michigan on the political Christmas tree will be just grand if some careless brute don't get too near Santa Claus with a lighted candle.

DON'T GET UP NIGHTS

IF YOU ARE OVER 40.

If so, nature is warning you of danger ahead. Get rid of your trouble early. Make this 25c test. Get Juniper oil, Buchu leaves, etc., in green tablets. Ask for BUCKETS, the bladder laxative. Take 12 of them in four days; if not pleased go back and get your money. BUCKETS work on the bladder similar to castor oil on the bowels. Flushes out excess acids and other impurities which cause getting up nights, frequent desire, scanty flow, burning, backache or leg pains. You are bound to feel better after this flushing and you get your regular sleep. Guaranteed by F. J. Fessenden, Druggist, Charlevoix; F. K. Gerrie, Druggist, Boyne City.

FRESHENING BREEZES

Change this sentence: "I got my corn and hog check but I am going to vote the same old Republican ticket."

Press reports tell of 1500 coal miners going insane because of labor troubles. It's getting almost as hard to mine the stuff as it is to buy it.

Ye olde tyme country editor who painstakingly told us along about this season of the year how many days were remaining before Christmas now has a successor who only has to compute as far as election day.

The old-fashioned farmer who took his trials and tribulations to the Lord in prayer now has a descendant who thinks nothing of unloading his miseries on Washington by petition.

A Russian scientist claims to have restored life to a dead dog. If it wasn't for the treaty Franklin made with the Soviets we'd say that was a dirty trick to play on the canine.

Of course the wife is worth a fifty-thousand-dollar ransom, but we know a lot of depression victims who'd have to leave the old girl to her fate if it came to a showdown.

A hick town is probably that spot along the highway where the bride still insists on having a church wedding.

What has become of the old-fashioned patriot who used to boast that every American was a king in his own right.

A pioneer is a fellow who can remember back when the family offspring considered themselves lucky if they got to ride to church on Sunday morn.

Our slogan: "Treat the Tourist Right." But we shouldn't be expected to knock off a cent a gallon on his gas tax just to make good fellows of ourselves. They don't use us that way in his state.

"Sehr Gut" that beer from the little German town!

IF Old Frankenmuth Gold Medal Beer were served in the beer-halls of Berlin or Hamburg, Germany, the customers would say, "Sehr Gut!" (Very good!)

How do we know? German citizens have told us!

Frankenmuth, Michigan, is an all-German town—famous all over the state for its cooking and brewing. You can now buy the famous beer of the Old Frankenmuth Brewery right here—on draft or in bottles.

It's different. Somehow, Old Frankenmuth Gold Medal Beer has the touch of the German-born brewer. It's the "real thing."

DOLLAR DAY PROGRAM A SUCCESS

PROGRAM SATURDAY CARRIED THROUGH SMOOTHLY

Large Crowd on Hand for Barbecue and Eatertainment Events. Arranged for Afternoon

(By F. V. Tyler)

Perfect weather favored the Dollar Day activities last Saturday, and the bracing keenness of the air contributed largely to the relish with which enormous qaantities of barbecue sandwiches were consumed by the lurge and enthusiastic crowd, assembled from the countryside and neighboring towns.

Street sports started off the program at 1 p. m., under the supervision of Joseph Foster and Herman Meyers and at 2:15 p. m. the greased pig, mounted on a truck, preceded a parade of embryo football players dressed in uniform and led hy the city band. The parade proceeded to the football field, where the pig was released on the field during the intermission between the halves of the game between Charlevoix and Rogers City high school teams, a game which, by the way, resulted in a score of 39 to 6 in Charlevox's favor. The well lubricated porker had a fair chance of escape until he got himself bottled up in a corner and tried to stick his nose through the fence, when Ted Bergman pounced on him and held on until the officials came to his aid. Several free shows at the Palace Theater, by courtesy of Mrs. Elizabeth Moon, proprietor, were thronged by the youngsters and older people and hugely enjoyed.

At 1:30, Legionnaires in charge of the barbecue started to serve and kept passing out sandwiches and coffee continuously until after three o'clock when the meat ran out. The vacant lot hack of the Courier office, on Clinton street, kindly donated for the purpose by A. J. Usher, was prepared Thursday afternoon for the roasting of the beef and Friday morning saw preparations well under way with E. H. Boss of Atwood, master barbecuer, in charge. The "beef critter," an animal weighing nearly 700 pounds when dressed, was roasted on an improvised spit over a charcoal fire from 9:00 a. m. Friday until early Saturday morning. Much credit is due Mr. Boss and his assistants, Jake Ypma nnd Harrison Trimble, for the delicious quality of the roasted meat. Replenishing of the fire and frequent basting of the meat wns necessary nll day Friday and Messrs. Boss and Ypma were on duty all Friday night, taking turns at a few winks in an improvised shack erected on the lot.

Throagh the kindness of Charles Lamphear, manager of the Northern Creamery, and his assistants, the barbecue workers were kept supplied throughout the day and night, with plenty of hot water. Snow-fence to enclose the lot and trucks for hauling the materials to the scene of action were furnished by the city. Some of the bread was donated by the A. & P. T. Company and the coffee and some of the mustard for the sandwiches by the Kroger Company, in addition to liberal cash donatioos. Nearly all of the city's merchants and professional men contributed to the Dollar Day fund used to meet the expenses of the affair. Last, but not least, members of Leslie T. Shapton Post, American Legion, donated their services to handle the work of preparing and distributing the food. The fine order and efficiency displayed in feeding so large a crowd was in striking contrast to the regrettable "free-for-all" scramble that marked the barbecue of last year, when not much was known about barbecues here nor how they should be handled. Those in charge last Saturday profited well by their previous experience.

The merchants, for whose benefit the affair was staged, and the people who enjoyed it seem to have been very well pleased with the results of the Dollar Day venture and there is considerable sentiment in the direction of making it an annual affair. From now on, the amount of provisions and other materials necessary should be easy to estimate and the necessary appuratus, instead of having to be gathered together at the last minute from hither and yon, can be constructed and kept on hand for immediate use, provided Dollar Day is made a regular institution of the fall season. As respects the character of the weather to be expected, it should possibly be held somewhat earlier in the fall than it was this year.

TAXES COLECTED ON REFRIGERATORS SHOW LARGE GAIN

Unmistakable evidence of the rapidly increasing use of electric refrigeration in the home, says J. A. Davison, head of Davison Electric, local General Electric dealers, is the report of the U. S. Treasury Department showing that manufacturers of mechanical refrigerators paid the government $5,525,912.94 in excise taxes during the year ending June 30, 1934. This sum, Mr. Davison points oat, is about two and one-half times greater than $2,111,868.76 the manufacturers paid during the fiscal year 1933. The tax imposed on sales in both the refrigerator and radio fields is eqaivalent to 5 per cent of the wholesale price.

"It is interesting to note," said Mr. Davison, "that while excise revenues from the refrigeration industry were 5 per cent below those derived from radio products in 1933, refrigeration assessments topped those from radio equipment by 75 per cent during the fiscal year 1934."

"The government report checks with our experience here in northern Michigan as G-E refrigerator sales are far in excess of a year ago."

LEGION ACTIVITIES
By F. V. Tyler

Residents of the north side may calm their fears when the fusilading starts Sunday at Mount McSauba. It will not be Public Enemy No. 1 battling with his pursuers nor rival gangsters shooting it out, but merely the Legion's Armistice Day turkey shoot. The contest starts at 1 p. m. and offers to local deer hunters an excellent chance to test their skill. Those in the high-powered class will have to bring their own rifles and ammunition while those who have no weapons will be furnished with .22 culibre rifles and ammunition at so much a string. Fine chance to bag a gobbler for Thanksgiving.

One of our popular bachelor members took the "fatal" leap recently and he and his bride enjoyed the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Shirley B. Henry at their home on Norwood Road, last Saturday evening. About 10 couples of Legionnaires and Auxiliares gathered round the eard tables and later the festive board and all enjoyed a delightful entertainment. The happy pair were the recipients of many useful and attractive gifts. Comrade Richard Paul Kullander und Mrs. Kullander will shortly he at home to their friends at the Eldridge home on U. S. 31, just south of town, which they have secured for the winter months. Mrs. Kullander was formerly Miss Alma Wilkes of Bellaire.

The Charlevoix County Veterans Council convened at Boyne City last Thursday evening, and elected officers for the ensuing year. Shirley B. Henry, Joseph Bugai and F. V. Tyler, the present county commander, senior vice-commander and adjutant respectively, were re-elected to office; Councilman Lloyd Ballard of Boyne City was elected junior vice-commander and Councilman Verne Whiteford of East Jordan was elected county treasurer. Several matters of membership, welfare eases and plans for raising money were discussed and a new insignia and letter-head was adopted for the use of the council.

Leslie T. Shapton Post is about to dig itself in for the winter—in other words, repair to the "dug-out." Post members who recall how comfortable we all were last winter down cellar will look forard with anticipation to the change.

LEGION AUXILIARY ACTIVITIES
By Gladys Heary

The Ladies Auxiliary of the American Legion held their regular monthly meeting at the Legion Home last Monday evening with the new president presiding.

One new member was initiated and plans made for social events during the coming winter. Our new president is giving a prize to the member that draws the lucky number each regular meeting night. Leila Allard won the first prize.

Our social meeting will be held at the home of Leila Goss, November 19th. All members invited and the password is, "wear your husband's pants."

HUNTING CAUSES 10 DEATHS FIRST WEEK

Seveateen Wounded Included in Lower Peainsula Report

Ten dead and 17 injured! That was the hunting toll during the first week of the upland season in the lower peninsula of Michigan. And carelessness was responsible for almost every accident, according to records of the Department of Conservation.

Of the 17 wounded hunters, 13 were aceidentally shot by companions. The remainder suffered injuries from a gun in their own hands. Three were expected to lose the sight of one eye, one suffered the loss of a foot and another a finger. One hunter had 41 shots removed from his body. An unidentified nimrod fired at him twice and then fled into the woods.

The first week of open season also had its share of freak accidents. A Detroit hunter wounded himself in both feet when he shot at a rubbit which, according to accounts, tried to climb his pants leg. A second hanter was mistaken for a squirrel and a third for a woodcock.

CORESPONDENCE

SOUTH BARNARD

Mr. and Mrs. John Boss and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Boss have returned from Chicago where they spent several days visiting friends and A Century of Progress. They report a very enjoyable and interesting vacation.

Several young people from the "little white church on the hill" are planning on attending the Youth Fellowship rally to be held in Muskegon Wednesday evening of this week. Dr. John Van Ess, missionary from Arabia and internationally known Semitic scholar, and Dr. Bernie Mulder, minister of the Bethel Reformed church in Grand Rapids, Mich., are to be speakers for this occasion.

Catechism classes for the children will be resumed at the church Saturday afternoon at two o'clock. All children are cordially invited to attend these classes.

The Rev. Isaac Scherpenisse, minister of the South Barnard church, has returned from a motor trip to the East. It was a beautiful time of the year to travel—the weather ideal, the mountains bedecked in their fall colors, and the large streams winding their way through the valleys. When one can get gas for a little less than ten cents a gallon, tax included, as was the case in New Jersey, motoring is very cheap.

What a study in contrasts one gets when he visits in succession places like Chinatown, a great cathedral, and the "News" building—all in New York City—as the writer did. How true the saying: "One-half of the world does not know how the other half lives." The densely populated metropolis makes one thankful for the open spaces of the country. One does not appreciate what blessings he has until he sees how people live in other parts of the world.

CHARLEVOIX COURIER

VOLUME 39. NUMBER 46. EIGHT PAGES THE CHARLEVOIX COURIER, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 14, 1934. PRICE $2.00 PER YEAR

1934 DEER SEASON OPENING THURSDAY

ARMY OF 60,000 HUNTERS EXPECTED IN WOODS

Charlevoix's Delegation Larger Than Other Years—No Changes in Laws This Season

The 1934 deer season opens tomorrow morning and an army expected to total 60,000 red-coated hunters will spread through the north woods for Michigan's big-game.

Weather conditions are expected to be ideal. Snow has fallen in both the lower and upper peninsula the early days of this week, much to the delight of the hunters. So far last srason's sub-zero temperatures have been absent.

No changes have been made in the hunting regulations for this year. The license fee is $2.25, hunting period from November 15 to 30, inclusive. The kill is limited to one male deer with antlers at least three inches above the scalp. In addition to one buck the hunter is also privileged to kill one black bear. The entire upper peninsula and fifteen lower peninsula counties are open to hunting.

Charlevoix will have its usual quota of hunters in the woods. Local parties and their location are as follows:

Frank F. Bird, Frank Courier, Floyd Brown, Ted Coblentz of Charlevoix, Kit Carson of East Jordan, and H. G. Bird of Traverse City, are on the Little Two Heart north of Newberry.

Albert Staley and H. Nickerson, this city; Sterling Nickerson and Leon Barrett of Kingsley, located near Lake Gogebic in Ontonagon county. Keith Nickerson will join them.

Charles and Will Heise, Clarence Mcggison this city, also Jerry G. and Lester Bedell and Frank Becker of Flint, located near Trout Lake. In the same location are Sam Schantz and Edward Heise, also the former's nephew from Lansing.

Hunting north of Manistique are the Novotny party, Albert Sr., Albert Jr., Jeff; Frank and Charles.

Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Fitch, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Humilton and Mr. and Mrs. George Huggard are camping northwest of Atlanta.

In the Black river district are Milton Black and C. H. Sternberg, this city, the latter's brother, Albert Sternberg and Oscar Peterson of Ulby. The Bergman boys are also located in this district.

Mr. and Mrs. Amos O'Neil have gone to Dog lake in Cheboygan county. Hunting there also are Earl Shapton and son, Warren and a party of several others.

Glenroy Ikens, Harry Gregory and Gene Bearss have gone to the Porcupine Mountain district in Ontonagon county.

Mr. and Mrs. Herb Wilson and Mr. and Mrs. Milo Todd are hunting near Ralph, north of Manistique. John Stephens and a group of other local men are located there also.

Many other parties are scattered throughout the eastern deer cover, some for the season and others for a few days.

ALL AMENDMENTS APPARENTLY DEFEATED

Charlevoix County Turns All Six Proposals Down at Election

Michigan has apparently decisively defeated all six of the proposed amendments to the constitution on the ballot at last Tuesday's election.

With slightly more than 3,000 of the state's 3,451 precincts reported the voters had overwhelmed the amendments in a flood of "No" votes. Missing precincts are in scattered counties believed to have opposed the amendments.

Following is the complete Charlevoix county vote:

No. 1.—Non-political judges Yes 1247; No 2471.

No. 2 Reducing gas Yes 607; No 3151.

No. 3—Fixing weight tax Yes 701; No 2918.

No. 4—County Home Rule Yes 808; No 2741.

No 5—Income tax Yes 1117; No 2379.

No 6—Jurisdiction of Justices Yes 136; No 2987.

TWO YOUTHS, 12, HELD FOR SERIES OF THEFTS

Entered The Inn, Hallett's Inn and Responsible for Burnham Fire

Two 12-year-old local youths are being held in jail for hearing Friday following confession to breaking and entering several local places and responsibility for a fire early Tuesday morning.

The youths, apprehended by Deputy Joe Moore and Police Officer Clarence Heise, have admitted entering Hallett's Inn, The Inn hotel and the caddy house at the Charlevoix Golf Club. Articles taken have been recovered. Traverse City state police worked with local officers on the case.

The lads admitted responsibility for a fire which destroyed a barn on the Burnham property in the Chicago Club grounds early Tuesday morning. They built a small fire in the structure Monday afternoon, but told officers they carried water from Round lake to extinguish the flames before leaving. The fire broke out in the night and destroyed the building.

TED MILLER GETS 4 TO 7 YEAR TERM

SENTENCED TO IONIA FRIDAY BY JUDGE GILBERT

Stanley Smigel and Marshall Tillotson Get 7 to 15 Years for Breaking and Entering

Teddy Miller, who confessed holding up the Charlevoix State Savings bank September 15th and the Kuhler & Friend oil station on October 2nd, was sentenced Friday by Judge Parm C. Gilbert to serve from 4 to 7 years at Ionia state reformatory.

The sentence carried a stipulation that Miller be transferred to a prison recovery camp if such institution is established during his term. Sentence was deferred Thursday while officers investigated Miller's allegations that another local youth was implicated in the planning but not the execution of his crimes. Two youths questioned Friday by officers denied the charge and were released after questioning.

The Weiss vs. McMillan damage suit, which occupied two days of the present term was brought to a close with a jury verdict of no cause for action. On a previous occasion, the case was thrown out when a jury failed to agree on a verdict, later to be replaced on the docket for retrial.

Stanley Smigel, 23, Middletown, Conn., who traveled under numerous aliases and has a criminal record in a half dozen states, was sentenced to serve from seven to 15 years in Jackson prison for breaking and entering. Smigel, when arraigned, admitted the Klooster & Co. store robbery at Atwood, thefts at Elk Rapids and entering the Glenn See cottage near Norwood.

Marshall Tillotson of Antrim county, was sentenced to a like term for similar offenses. He pleaded guilty to the robbery of five cottages, two private garages and to stripping several cars and robbing several gas stations.

All together, Smigel and Tillotson, working independently, were responsible for the robbery of 23 cottages and two stores and garages.

RED CROSS DRIVE IS NOW UNDER WAY

ANNUAL ROLL CALL STARTED ARMISTICE DAY

Local Campaign to Be Concentrated Prior to Thanksgiving—Public Support Is Urged

Starting on Armistice Day the annual Red Cross Roll Call was inaugurated in Charlevoix county with Chapter offirers and directors in charge of the campaign.

Rev. James Leitch of East Jordan, is county Chapter chairman as well as Roll Call chairman. Other county officers are: Vice-chairman, Mrs. Frank Marshall, Boyne City; secretary, Mrs. Robert Campbell, East Jordan; treasurer, C. B. Meggison, Charlevoix. Directors who will be in charge of the campaign in the Charlevoix district are: Mrs. Earl Pusblow, Norwood township; Ralph Price, Ironton; Mrs. George Meggison, Marion township; Mrs. Andrew Struthers, Hayes township; Mrs. Lotta Coulter, Charlevoix township; Mrs. James H. Gallagher, Beaver Island.

While last year's efforts were satisfactory, it is hoped that improved financial conditions this year will result in increased support. The drive in Charlevoix will be concentrated during the final days before the campaign comes to a close on Thanksgiving Day, November 29th. As usual there will be the general solicitation for memberships as well as personal canvass. A booth will be established in the office of the Charlevoix Insurance Agency to receive memberships on the final days of the drive. Those desiring to secure membership prior to that time may contact Mrs. Adah Beeman, 102 Park avenue.

Speaking of the Red Cross work in this county, Rev. James Leitch stated: "Manned almost entirely by volunteers, the organization's 3,700 chapters form a bulwark of hope and safety for distressed citizens everywhere. The Red Cross is no stranger in this community. Locally, it has rendered an indispensable service during the depression and must go on."

Mrs. Adah Beeman, speaking of the local chapter during the past year, stated that no less than 1,000 garments were issued and 900 yards of goods distributed to the needy in the Charlevoix district, including the Beaver Island group. This is only a small part of the county program, but gives an insight into the work of the organization as a whole.

Since all the activities are made possible by individual support, it is to be hoped that the local citizenship will respond quickly and graciously during the campaign.

SEWAGE DISPOSAL CONTRACT AWARDED

COUNCIL TOOK OFFICIAL ACTION MONDAY NIGHT

Lansing Firm Low Bidder—Expect Work Will Be Started in Approximately Ten Days

Acting at a regular session Monday evening, the city council awarded the contract for construction of the Charlevoix sewage disposal system. Earlier expectations were that the action would be taken last Wednesday evening, but due to technicalities it was delayed.

The low bidders were the H. G. Christman-Lansing Company of Lansing, Mich., awarded contracts for Division A—Sewers, at the sum of $8,866.00; Division B — Sewage treatment plants at $46,175.00; Division E, Item E-2—river crossing construction work at $6,650.00. The total amount of the aggregate divisions of construction was $61,691.00, from which are deductions totalling $1,510.00 allowed by the bidders for combination awards in two instances.

The city council withheld the awarding of contracts on certain items under Division A until such a time as further funds are available from the PWA through a supplementary loan and grant for which application has been made and aproval is now pending.

Officials of the Lansing engineering firm were here Tuesday going over details of construction and arranging for the commencement of work. The contract calls for the start of construction immediately following PWA approval of the contract. Federal inspectors will be sent here to supervise the work. It is anticipated approximately 10 days will elapse before final approval is received.

A $10,000 payroll was approved Monday evening. Included in the items met were retirement of local improvement bonds, $5,125 of bridge refunding bonds and interest and purchase of necessary steel for the new municipal dock now under construction.

COUNTY GROWERS WIN AT GAYLORD

CHARLEVOIX COUNTY EXHIBITS ARE OUTSTANDING

Lee Sneathen Most Prominent Potato Winner; Smith-Hughes, 4-H Clubs Take Blue Ribbon

(By B. C. Mellencamp)

The 11th Annual Top O' Michigan Potato, Apple and Seed Show came to a successful conclusion last Thursday. After not having held the 1933 show there was a lot of interest and enthusiasm in this year's exhibition. While the entries were not as large as previous years, the quality was of the usual high standard and the premiums awarded were nicely divided among the various counties.

Emmt county walked away with the first place in the county exhibit which is a collection of 10 pecks shown by different exhibitors and with first and second in the open class. Mr. Overholt of Levering, had the sweepstakes peck in the entire show and Ray Eppler of Petoskey was second. In Charlevoix county, Sneathen Bros. Charlevoix, won fourth followed by Lee Sneathen in sixth place, Albert Omland, East Jordan, eighth place and Rollie Williams, thirteenth. In the Katahdin class, Elmer Hott, East Jordan, won fourth and in Any Other Variety of Merit class, Henry Korthase, Boyne City and Ed. Kowalski, East Jordan, won second and third in Russet Burbanks. In Irish Cobblers, Harry Behling, Boyne City won second. In the County Exhibit class, Charlevoix county came in second after Emmet county.

Lee Sneathen of Charlevoix showed a real exhibit when his bushel of certified seed won first in the show. He had a most wonderful display and was easily the class of the show. In this department, Frank Behling, Boyne City, won second on a bushel of Irish Cobblers as well as fourth on a bushel of Katahdins.

In the junior department, Charlevoix county walked off with all of the major honors. In the first place, a peck sample shown by Gwendon Hott, of East Jordan, was adorned with the sweepstakes award. It certainly was an outstanding exhibit and merited this high position. The East Jordan 4-H Potato Club duplicated their winnings of last year by again securing first place in this competition. Within the club Einer Olstrom won first followed by Wilbur McDonald and Howard McDonald. Not to be outdone, in the Smith-Hughes exhibit, the East Jordan consolidated schools won first, followed by the Boyne Falls agricultural school in second place. Within the Smith-Hughes exhibit, Ernest Rude won first followed by Frank Cihak and Gardelle Nice. In the Boyne Falls group, first place went to Fred Korthase, followed by Ida Lange and Joe Organic.

In the Open Competition in which all junior samples were in competition, first place was won by Gwendon Hott, fourth place by Einer Olstrom, fifth by Ernest Rude, sixth by Robert Reidel and tenth by Wilbur McDonald. In Any Other Variety, Fred Korthase, Boyne City, won first on a sample of Russet Burbanks with Joe Organic in fourth place.

When it came to apples, Charlevoix county was indeed fortunate in having two outstanding exhibitors D. D Tibbits, Boyne City, duplicated his performance of last year when he was the outstanding exhibitor in the apple department. His winnings included two firsts, two seconds, one third and one fourth in plates of apples. In trays, he had three firsts, one second and two thirds. In bu-

The Misses Jennie and Esther Klooster, Martin Bottema, and Oscar Boss report a very interesting, instructive, and enjoyable visit in the southern part of the state. The Youth Fellowship conference in Muskegon at which Dr. John Van Ess from Arabia was the main speaker, proved to be most enlightening. Dr. Van Ess gave a very vivid picture of the appalling conditions of hunger in the far east, where muny people have never known and never will know what it is to have a full stomach. He told of children leaving their homes at night and coming to the school grounds to play in the swings in order that they might forget their hunger and the cold. With the temperature thirty degrees above zero, which Dr. Van Ess says is equivalent to twenty degrees below here, these children came to the school grounds without shoes und stockings. As the Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays approach, may we be vitally concerned about those who are in want for the necessities of life. Can we not put something aside for them. While in the southern part of the state, the above young people made a rapid tour of the furniture city. This proved to be a very interesting feature of the trip, and especially with a good chauffeur to guide one, as Esther would say.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Brock and their two children, Harry and Lizzie, are planning on taking a trip to Detroit this week. They expect to be gone for a few days visiting with their sons Hiram, John and Maynard Brock.

DEER HIDES WANTED MAKING BUCKSKINS

Relief Administration Asks Hunters for Deer Hides This Year

Buckskin moccasins and jackets, reminiscent of pioneer Michigan, are coming back into their own.

If sportsmen respond to the plans of the Michigan State Emergency Relief Administration somewhere between 10,000 and 15,000 deer hides will be converted to buckskin clothes during the coming winter.

Pink slips asking for the skins of their bucks are now being circulated through Michigan's army of 85,000 prospective deer hunters by the Relief Administration.

The skins will be shipped to a tannery at Iron Mountain operated by members of a self-help co-operative organization. They will be tanned and made into moccasins, gloves, jackets and other articles of clothing to be bartered and sold to relieve the unemployed.

The Department of Conservation, which is co-operating with the Relief Administration in urging hunters to turn their deer skins in to relief for the unemployed, believes that few hunters use the skin of the buck they have killed. Those hunters willing to co-operate are asked to take or send the skin to their county emergency relief administrator. He will send the skins to the Iron Mountain tannery.

Skins of confiscated deer and of does killed illegally will be turned over by the Department of Conservation to the relief organization.

It may be good for us. An experience in hot water makes the prune expand and grow tender.

European Thieves Go In for Large Scale Thefts

A man brought up at Chester assizes for stealing luggage was charged with no fewer than 77 different thefts, all committed since he had last come out of prison about eight months earlier. The value of the stolen goods was put at £1,500.

"This is by no means a record." Recently a German named Peter Flink, who was sentenced at Cologne to eight years' penal servitude confessed to 435 separate thefts in one year, the value of the goods being £3,460.

In Paris a man named Foerschler was arrested and charged with three burglaries. He burst out laughing.

"Three burglaries. I have broken into 250 houses since my last birthday," he said, and by all accounts this boast seems to have been a true one.

Another Frenchman, Joseph Chicot, was a thief for five years before he was detected.

"I have committed a burglary almost every night for the past five years, except on Saturdays," Chicot said when arrested.

He had kept a diary with a careful record of some 1,500 crimes. The value of the stolen goods was noted in every case, and the total exceeded £20,000 (close to $100,000), according to Pearson's Weekly, London.

Wraps of White Velvet in New Lines

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

AGAIN velvet as medium for the formal wrap reigns supreme. The latest gesture in high fashion circles is white velvet for evening coats, for handsome tunics to top dark skirts and for the new basque and jacket blouses. Designers are doing wonderful things with the new white velvet such as a knee-depth tunic made of white transparent velvet with gold cord and tassel at the neckline and about the waist.

There is also a lovely crinkled washable white velvet being shown this season which is eminently practical seeing that it tubs to perfection. For blouses and tunics this white washable velvet will be found ideal.

An intensely interesting note about the new formal evening wraps which are fashioned of white velvet, is their silhouettes which depart radically from the conventional lines we have been accustomed to see.

For inspiration in creating the newer wraps, designers are turning to such humble sources as butcher-boy smocks and other similar garments of loose-flowing lines. The butcher-boy jacket which belts across the front, flaring loose at the back, is wonderfully youthful and cute made up in white velvet. A collar of white ermine with muff and wee hat to match makes such an ensemble infinitely attractive.

Then, too, in this movement toward the silhouette which is different, style creators have even turned their attention to choir-boy garb as a contributing influence to the new wrap fashions. The evening coat to the right in the picture reflects somewhat this source of inspiration, although it also partakes of the quaint dolman fashion, in that its sleeves are loose and large at the armhole. Self-velvet cording borders the full cape-like sleeves as well as the round neckline and down the front opening. This very lovely garment is fastened at the throat by a single, big jeweled button.

Beautiful, simple and new lines distinguish the evening coat to the left in the group. The cowl back (the monk inspiration is a big force in the present-day styles) and full sleeves pointed at the elbow are details which interpret new fashion trends at their best for this superb wrap of ivory crystelle velvet. We would like to tell you more, if we had space, about the tendency of designers to seek suggestions from ecclesiastical vestments for their new fashions. This is especially noticeable in the simple draped effects adopted together with a wide use of big cords and tassels and hoodlike drapes at the neckline. This influence can be traced throughout dress and tunic and blouse design as well as in the fashioning of evening wraps.

A feature made much of in style doings for this fall and winter is the use of rich dark brown furs on white. The stunning knee-length coat of white velvet centered in the illustration has luxurious cuffs of brown fox—a lovely combination. Here again we see the simplicity of line which marks the smartest new evening wraps. The bow ties of self-velvet at the throat is in perfect keeping with the chaste naive lines of this exquisite garment.

GOLD NAILHEADS

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

On many of the new fall dresses one sees cabochon or big-button effects as pictured here, which are formed of either gold or silver nailheads. This dark brown dress of charmbonize yarn in popcorn weave offers several new style notes. It is trimmed with a lame collar in gold which matches the nailheads down the front of the blouse. The slash in the sleeves is especially important for slashed treatments abound in the new fashions. Covered buttons outline the shoulder and trim the tight cuffs to the elbow. The self-fabric girdle is wide and soft. Sash effects such as this often take the place of belts in the newer models.

Ankle-Length Skirts

Ankle-length skirts will be seen on many afternoon gowns in London's society circles this winter.

WILD WEST TOUCH TO TAILORED SUITS

From the wild and woolly West come some of the smartest costume inspirations of the season.

There is a Buffalo Bill flair to the tailored suits and hats which bedeck our upcoming shop windows this fall.

There is the wide-brimmed felt hat with a sombrero air which tops off the season's tailored tweeds.

One of the most successful examples of the wild West trend in hats appropriately is called the dude rancher, and there are others, such as rough rider and the sidesaddle beret.

Then there are the handannas which smart co-eds are knotting about their aristocratic throats this season in the manner of the dashing cowboys.

They are effective in the classic red and blue printed cottons of the real cowboy's handanna. And there are others, more pretentious, in soft neckette silk.

House Coats Are Smart to Wear in One's Lazy Hours

For lazy hours of relaxation women are now wearing smart and extremely comfortable house coats. They are made of heavy white silk with broad revers as tailored as those of a man's dinner jacket and belted in place with a heavy silk cord. Pajamas of a heavy white silk may be worn with the coat.

Another lovely negligee is one made of a luscious angora crepe with a necklline and sleeves trimmed with bands of shaved marabou feathers which give the appearance of fur.

Green a Favorite

Green in a vivid medium tone makes day frocks and ensembles, evening gowns and wraps, as well as blouses more sober colored suits, while deeper shades called "forest" and "hunter" and blue green are also much favored.

Dealing With "Calf Love"

Phase of Adolescent Life That Is Very Real to Those Involved; Situation Calls for Tenderness on the Part of Parents.

Harold P. Page, director of Y. M. C. A. boys' work, has proved himself a sage. In an article appearing in the The Parents' Magazine he warns mothers and fathers that they need not hope to escape contact with "Calf Love." They may deplore it, they may ignore it, they may try to laugh it off, but just so long as boys will be boys and there are girls in the offing, just so long there will continue to take place this phenomenon of adolescent life to which the scornfully good-humored term is applied. In the opinion of this close observer of youth in his charge, this form of love is a beautiful, often wondrously moving drama, when put on by two clean-minded normal young people.

"The boy and girl in love are in the grip of a cyclonic force. If you are wise you will make no attempt to play the superman or superwoman at this time," warns the director and astutely sets forth several common methods of parental attack which he believes are certain to miss fire.

"To deny the existence of 'calf love' by donning a mask of cold reserve smacks of cowardice," he flatly declares. "It only successfully erects a false barrier between parent and child that the latter will silently resent and as silently question its presence.

"Any challenge to reason is futile because reason plays an insignificant part in 'calf love,' if indeed it is present at all. Pure feeling has taken its place.

"Ridicule is a cruel way of meeting the situation. It inflicts wounds which hardly, if ever heal, and may result in an utterly false appraisal by the young person of the intrinsic beauty of his love that may forever mar his relations with members of the other sex.

"A furtive approach will maiden the young lover who considers a natural and intimate matter the object of a hidden attack.

With keen comprehension of the peculiar need of youth during this period when a comparatively simple existence has suddenly been infinitely complicated, Mr. Page urges the substitution of tenderness for parental authority, and urges fathers and mothers to remember their own adolescence and the physiological causes and changes involved.

"Be frank with your boys and girls. Help them to grow up emotionally. Put a good book on sex into their hands. Above all, open your homes for good times and entertainments and see that the two young persons involved are together—for together they'll be—under your roof."

Sane advice, if you ask us. Mr. Page speaks with the knowledge gained by years of contact with other parents and sons as well as with the wisdom born of intimacy with two boys of his own with whom he must some day squarely face the problems of "calf love."

Religion at Vassar

This year a rabbi and a negro minister, in addition to representatives of various denominations, will be heard.—Literary Digest.

COUGHS

RUBBER AND GOLDENROD

The rubber content of any species of goldenrod is entirely in its leaves, Loren C. Polhamus of the United States Department of Agriculture found, after analyzing 21 species of goldenrod. Hence if goldenrod is to be cultivated as a source of rubber, only those varieties should be chosen that have plenty of leaves.

The next matter for consideration is the rubber content of the leaf tissues.

Of all the species of goldenrod examined by Polhamus, that known botanically as Solidago altissima, a widely distributed variety occurring from New England through Michigan to Kansas, showed the highest per cent of rubber in its dried leaves. However, there is considerable variation as to rubber content in a single species, for while the best of the specimens of Solidago altissima showed 6.34 per cent of rubber in its dried leaves, the average rubber content of the leaves of all of the samples of this variety examined was 3.45 per cent.

Why Children Need a Liquid Laxative

The temporary relief children get from unwise dosing with harsh cathartics may cause bowel strain, and even set-up irritation in the kidneys. A properly prepared liquid laxative brings a more natural movement. There is no discomfort at the time and no weakness after. You don't have to give the child "a double dose" a day or two later.

Can constipation be safely relieved in children? "Yes!" say medical men. "Yes!" say many mothers who have followed this sensible medical advice: 1. Select a good liquid laxative. 2. Give the dose you find suited to the system. 3. Gradually reduce the dose, if repeated, until the bowels are moving naturally without aid.

An approved liquid laxative (one that is widely used for children) is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. The mild laxative action of this excellent preparation is the best form of help for children — and grown-ups, too. The dose can be regulated for any age or need.

Your druggist sells Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

DANGEROUS HIDEOUTS

It is strange that most of the anti-liquor agitation heard these days is being hurled in the direction of places selling beer, and not against state owned and state-managed liquor stores. Prior to the advent of repeal the majority of people held to the old-fashioned idea that most of the trouble coming from the liquor business was caused by the sale of hard liquors. This does not seem to be the case.

In a recent address before the State Grange the charge was made by Mrs. Dora Stockman, well-known farm leader, that nearly every restaurant, cafe and hotel dining room is the equivalent of a saloon, disguised in the respectibility of a public eating place and using waitresses as bar maids." We admit that most of the deductions made by Mrs. Stockman are true, yet it can hardly be said that all the places selling beer are the menace to society she would have us believe.

Enforcement officials are of the opinion that most of the bad things heard about the beer business originate in sequestered beer taverns, where police regulations and surveillance is practically impossible. Young people quickly learn the location of the hot spots where there is neither restraint as to the amount of liquor consumed, or of the individual deportment of the customers. Such places rapidly degenerate into moral and social cesspools more deadly than the old-time open saloon. The remedy lies in changing the law to prevent the legal sale of beer or liquor outside the corporate limits of a city or village where adequate watch of the business cannot be maintained at all times. If this does not bring the desired results other measures to control the growing evil must be sought.

THE OAKLAND PLAN

Oakland county, located in the great industrial era of southeastern Michigan, early in the depression found itself faced with the task of caring for thousands of unemployed workers. From the beginning it was realized that hundreds of workingmen with large families could never hope to regain their lost places in the industrial world—younger men were getting the call for employment. To aid heads of families falling in this class arrangements were made for small loans through the Michigan Rural Rehabilitation Corporation and the families were placed on abandoned farms in the county. Only those having previous farm experience were selected, men who had left farm work in their youth to seek the higher wages which industry offered in the cities. During the first year 54 families sought this new independence—and the report at the end of the year reveals an almost 100 per cent success. Loans are repaid through the sale of produce and as fast as one loan is repaid it becomes available for another family.

Speaking of the success attained the Oakland Welfare Commission says: "In addition to all this, 54 families are happy for the first time since the depression began, scores of children have proper clothing, fresh milk and eggs, meat is being butchered for winter and barns and bins are filled with feed for the horses, cattle and hogs, and seed for next year's crops." The plan has attracted wide attention and federal authorities are urging its adoption on a nation-wide scale.

THE "UTOPES" ARE COMING

Many new and strange sects are springing into existence these days, each designed to save our crumbling civilization, if we are to believe their promoters. When thoroughly investigated they are usually found to be an old racket under a new name. For some unknown reason California has been picked as the cradle where most of them are nursed during the trying period of infancy. Despite an alarming death rate a few of these political and religious movements manage to survive, and that they succeed in gaining a large local following cannot be denied. Of all the new movements given life as a result of the depression the "Utopian" is by far the largest. Its growth has been like a prairie fire. In six months its membership has grown to more than half a million. Organizers are at work and unless all signs fail, say conservative newspaper publishers of that state, millions of Utopians will go to the polls in 1936, marking an X on the ballot just where they have been told to put it.

The society has something to sell that puts the Ku Klux Klan dues-getters in the amateur class. Its leaders say that when and if, it attains its full growth the Utopian Society will decree: A three-day work week for people between the ages of 25 and 45; an annual income for each worker equivalent to $25,000 paid in the form of scrip, which will be non-transferable, can't be loaned or hoarded and must be spent within a year. When the member-ship saturation point has ben reached in California paid organizers will invade Chicago and New York and gradually to all parts of the country.

Of course such plans are predicted on the assumption that a secret grip, password, and a five-course initiation ritual will drag in the suckers by the millions. It might turn out that folks won't be as gullible elsewhere as they apparently are in California where the climate evidently works strange pranks with the proletariat. Ever faced with stern realities middle-west folks have the Missouri complex and are not likely to fall so soon again for a secret society with racial or religious prejudices. Nor will the scrip scheme for the liberation of the workers arouse unbounded enthusiasm in hundreds of localities, where chambers of commerce have a lot of local scrip in their exchequers which they would undoubtedly sell at a most liberal discount.

ENGINES OF DESTRUCTION

The thousands of people killed each year in automobile accidents is a matter of grave concern. It amounts to a national calamity, with no signs of cessation. There is wide disagreement over the underlying cause of this needless sacrifice of human life. A nation-wide analysis of fatal traffic accidents revealed that the overwhelming majority—90 per cent—is caused by simple, everyday haste. The high-powered car with a fool behind the steering wheel becomes an instrument of death and destruction. It is often, and truly, said that the intoxicated driver is as dangerous as a maniac with a gun. Yet the Travelers Insurance Company, which made the survey, says that fewer than five per cent of fatal accidents can be laid to drunken driving. The drunken driver, dangerous as he is, isn't in it as a public menace with the driver who is in too big a hurry. How to remove the reckless driver from the highways demands the best thought of traffic officials. Until that is accomplished the slaughter will continue.

LEGION ACTIVITIES
By F. V. Tyler

Despite the fact that so many of our members are in Florida or the north woods, Tuesday night's meeting in the dugout had an unusually good attendance and was quite enthusiastic. Among other important matters, measures were taken to insure that unemployed Legionairres receive their due recognition when the public works jobs are passed out.

The results of the turkey shoot, last Sunday, were very gratifying and would have been better if the weather had been warmer. Many believe that the 100-yard range was too short for the high-powered deer rifles and that 200 yards, which is the standard minimum range for rifle clubs and army ranges would have been better. A speedier method of marking and changing targets will be adopted before the next shooting match is held, and the crowd will not be permitted to crowd in so close to the firing line.

Leslie T. Shapton Post will put on its annual feather party Monday evening, November 26th. Turkeys, ducks and chickens will be the prizes and a novel plan for the play will be instituted for the first time. Ladies as well as the men are welcome at this affair, which will be held at the Legion Home on East Garfield avenue.

Several of our members, who left a short time ago for Florida with their families, expecting to stay out the winter, are back home again. Florida concerns and landlords, are, it seems, engaged in the merry old game of gypping the tourist—a practice which will probably bear fruit of a bitter variety during the season of 1935-36, if some of the crop is not already being gathered this year.

RURAL PUPILS HAD GALA DAY THURSDAY

Were Guests of Judge Gilbert at County Day Program

One hundred and sixty pupils and teachers from rural schools in the western townships of Charlevoix county were guests of Judge Parm C. Gilbert at a County Day observance held here Thursday.

The children had an opportunity to visit court while in session, were taken through the various county offices and explained the work of the departments, visited the county jail and heard a finger-print expert from Lansing explain the details of his work, visited the local banks and printing offices and other points of interest.

They were guests of Judge Gilbert at a luncheon served in the new high school dining room. The day proved full of instruction and entertainment for the visiting school students.

Judge Gilbert had previously carried out a similar plan in Grand Traverse county. Its success prompted the program for the Charlevoix county pupils.

Estimated Fifty Tons of Diamonds in World

On women's necks and fingers, in the treasure stores of Indian princes, and in bank vaults and family safes, there are today more than fifty tons of cut diamonds, writes a United Press correspondent in Amsterdam, Holland.

This immense quantity of precious stones owned by the public throughout the world, weighs approximately 250,000,000 carats, and is valued at nearly $70,000,000,000.

"These figures may sound enormous," Johan A. Smit, Amsterdam diamond dealer, said, "but they are not out of proportion. The industry employs more than 500,000 men in the mining districts; 25,000 cutters throughout the world; 10,000 dealers in unset stones, and probably another 100,000 in jewelers' shops.

"And people are buying diamonds again," continued Smit. "Although the market for big stones is still somewhat limited, since the depression, the sale of small diamonds is increasing. For one thing, they are cheap now, and form a good investment."

Another boon to the diamond trade is its increasing use by industry. Electrical works, automobile factories, and various other industrial concerns employ diamonds for grinding and drilling. For these purposes the best type of stone is required.

Have a Care!

The doctors have discovered that a new drug used for obesity is a high explosive so it might stand you in hand to be careful how you slap a fat friend on the back.—Macon Telegraph.

ASK THE MOTHER who has made this change

The average mother gives any laxative the family may be using, while family doctors give children a liquid laxative of suitable ingredients, suitable strength, and in suitable amount.

If you want to know just what a tremendous difference this means to any youngster, just inquire of any mother who has tried it!

She knows that a bilious boy or girl needs a gentle liquid laxative when constipated, and a little less if dose is repeated until bowels seem to be moving regularly and thoroughly without need of help.

Use a liquid laxative containing senna (a natural laxative). California Syrup of Figs has the right amount for children's use, and this rich, fruity syrup does not harm or upset a child's system.

Get a bottle of the real California Syrup of Figs at any druggist's. All children like its agreeable taste, and it agrees with them. No need to give a child anything stronger. This fruity syrup is laxative enough; indeed, many adults use it in preference to pills and tablets.

THE "LIQUID TEST." First: select a liquid laxative of the proper strength for children. Second: give the dose suited to the child's age. Third: reduce the dose, until the bowels are moving without any help.

An ideal laxative for this purpose is the pure California Syrup of Figs, but be sure the word "California" is on the bottle.

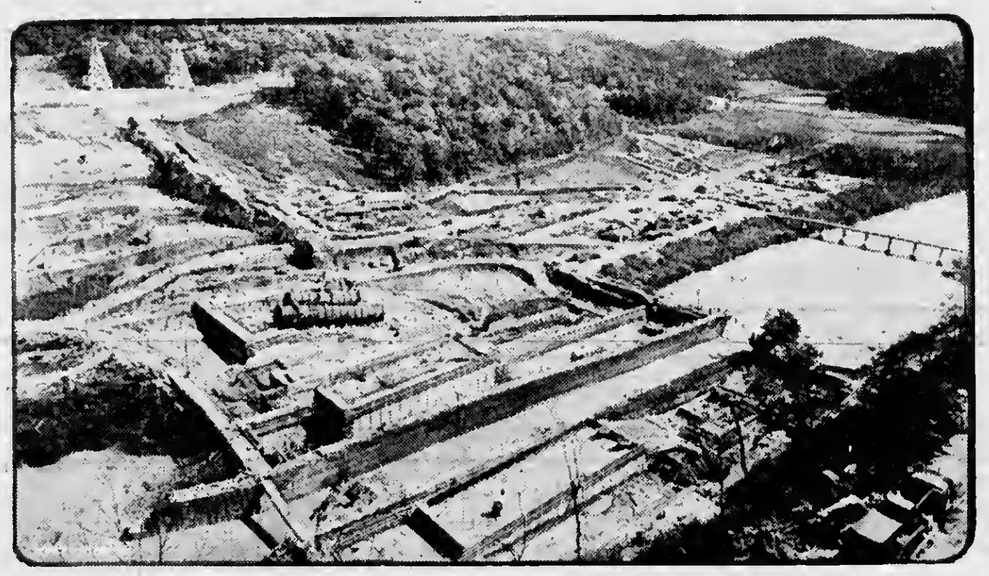
Norris Dam Is One-Third Completed



The Tennessee Valley authority's $39,000,000 power and flood control dam on the Clinch river, near Knoxville, is now one-third finished. Over 10 per cent of the concrete for the dam has been poured. When finished two and one-half years from now, it will stand 253 feet high, eliminating all future floods on the Clinch and reducing materially the flood stages on the Tennessee river itself.

TRUE DETECTIVE STORY

by Vance Wynn © Public Ledger

The Spy Plot That Failed

IT WAS during the early days of the World war that a rough-looking man, who posed as a Belgian, began to frequent one of the branches of the Carnegie library in Pittsburgh.

He was poorly dressed, wore a scraggly beard and seemed to have all of the time in the world.

Usually he went to the reference department of the library, and spent hours in reading books that had reference to America. He paid particular attention to the maps and one night was seen to be tracing some of these from one of the geographical works in the library.

Miss Frances Langhill, the assistant librarian, noticed the man, and her suspicions were aroused.

So while the fellow spied around the shelves the young woman did a little spying on her own account.

Night after night she sat there with a green shade over her eyes apparently engrossed in her work, but in reality keeping tabs upon the Belgian who was not a Belgian.

One night she watched him replace a book on the shelf, and when he had departed she hastened over to that part of the library and obtained possession of this particular book.

It contained a coastwise map, and gave evidence of having been traced.

Before the next day had dawned the patriotic young woman had informed the Department of Justice of her suspicions of the man who had been visiting the library.

Operative Henry —that will have to be his name for the purpose of this article—was placed on the case at once.

He traced the man and found that he was a stranger in the city.

He located the house where he had a room and discovered he was going by the name of Jacob Harmon.

The fellow must have sensed the fact that he was being followed, because he ceased his visits to the library.

About the same time an undersized man with a decidedly German accent began to frequent the library.

When interrogated he gave the name of Emil Mayer.

This man pursued pretty nearly the same tactics as the other, but on the surface there did not seem to be any connection between the two.

One day he was followed to his room, and later in his absence a search was made of his effects.

There was nothing absolutely criminal, but the detectives did find a number of papers and tracings.

In themselves they seemed meaningless, but if it were possible to put them together they might have meant much.

At all events, the work of shadowing Harmon and Mayer continued without interruption.

Two and two were put together and the conclusion of the authorities was that the library had been made the rendezvous of German spies for nearly a year.

Of course it goes without saying that there was nothing in the library that was not open to the public at any time.

But the conviction grew that Harmon and Mayer were doing the preliminary work, which was afterwards verified by bolder and more audacious men who stole into navy yards and laid the foundations for destroying munition plants.

Operative Henry had several conversations with Miss Langhill and he compared this with the reports which were brought in as a result of the shadowing of the two Germans.

Up to this point they had never been found together.

In the meanwhile an attempt was made to learn something of the previous history of the two men.

One of them it was learned had been visiting a number of the seacoast towns in New England and it was also alleged that he had not complied with the alien enemy registration laws.

One night United States agents started to follow the two men and then for the first time they joined one another in a little back room in the northwestern part of Pittsburgh.

They sat at a table and produced a coastwise map which they began to study.

That was the signal for the detectives.

The suspects were arrested and in twenty-four hours had been placed in a detention camp.

What became of them no one will tell.

The mystery has gone into that limbo which is the repository of so many war secrets.So to this day there are persons in Pittsburgh who are satisfied that the timely discovery of the librarian cut off the connection between these men and the German war office.

Rattlesnake Island

Belle Isle, in Michigan, at one time was known as Rattlesnake Island because of the abundance of reptiles on it, says a writer in the Detroit Free Press. Hogs, immune to snake bite because of their outer layer of fat which prevents the venom from reaching the blood stream, were turned loose on the island and quickly rid it of snakes. However, the hogs became wild, the island became known as Hog Island, and when Detroit acquired it in 1879 for park purposes, hunters had to kill the dangerous hogs.

PATTERN 9937

Here is a design that was born to make laundresses happy. One can see them with the mind's eye smiling "friendly-like" at it every time it is tubbed. The little sash will be untied, and first they will iron the ruffles. After that it will be plain sailing—or should we say ironing? In our concentration upon laundresses, we have forgotten to mention the proud possessors of the frock who will one and all adore it because, in the first place, it was so easy to make—and ever afterward so smart and becoming to wear.

Pattern 9937 may be ordered only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44. Size 16 requires 3¾ yards 36 inch fabric.

Complete diagrammed sew chart included.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, the STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

DISAPPOINTING DUCK SEASON ENDED SUNDAY

Kill During 30-Day Open Period Far Below Average

A very poor duck season ended at sunset Sunday and now small game hunters have only rabbits on which to concentrate their fire between now and January 30th, the season on all other small game having ended.

Just why the duck season was poor no one ventures a guess aside from mentioning that the duck situation all over the nation is so critical that the federal government decided something had to be done and is raising money for duck relief by selling federal stamps.

It is possible that the weather has not been sufficiently bad to drive the flight ducks south but this seems rather far-fetched as enough winter has come along to start the ducks on their migration. A few flocks of redheads and blue-bills have appeared temporarily on some of the lakes and then continued their flight south.

Comparatively few flights of geese have gone over the city this fall. They may be late heading south but the guess is that they, too, have suffered from reclamation programs which have reduced their feeding grounds in flight to a dangerously small area.

SUNDAY DINNER SUGGESTIONS

By Ann Page

Nntional, state and local nuthorities are sponsoring National Cheese Week with a view to increasing the use of all types of cheese. American or store-cheese is specially low in price though this commodity has remnined cheap. Another furm product, honey, is also brought to your attention.

Most green vegetahles are higher than they have been, hut there are many fine, cheap, root vegetables available for low budgets. Spinach, squash, cnbbage, lettuce and mushrooms are moderately priced. Green peas, beans, lima beans and tomatoes are high.

Florida oranges and grapefruit are plentiful and cheap. Navel oranges and Satsumas (similar to tangerines) are beginning to arrive in market. Both eating and cooking varieties of apples offer outstanding values.

The following menus are made up from the latest market news available:

Low Cost Dinner

Pot Roast of Beef Potatoes
Buttered Onions
Bread and Butter
Bananas in Orange Jelly
Tea or Coffee Milk

Medium Cost Dinner

Roast Lamb Boiled Rice
Buttered Carrots
Bread and Butter
Fruit Salad Cream Cheese Dressing
Tea or Coffee Milk

Very Special Dinner

Grapefruit
Roast Beef Browned Potatoes
Cauliflower au gratin
Hot Rolls and Butter
Prune Whip
Coffee Milk

Still another way to get ahead is never to trust anybody with any more than you can afford to lose.

Burns was presented with a certificate of life membership in the State W. C. T. U. in recognition of her many years of active service.

The program consisted of devotions led by Mrs. Miner, a duet by Rev. and Mrs. Rauch, a trombone solo by Rev. Schout the evangelist, and an address by Mrs. Schout. Refreshments were served by Group 1.

Due to the social features presentation of the Peace topic was postponed, also the business session. Necessary business will be transacted at an executive meeting to be held at the home of Mrs. Palmer at 2:30 p. m. Friday afternoon, November 16th. Any members who find it convenient to attend will be welcome.

JUDGE GILBERT HAS NEW PAROLE MEASURE

Would Create 5-Man Parole Body and Prison Recovery Camps

The draft of a proposed bill creating a five-man commission to handle prison releases and the establishment of prison recovery camps for youthful offenders was presented parole officials at Lansing last week by Judge Payn C. Gilbert of Traverse City, and Prosecuting Attorney A. L. Fitch of Charlevoix.

Judge Gilbert, according to Debo, said that the draft of the bills which he brought to Debo for study, would be introduced when the regular legislative session opens in January.

It provides for a probation commission of five members to be appointed for five-year terms. It would appropriate sufficient funds to assure the construction of four additional camps to house at least 250 inmates.

Judges of courts of record would, instead of sending youthful defendants to one of the three state institutions, commit them to the probationary board whose duty it would be to send them to one of the state camps.

Inmates would be required to do conservation work such as reforestation and stream control and improvement. Civil and semi-military duties also would be included. The bill does not contemplate agriculture on a large scale.

STATE ADOPTS NEW SYSTEM OF BOUNTY

Vote $40,000 for Control of Predatory Animals After Jan. 1

The state conservation commission in its monthly meeting last Friday adopted a resolution condemning the predatory animal control system of Michigan and voted to set up a state bounty system effective Jan. 1, 1935.

Members of the commission held in the resolution "that the co-operative agreement between the U. S. Biological Survey and the Conservation Department for the control of predatory animals has been found unsatisfactory."

The new system of state bounties which will go into effect Jan. 1 provides that $40,000 of game funds shall be set aside to defray bounty costs for the first year. Safeguards on the payment of bounty, are to be set up by the commission.

The schedule on bounties follow: Bobcats, $5; male and female kittens (bobcats), $2.50; male coyote or wolf, $7.50; female coyote or wolf, $10; male or female pup (wolf or coyote), $5.

OCTOBER BENEFITED MANY MICHIGAN CROPS

Favorable weather during September and early October greatly benefited Michigan potato and bean crops according to the November report of the Michigan Cooperative Crop Reporting service.

Present indications point to a record yield per acre of potatoes in Michigan with an estimated production of 34,540,000 bushels, which is 13,840,000 bushels above the crop of 1933 and 13,040,000 bushels more than the 5-year average, 1927-31.

STACK AND FRY RETAIN OFFICE

ARE SURVIVORS OF REPUBLICAN LANDSLIDE

Fitzgerald Margin Will Near the 100,000 Mark — Republican Senate Is a Certainty

Offices of state treasurer, auditor general and six seats in congress are all that Michigan Democracy rescued from the Republican steam-roller which moved the G. O. P. back into power in last Tuesday's elections.

On the state ticket Republicans had elected Harry S. Toy as attorney general. Toy easily outdistanced his fellow state ticket nominees aided by the fact that Attorney General Patrick H. O'Brien ran last of all the Democratic candidates for state office. Orville Atwood (R.) won the secretary of state post although pressed closely by Guy M. Wilson.

State Treasurer Theodore I. Fry and Auditor General John K. Stuck, Jr., both Democrats, were the only survivors of the Democratic regime in Michigan's capitol.

Republicans lost six congressional districts to Democrats — the 1st, 11th, 12th, 14th, 15th and 16th. But they were successful in four of the six contests for state offices and re-elected U. S. Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg.

With votes counted from 3,257 precincts of the 3,451 in Michigan, Fry had 549,100 votes. His Republican opponent, Gilbert H. Isbister, had 536,972.

Stuck received 556,921 votes from 3,274 precincts. The Republican candidate, Harry H. Brackett, received 545,142.

The senate will be dominant Republican by a majority of 21 to 11, according to last surveys. That the House will be Democratic still remains an uncertainty. An early count gave the Democrats 51 seats to 48 for the Republicans, but reports Saturday following canvassed returns, saw the election of a Republican from Iron district, cutting the Democratic margin. The outcome of three other House seats is still uncertain.

shels, he came through with three firsts and three seconds. Continuing his good work, he won second in the display of Fifty Apples Laid on the Table, first in Fancy Peck and had the Best Apple of the Show.

Eveline Orchards crashed through this year and made a wonderful showing. In the plate competition, they won more than any other single exhibitor, having four firsts and one second and two thirds. Unfortunately, they did not have any samples in trays, hence lost some ground in the competition but in the bushel classes, they won six firsts and two seconds and two thirds.

When all of the accomplishments were summed up, it was found that Charlevoix county received a total of over $260.00 won by exhibitors from Charlevoix county. This is a splendid showing and represents pretty largely the ability of the potato and fruit growers in Charlevoix county.

CHARLEVOIX COURIER

VOLUME 39. NUMBER 47. EIGHT PAGES THE CHARLEVOIX COURIER, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 21, 1934 PRICE $2.00 PER YEAR

HERE IS DOPE ON TAX MORATORIUM

TEN-YEAR PLAN DOESN'T INCLUDE 1933 TAX

Many Questions Regarding Moratorium and Answered In a Convenient Form

Lillis M. Flanders, Charlevoix county treasurer, has made public the new tax laws of the state. Most important are Act 126 of 1933, as amended by Act 11, Extra Session of 1934, which provides for the payment of 1932 taxes and years prior to that in ten equal installments beginning September 1, 1935; and Section 59 of the General Tax Law as amended by Act 21 of the Extra Session of 1934, which provides for the payment of 1933 taxes before November 1, 1934, without penalties and interest but with a three per cent collection charge.

Many questions will immediately arise in the taxpayer's mind concerning these two new laws. They have been arranged in convenient form as follows:

Q.—How much fees, penalties and interest will be charged after November 1, 1934?

A.—In paying the 1933 taxes after November 1, 1934, the law provides a 4 per cent collection fee plus a 3-4 per cent per month interest charge from March 1, 1934. This will make a total of 10¾ per cent to be added in November, 11½ in December and ¾ per cent additional for each month thereafter until paid.

Q.—When will the 1933 unpaid taxes be sold?

A.—They will be sold at the 1936 annual tax sale on the First Tuesday in May.

Q.—What will be done with unpaid taxes of 1932 and prior years?

A.—If unpaid on September 1, 1935, they will be spread on a ten-year installment tax roll and 1-10 of the total will be due and payable on September 1, 1935, and September 1 of each year thereafter until paid.

Q.—What charge of interests, fees and penalties will be made under this plan?

A.—Any part of the total tax due or all may be paid before September 1, 1935, without fees, interest, or penalties. After September 1, 1935, each installment carries an interest rate of 4 per cent per annum from September 1, 1935.

Q.—How much interest would I pay on $100 in taxes if spread on the installment plan and payments made when due each year?

A.—You would pay a total of $18 interest over the ten-year period. See following table.

$100 in Taxes of 1932 and Prior years would be spread over ten years and payable as follows:

Due Date	Instal.	Int.	Total
Sept. 1, 1935	$10	None	$10.00
Sept. 1, 1936	$10	$ .40	$10.40
Sept. 1, 1937	$10	$ .80	$10.80
Sept. 1, 1938	$10	$1.20	$11.20
Sept. 1, 1939	$10	$1.60	$11.60
Sept. 1, 1940	$10	$2.00	$12.00
Sept. 1, 1941	$10	$2.40	$12.40
Sept. 1, 1942	$10	$2.80	$12.80
Sept. 1, 1943	$10	$3.20	$13.20
Sept. 1, 1944	$10	$3.60	$13.60
Total	$100	$18.00	$118.00

MRS. EDW. GOLDSTICK SUCCUMBED SATURDAY

Death Followed Extended Illness—Funeral Monday at Petoskey

Mrs. Edward Goldstick, 46, well known and respected local woman, died Saturday evening at Charlevoix Hospital, where she had been taken the previous day in critical condition from an illness of several years' duration.

Deceased was born February 2, 1888 in Russia. Following her marriage to Edward Goldstick the couple came to America, first residing in New York City before coming to Charlevoix 20 years ago. Mr. Goldstick has engaged in business here during that time.

Surviving besides the husband are four children, Esther, Harry, Clarence and Helen, all at home.

Funeral services were conducted Monday morning at Petoskey and burial was in the Jewish cemetery in that city.

PLAN COMMUNITY XMAS DECORATION

BRIDGE STREET TO EXEMPLIFY YULE SPIRIT

Council to Take Immediate Action and Asks Cooperation of Merchants in Program

Plans for a program of community Yuletide decoration—far more extensive than ever undertaken in Charlevoix—were outlined and approved Monday evening by the city council.

The action followed requests by both the Charles Dickens Club and the Shakespeare Study Club, which had sent written communications to the council asking that a program of Christmas decoration be carried out. The matter, already considered and approved by the council, was turned over to the committee on parks and under the direction of Ernest J. Kibbe, chairman of the committee, the work will soon be started.

The plan is to erect a huge Christmas tree at the corner of Bridge and Clinton streets as in previous years. Smaller trees will be furnished by the city and placed in the flag staff holes in front of each business place on Bridge street. The city will furnish colored lights and other decorations for the large community tree and is asking that each individual merchant provide similar decoration for the smaller trees to be placed in front of their stores. The city will also decorate the boulevard lamp poles along Bridge street.

Mr. Kibbe has announced that the trees will be placed shortly after Thanksgiving Day which falls on Thursday, November 29th. He has requested each merchant to make plans immediately for their share in the decorations program.

While no official action has been taken as yet, it is anticipated the council will provide funds for distribution of gifts to the kiddies on Christmas eve. In previous years the American Legion has had charge of this feature.

COMMENCE SEWAGE DISPOSAL MONDAY

IMPORTANT ALL UNEMPLOYED REGISTER

River Crossing and Foundation for Plant Believed First Projects to Be Undertaken—Charlevoix Unemployed Get First Call When Workmen Are Drawn

The construction of Charlevoix's sewage disposal system, a goal looked forward to for approximately a year, is expected to start next Monday, November 26th.

The H. G. Christman-Lansing Co., whose contract, awarded by the city council last week was approved Wednesday morning by PWA officials at Detroit, are expected to set up headquarters here Thursday and the moving in of equipment will follow immediately. The federal inspector to be sent by the PWA will arrive here Sunday, it is understood.

Just what part of the work will be started first is not known due to the absence of the contractors. However, it is understood the channel crossing will be one of the first projects undertaken and that laying the walls for the foundation of the plant will be gotten under way at once. Other divisions of the work may be started at the same time, city officials believe.

Workmen to be employed on the construction will be drawn through the National Re-Employment Service and for this reason it is imperative that all local unemployed are registered. It will be recalled that the office once located in the Benj. Brown building has been moved to Petoskey, where regional headquarters were established. City officials have been assured that Charlevoix unemployed will be given first consideration when workmen are drawn, but if a man is not registered he cannot be enlisted. Therefore, city officials ask that all local unemployed make it a point to register. In all probability those now out of work have previously registered. However, if they have had employment during the interim their names will be transferred to the inactive list, making it necessary they establish their present status.

If the city of Charlevoix cannot provide all the workmen needed on the job, men will next be drawn from adjoining townships and, if necessary, from any point in the county. Efforts are being made to have a temporary registration place set up in Charlevoix. It would be advisable that local unemployed consult Mayor L. S. See or other city officials to determine what actual course is ultimately taken.

The last technical requirements necessary for final approval of the project by the PWA were fulfilled through resolutions passed at the last council meeting. One step was awarding of the $73,000.00 in revenue bonds to the United States through the PWA, necessary to procure financies; a resolution authorizing issuance of the bonds in accordance with the ordinance authorizing the sewage disposal system; and a resolution guaranteeing the city would provide necessary finances for divisions of the system not awarded by contract. This was anticipated as merely a legal requirement, for a supplementary grant of $15,000 requested to insure full financing of all divisions of the system has been assured.

Commencement of work on the sewage disposal system at this time of low employment in Charlevoix will be a welcomed feature.

NOTICE!

Registration of Charlevoix citizens for employment on Sewage Disposal project will be conducted between the hours of 9 a. m. and 3 p. m. at the office of the City Clerk in the library building, on Friday, November 23rd, by an official of the National Re-employment Service. Veterans who desire to register must bring their discharge papers or a copy of same. Although previous registration may have been made it is necessary to establish present status.

ADULT EDUCATIONAL CLASSES ORGANIZED

Especial Interest Shown in Manual Training, Sewing, Commercial

Adult educational classes, sponsored through the cooperative efforts of the state and county welfare administrations and the Charlevoix public schools, were organized Monday evening.

A fairly large group attended the organization meeting. Especial interest was manifest in manual training, sewing and commercial subjects and classes are now under way.

Anyone interested in taking advantage of the educational program offered may enroll at any time. It is intimated that more interest is necessary if some of the subjects offered are to be continued.

INDIANS HEAR BROWN NOV. 28 AT ST. IGNACE

Meeting for All in Northern Michigan Planned

A meeting of all Indians in this area has been called for November 28th at St. Ignace to settle the controversy which has divided the race into two warring camps.

The difficulties center around the Wheeler-Howard bill passed at the last session of Congress to benefit certain Indians. Whether or not the Indians of northern Michigan come under the provisions of the bill is debated by the two groups.

MORE HUNTERS CROSS STRAITS THIS SEASON

Until noon Wednesday there had been 5,706 vehicles taken across the Straits of Mackinac since November 9th. This compared with 5,177 from November 9th through the 14th of last year. Passengers totalled 14,995 this year and 13,677 last.

COURT SEASON TO OPEN NEXT FRIDAY

ELLSWORTH AND PELLSTON ON DOUBLE BILL

Three Veterans Included in Group of 22 Seeking Berths on Team —14-Game Schedule

Facing a stiff fourteen-game basketball schedule which opens with a double-header here on Friday evening, November 30th, Coach Ray Kipke has a group of twenty-two candidates at work in preparation for the court season.

Charlevoix was runner-up in both the district and regional tournaments last year and from that quintet Kipke has three veterans around which he will form his 1934-35 contenders for northern Michigan honors. Available from last year's squad are Carey, a guard, who is being groomed for center; Jack Foster, guard; and Bob Pearl, forward. From last year's reserve squad, a likely looking bunch of candidates, are Ed. Radle, Joe Schwab, Keith Nickerson, Floyd Eccleston and Charles Scott, forwards; Louis Greenman and Emerald LaBlanc, centers; Charles Hebert, Robert Livington, Leslie Shapton and Warren Shapton, guards.

Charlevoix's schedule opens Friday evening, November 30th, with a double-header. The squad will be divided into two teams, one meeting Ellsworth high and the other Pellston. Other games on the schedule are as follows:

Dec. 7—Traverse there.
Dec. 14—Petoskey there.
Dec. 27—Grand Rapids Union here.
Dec. 29—Petoskey here.
Jan. 4—Boyne City there.
Jan. 11—Harbor Springs there.
Jan. 18—Traverse here.
Jan. 25—Mancelona there.
Feb. 1—Boyne City here.
Feb. 8—East Jordan there.
Feb. 15—Harbor Springs here.
Feb. 22—East Jordan here.

It will be noted Charlevoix has scheduled Grand Rapids Union high of Grand Rapids. This is the first time a game has been booked with a team south of Traverse City.

Stewart Coleman, athletic director, has announced that season tickets for the eight home games will be available at $1.25 and may be obtained through the students.

EXTENSION GROUP HELD THEIR SECOND MEETING

The second meeting of Charlevoix Group 2, home extension work, was held at the home of Mrs. Engle Van-Allsburg. The topic was "Dress Accessories." It was a very interesting and timely subject, as many ideas for Christmas gifts were given. Various styles of collars, scarfs, berets and handbags were displayed and the ladies cut patterns from the ones they desired. The next meeting will be held January 14 at the home of Mrs. Peter Timmer.

RED CROSS WORKERS ARE ASSIGNED

ROLL CALL DRIVE IS NOW IN FULL SWING

Charlevoix County at Bottom of List for Red Cross Support—Cooperation Is Sought

Mrs. F. V. Tyler, Charlevoix chairman of the Red Cross committee, has announced the names of the Roll Call workers in this city who are carrying on a canvass for Red Cross memberships, as a part of the nation-wide appeal for funds with which to carry on the work of that organization. The Roll Call period is from Armistice Day through Thanksgiving Day. Following are the Charlevoix workers: Mesdames Allen Campbell, E. J. Edwards, Ray Hamilton, Albert P. Taylor, Gertrude Dick, Charles Blehn, Laura Courier, E. J. Smith and Miss Winnifred Golley. Additional assistants are badly needed for the valley district and the south hill west of U. S. 31.

In five years of economic depression and partial recovery Red Cross has given direct relief to one out of every five persons in the United States.

These were our own fellow citizens—victims of unemployment, tornado, drought, flood, earthquake and other causes of distress. In giving food, clothing, housing, nursing, medical care and helping them to a self-sustaining livlihood, the Red Cross spent $18,835,525 and distributed in addition wheat and cotton products valued in excess of seventy million dollars.

"The Red Cross is the instrument of expression of a great group of Americans who have given generously for human welfare in times of distress or emergency.

"—in serving the Red Cross you are also aiding by example those similar great causes for which this nation is daily striving."

The American Red Cross receives no financial support from the government. The people provide this support by membership dues and contributions. Last year, nearly four millions were used for relief to sufferers from disasters, disease and famine.

According to reliable information from official sources at Washington, it is only a question of a short time, now, when the greater portion of direct federal relief activities will cease. This means that the work of caring for the needs of some seventeen to eighteen million people throughout the land will fall upon the several state governments, already heavily burdened, and upon the private relief agencies of which the Red Cross is perhaps the greatest and most efficient.

It is true that 50 cents of every dollar donated leaves the community in which it is contributed, but this does not mean that it is wasted or used to maintain the salaries of higher officials. It simply goes to support the large scale endeavors of the Red Cross organization to alleviate distress of various kinds over wide areas of territory in which your own home community may at any time be

NORTH COUNTIES GET LITTLE FARM FUNDS

Latest Distribution Gave Charlevoix County $292.60

Counties of Northwestern Michigan participated meagerly in the latest distribution of federal money under the terms of the Agricultural Adjustament Act for wheat and corn-hog reduction.

Charlevoix county farmers, for instance, received a grand total of $292.60, all of which was for reduction of wheat acreage and none at all for reduction of corn-hog production. Benzie county received a total of $56.13 for wheat acreage reduction; Grand Traverse $323.13; Kalkaska $71.60; Leelanau $113.74. Wexford and Manistee counties are not listed in the totals.

The total amount distributed in the state amounted to $1,105,130.56 of which $612,620.78 was for wheat acreage reduction and the remainder for corn-hog reduction.

Coughs, Colds

Save Money This Winter Make This Free Test

Don't buy a cough remedy blindfolded.

Stop in at Central Drug Store today and ask them to give you a free sample test of Buckley's Famous Cough Mixture.

Then you will know why Buckley's is rapidly out-selling all other cough remedies. Why it penetrates air passages quicker—soothes—heals and helps you get rid of germ-laden phlegm with speed.

Buckley's is economical too—and being alkaline its action is 3 times as powerful and effective as ordinary cough syrups.

Test Buckley's before you buy it.

NATIONAL AID SOCIETY LOSE AUTHORITY

Refused Permission to Operate Further in Michigan

The National Aid Society of Springfield, Ill., which has been soliciting members throughout the state both by mail and by agents, has lost its certificate of authority issued by the secretary of state.

The society writes a contract for payment of death benefits and it was insisted by insurance department officials that it must obtain authorization through that department in order to give validity to its contracts in this state.

No effort was made to obtain insurance department license but an application for authority was filed about two months ago with the secretary of state under the law providing for authorization of non-profit corporations. This law, however, sets the maximum benefits payable at $150.00 while the National Aid contracts, insurance department officials said, call for payment up to $1,000.00. This violation was called to the attention of the state department and a hearing was ordered. When the society failed to make an appearance, its certificate was automatically revoked.

The National Aid is but one of the so-called "Aid Societies" operating in Michigan at the present time without authority to write insurance. The insurance department desires to warn Michigan residents to first investigate the authority of these "Aid Societies" before investing in any of their contracts. Information in regard to these societies and their agents may be obtained by writing to the State Department of Insurance, Lansing, Michigan.

SUNDAY DINNER SUGGESTIONS

By Ann Page

This is the week to buy the staple and non-perishable foods needed for Thanksgiving, to order your turkey, to get such tedious tasks as making mince meat and shelling nuts out of the way. Be sure too, that your spice shelf is adequately stocked with seasoning for stuffings and pumpkin pies. A carefully planned menu and a market list will help simplify your work.

For this week-end simple foods are to be preferred. A pot roast or plain roast of lamb, beef or pork with plain, buttered vegetables and a simple fruit dessert or milk pudding is desirable. Root vegetables and the citrus fruits are inexpensive. Cabbage and spinach and both cooking and eating apples also are low in price.

In place of the very special dinner this week we are including a Thanksgiving menu of seasonable and reasonably priced foods.

Low Cost Dinner

Roast Pork Mashed Potatoes
Cabbage Cooked in Milk
Bread and Butter
Fruit Salad

Let The COURIER Sell IT for YOU

It's almost time to take down the screens

MOST of us hate to see Summer go. We miss the freedom that comes from being out-of-doors. We dread being bottled up in heated houses—wearing heavy clothes—fighting colds and all the impositions of Winter.

Since we have to live indoors, let's be gay and make indoors attractive. A new rug will brighten the living room and the one it displaces can go upstairs to cheer up a bedroom. Some colorful curtains will accentuate the pale winter sun. A new kitchen range or sink will take the gloom out of that much-used workshop. Some comfortable chairs will help you relax during the long evenings.

A little money will go a long way today in renovizing your home. Just watch the advertisements in this newspaper — there are amazing bargains in furniture, lamps, curtains, rugs and kitchen equipment. You're always more certain to get full value for your money when you buy products advertised by dependable merchants and manufacturers.

The Useful Onion

Everybody knows that boiled onions are splendid for breaking up a heavy cold, and also act as a stimulating nerve tonic, but not everybody profits by this knowledge.

Water in which onions have been boiled is a wonderful skin purifier, and whitens hands that are washed in it. In any case "onion water" should never be thrown away, as it makes splendid stock for soups.

The onion has household uses as well. If three or four bruised onions are boiled in a little water, the strained liquid is a cleaner of gilt picture frames. Apply with a soft brush, and polish with a clean duster.

Scorch marks caused by too hot an iron can be removed with a fairly wet paste made from boiled onion juice and fuller's earth. Leave on the scorch for an hour or two, and then wash off—first in cold and then in warm water.

If you tire easily—

why not reason out the cause of this unnatural condition?

Your first thought may be, "I must eat more." That's not all. You should enjoy what you do eat. Frequently, the blood cells are low... and this, perhaps, is what makes you feel weak. If this is your trouble the stomach may not be calling for sufficient food. Zest to eat may be lacking. But what a difference S.S.S. makes when taken just before meals. Just try it and notice how your appetite and digestion improve.

S.S.S. stimulates the flow of gastric juices and also supplies the precious mineral elements so necessary in blood-cell and hemo-glo-bin up-building. Do try it. It may be the rainbow you need to brush away present discouragement over your health condition.

Do not be blinded by the efforts of a few unethical dealers who may suggest substitutes. You have a right to insist that S.S.S. be supplied you on request. Its long years of preference is your guarantee of satisfaction.

Whole Nation Benefited by Great World's Fair

By WILLIAM C. UTLEY

CHICAGO'S A Century of Progress exposition is over. Truly worthy of the time-worn billing, "The Greatest Show on Earth," it attracted 38,865,843, paid admissions, more than any other world's fair anywhere, any time. A total of 22,320,456 paid to see it in 1933 and 16,486,387 in 1934. On the final day, October 31, 1934, 372,127 persons filled the grounds to bid the Fair farewell.

Conceived in the sky-scraping heights of a free and easy prosperity, it was born in the subterranean darkness of a heart-sickening depression, amid a national chorus of "don'ts" and "noes" and a world-wide ballet of apprehensive shivers. From the rags and tatters of its early boyhood, it rose, like the striding "Sink-or-Swim," "Strive-and-Succeed" hero of a Horatio Alger novel, with its chin up and its eye clear, into a prosperous young lustiness giant, and married the boss' daughter.

It paid off. More than that, it will likely show a comfortable profit. That is something unheard of in international expositions. No world's fair, not even the World's Columbian exposition of 1893, generally held up as the shining example, ever returned to the good fairies who financed it more than 10 per cent of the glittering millions they showered into its coffers. No one ever expected the others to pay off. Few—except the skillful pilots at the helm—ever expected this one to repay dollar for dollar.

The 1933-1934 World's Fair has already made itself felt as a stimulus to business in Chicago, the Middle West, and throughout the nation.

Before two hours had passed since the opening of the exposition in its second season, on May 26 of this year, the official register in the Sears, Roebuck building had recorded visitors from all forty-eight states and fifteen foreign countries.

Of the 39,000,000 visitors more than 15,000,000 were from outside Chicago. They came from the four corners of the land. California and Florida rated among the highest of the states in Fair attendance. All of the tourists and travelers that these and other states, north, south, east and west, sent to the Fair spent money on their way to Chicago, in Chicago and on their way home.

Visitors Spend Freely.

Before leaving for the Fair, out-of-town visitors prepared for the journey. They bought new shoes, hats, clothing. If they drove, they had their cars put into first-class condition by local mechanics. They spent money on the way in hotels, restaurants, filling stations, garages. If they came long distances, they stopped off to learn the charms and fascinations of intermediate cities and spent money in them.

Some six or seven million bought railroad tickets. Another two or three million rode motor coaches. Either way, they spent money which the transportation lines will, in many cases, spend again along the routes of travel.

In Chicago itself, the association of commerce of that city estimates, they spent $70,000,000. Much of this in the natural course of exchange will pour back to manufacturers and industries throughout the country, helping to make more jobs, create new wealth and new spending power.

The money spent during the period of the exposition is only a start. Desires created among potential buyers by the exhibits at the Fair will affect their spending for years to come. Millions for the first time felt at the Fair the comfort of air-conditioned houses. Farmers saw for the first time the manifold advantages of prefabricated steel barns. Housewives learned the charm and efficient simplicity of the newer, modes in furniture, saw how their housework could be lightened and their leisure time increased by simple household appliances. Business men saw for the first time new machines that can do practically all of the auditing and calculation in a business office. Builders learned the amazing things that have already been done with prefabricated houses and buildings.

Nation's Spending Power.

Generally, the millions who saw the Fair represented the spending power of the nation; certainly the 15,000,000 who could afford to make the trip from other parts of the country were, for the larger part, the spenders of their communities. They have already bought and will continue to buy countless articles which were primarily impressed upon them at the Fair.

A Century of Progress and its exhibitors and concessionaires created employment at the Fair for more than 40,000 persons. Half a million men and women were given jobs lasting from a few months to two years, before the Fair opened. Only 115,000 of these jobs, which were largely concerned with preparing exhibits and construction materials, were in the Chicago area. Thousands of the workers during the Fair period were recruited from outside Chicago. The money which all of these workers earned will, at least in part, be spent in their home communities. Much of the $51,000,000 spent for construction and maintenance before the Fair opened found its way out of the Illinois metropolis.

Perhaps no less interesting or important than its economic effect was the cultural effect of the Fair. With gay shows, colorful "foreign villages," dozens of unusual spectacles and beautiful free entertainments sweeping the land, the Hall of Science drew more than 31,000,000 visitors, some 80 per cent of the total attendance. Over 4,000,000 visited the Hall of Religion. More than 2,000,000 persons visited the Art Institute's $75,000,000 display, despite the fact that it was not even located on the exposition grounds. Bandshells for two great symphony orchestras were always filled.

Investors Are Paid.

What the effect of A Century of Progress will have upon the expositions of the future is easy to foretell. Here is an exposition which asked for no grants of money from anyone, and got none. Before the market crash of 1929, its sponsors went out and got $6,500,000 in pledged loans, many of them through the influence of Charles Dawes, who from the start was the financial guiding genius of the Fair. Though collection was not begun until after the crash, more than 98 per cent of the money was collected immediately. Every one of these investors, plus others who raised the total to $10,000,000, has been paid back. Subsequent fairs will have a difficult time getting the government windfalls of the past in the face of that record.

A Century of Progress, further, did not give space away to exhibitors, as other Fairs had done. It made them pay $10 a square foot, and sold them on the idea, even in the face of depression and careful industrial economy everywhere.

A Century of Progress offered no gold medals and no blue ribbons to exhibitors. There were no competitions. Right there was eliminated much of the dull repetition of former fairs. Manufacturers were not required merely to present their finished products, polished and prettied up, courting the fancy of the judges. They were allowed to show how their products were made, and they did. Motion was everywhere; static was poison. Visitors saw industry with the wheels turning and the covers off. There was another mark for world's fairs of the future to shoot at.

In the Hall of Science visitors could see actual laboratory experiments in pure science, gripping in their drama of man's fight against the darkness of ignorance and for the torch of progress. In the exhibit buildings they saw how this science was applied in the actual process of every industry, from the making of silk hosiery to automobiles.

The fascination of it all was a drawing power few could resist. Persons of small means traveled hundreds of miles on horseback, on bicycles, on foot, to see it. Some bartered their way in with eggs, chickens, farm produce. One girl, arriving broke from the Northwest, wanted to trade her favorite horse for admission and sustenance inside. Large groups banded together and came in single trucks, sleeping under the stars en route and eating army wartime rations, doled out carefully by their leaders.

And on the closing night more than 372,000 Fair fans braved the chill October weather, staying "till the last dog was hung" in early morning, while hundreds of thousands more thronged outside the gates because there was no room to get in.

Contemplating Figures.

With the Fair gone forever the hey-day arrived for the master minds whose unholy joy is the business of figuring out how far all the world's fair visitors would have stretched if laid end to end, and all that. As a matter of fact they would have stretched more than sixteen times around the earth at the equator if none of them drowned lying in the oceans.

The lights which modern dreamland out of the Fair by night drew enough current to supply a city of 60,000 for a whole year. The intra-grounds buses carried 24,000,000 passengers an aggregate total of the equivalent of seven trips to the moon, with plenty of mileage left over. Concessionaires sold 10,000,000 hamburgers, 5,000,000 hot dogs, 4,000,000 boxes of pop corn and a million bowls of chili concarne, in addition to the millions of complete meals served in the restaurants, proving that Fair visitors, like armies, travel on their stomachs.

All of this must have been more than gratifying to Rufus Dawes, his brother, former Vice President Charles Gates Dawes, Lenox R. Lohr, general manager, and the others who did what the whole world said couldn't be done in what was virtually the worst time in history to try doing it.

What is to become of many of the memorable features of the Fair? Much of the contents of the Hall of Science is being moved to the Museum of Science and Industry in Chicago. All historical exhibits of the Ford building are going to Henry Ford's museum in Dearborn, Mich. Sally Rand and her fans are going on tour, as is the cast of the Old Globe theater. Industrial exhibits are in some cases being dismantled, in others being installed as permanent exhibits in the plants of their exhibitors.

A Century of Progress is gone forever.

Old City Under Spotlight

Pees, Hungary, With Long Historical Record, Comes Into Prominence With Probably Unprecedented Hunger Strike Ever Carried Out.

When hundreds of coal miners of Pees, Hungary, recently sought to force their demands for increased wages upon their employers by remaining without food in coal pits, they brought fame to their town in one of the most unusual ways on record.

"Pees, with approximately 64,000 inhabitants, is the eighth largest city in Hungary," says a bulletin from the Washington headquarters of the National Geographic society. "It lies about 110 miles almost due south of Budapest, near the southern border of the country, and about 15 miles west of the Danube river.

"Pees has not often attracted international attention, but it has existed for many centuries—probably since Roman times. It was the see of a bishop as early as 1009. The Turks occupied it from 1543 to to 1686. Although there are few relics of its early years to be seen today, one minaret still stands from which, during Turkish occupation, Moslem criers called the faithful to prayer. The Turks altered many Christian churches and used them as mosques; but when the invaders returned east, the temporary mosques again became Christian places of worship.

"The Pees cathedral, a four-towered building, was originally built in the Eleventh century, but was rebuilt during the latter part of the Nineteenth century. It is one of the city's outstanding landmarks and one of the oldest churches in Hungary. Pees also has a university which was established about 500 years ago; but many times throughout the city's turbulent history it has had to close its doors.

"The Mecsek hills northwest of the city are famous for their vineyards. Well-kept farms frame the city, but Pees is more famous as an industrial center than as a market. It stands out among Hungarian cities as one of the few where most of the workers are employed in industry. More than three-fifths are so employed. About one-third work in the coal mines, east of the city, others in pottery, metallurgical, and clothing industries.

"The coal mined in this area is the best in Hungary, and accounted for a large portion of the kingdom's production of more than 8,000,000 tons in 1932. Hungary also has important diggings at Ajk, and elsewhere, a number of brown-coal and lignite mines.

"Perhaps one reason why Pees is not better known is that it is many centuries older than its present name. Before it was called Pees in the Eighteenth century, it was known as Fünfkirchen (German for 'Five Churches'). The German name was justified because thousands of Germans moved to the city when it was a sleepy town of 2,000, left by the Turks. After the Germans arrived, Jews arrived and organized the commerce of the growing city.

"Awakened Pees was a puzzle to thousands of Hungarian peasants and other Europeans. In 1840 there were more than 14,000 inhabitants; in 1900, 41,000.

"Today the city's population is a hodgepodge of many races. A recent census showed that about 63 per cent of Pees' residents hailed from other parts of Hungary and many other countries of Europe."

THE DANGER SEASON

The bad season of the year, when weather conditions add to the hazards of driving is near at hand. Snow, rain, sudden squalls, slippery roads, all tend to increase the ever-present dangers of the highways. Slow and careful driving, good mechanical equipment, refusal to take summertime chances, will help you to avoid accidents. Driving during the winter months is a matter of common sense judgment — USE YOUR HEAD!

RURAL TRAGEDIES

She couldn't understand why the doctor didn't put her brother in the ambulance to go to the hospital. And stout-hearted men shrank from telling her the truth—he was dead! Thus ended a boyish prank in which two farm automobiles raced, two boys lost their lives, and several others were critically injured. Deaths from automobile accidents in rural sections increased 82 per cent in 1932 over 1923. Your boy or girl may be tomorrow's victim, if the lessons of safety are not thoroughly taught.—From Successful Farming.

BELATED ASSISTANCE

If the democratic chieftains think the Michigan electorate is to be purchased by the belated flood of relief dollars that is to be turned into the state between now and election day, we surmise they are going to be sadly surprised.

The funds we are getting do not constitute any show of preference. We are merely getting part of what we should have had throughout the depression if our people had been given equal consideration with other states. Most of the money our people will receive during the heat of the campaign is money that should have been in their pockets weeks and months ago. When someone pays us an overdue bill, we are always glad to get it, but we hardly count it as a present.

CAPITALISM

"Capitalism, stripped of popular misconceptions, simply means individual initiative, individual control, and the enjoyments of rewards in the nation's business life individually earned and won. The United States, evolved out of a contest started for the purpose of establishing private property rights in the Colonies and following the safeguarding of those rights in the Constitution, has moved forward rapidly to the happiest front any nation has yet attained. Here one may toil and save and with his savings buy cattle or houses or mills or forests, and the management of such property is a personal matter. At least that was the conception of the sages who set up this Republic." —John Henry Kirby.

LAST YEAR SNOW, COLD, THIS YEAR PICK ROSES

Contradicting the season, which last year gave this region snow and sub-zero weather for the same period instead of the balmy days of the past week or more, Mrs. Cassie Hart, Clinton street, picked a rose from her flower garden Tuesday. This is but one of the many unseasonable evidences of the lack of freezing temperatures this winter.

WALLOON LAKE GETS PLANTING GAME FISH

Replying to a request that Walloon Lake be planted with black bass, rainbow trout and blue gills, Guy Lincoln, of the Oden Fish Hatchery, writes that on August 14th there were 1,000 black bass planted in the lake. On October 18th there were 10,000 blue gills placed in the lake, and on November 13th, the department of conservation deposited 1,200 rainbow trout in the lake.

RECOUNT SECRETARY STATE VOTE ASKED

Charging "fraud, mistakes and irregularities" in election returns, Major-Gen. Guy M. Wilson, Dem., defeated by Orville E. Atwood, Rep., for the office of secretary of state at the November general election, has asked a recount of ballots in 640 of the state's precincts. Wilson claims Atwood had a lead of 2,500 to 6,000 votes on the basis of "incomplete and irregular returns," while Atwood has claimed 9,600 as a legal margin.

FOREST FIRE DAMAGE IS LOWEST IN YEARS

Damage caused by forest fire in Michigan has been reduced substantially during the past 10 years, records of the Department of Conservation show. In 1925 approximately 726,000 acres burned over; in 1933 about 202,000 acres. This year's damage, now being compiled, is expected to be one of the lowest on record.

LOCAL EXTENSION LEADERS GET INSTRUCTION

The second lesson on the project, "The Well Dressed Woman," was given in the lecture room at the Congregational church last Thursday to 18 local leaders. Miss Taylor, instructor from Michigan State College, gave a lesson on the correct use of accessories for the well dressed woman. The next class will be held January 10th.

included by reason of disaster or pestilence. With the exception of the necessary, paid clerical help at the various state and at the national headquarters and the very reasonable salaries of the few full-time officers, the workers of the Red Cross are volunteers.

It is perhaps not generally known that of the eighty-three counties of Michigan, Charlevoix county stood last year at the bottom of the list, in proportion to its population, in respect of Red Cross membership. This is not a very commendable standing and we should try to remedy the situation by our whole-hearted support of this worthy organization throughout the remainder of the Roll Call period and especially on the last three days before Thanksgiving in which the need for active help and the drive for funds will be concentrated in intensity. The situation which the Red Cross is trying to meet is really far more serious than most of us realize. A let-down of any proportions in relief activities at this time might very conceivably result in a national disaster.

EXPECT MORE PEOPLE WILL LIVE ON FARMS

Make Plans on Present Basis Rather Than to Dream of Past

Definite indications that the population on farms will be greater in the next 10 years than it has been in the past decade were pointed out by speakers at the conference of agricultural agents at Michigan State College.

Two main causes for the reversal of the migration to the cities were cited.—Many people who moved from farms to towns where they found employment are now back in their home neighborhoods and there is little chance that the older of these people will be employed in shops again. Company policies of giving preference to young people will prevent them finding work in cities.

Men and women who would have gone to towns in the years immediately after 1929 have stayed on farms because they could not find work elsewhere. Most of them will have established homes or will have become older than employment agents desire before business again demands rural people in numbers to man machines in factories.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCH

Sunday morning service, 10:45.

First Wednesday of month, 7:45 p. m.

Reading room Tuesdays and Saturdays, 3 to 5 p. m.

We cordially invite the public to our services and reading room.

"Soul and Body" will be the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Christian Science churches throughout the world on Sunday, November 25th.

Among the Bible citations is this passage (Ps. 17:15): "As for me, I will behold thy face in righteousness: I shall be satisfied, when I awake, with thy likeness."

Correlative passages to be read from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, include the following (p. 477): "Identity is the reflection of Spirit, the reflection in multifarious forms of the living Principle, Love. Soul is the substance, Life, and intelligence of man, which is individualized, but not in matter.—Soul can never reflect anything inferior to Spirit. Man is the expression of Soul."

Does Away With "Awkward Age"

PATTERN 1978

This is a frock for what used to be called the "awkward age"—the years between eight and sixteen. Styles like this have made it one of the most attractive feminine ages. The model is as young as youth, but designed with the skill of a woman's dress. Look at the front of that bodice with its dicked vest lines emphasized by cleverly placed buttons! See the way the panel idea is prolonged in the seams of the skirt! Don't you like the sleeves?—they can be short or long. And please don't overlook the back view, with that nice pointed yoke.

Pattern 1978 is available in sizes 8, 10, 12, 14 and 16. Size 12 takes 3¼ yards 36-inch fabric and ⅝ yard contrasting. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.

NO WISH TO PATRONIZE

"A man in your position should avoid a patronizing manner," said the confidential friend.

"I'm trying to do just that," answered Senator Sorghum. "I have done my best to convince office seekers that my capacities for bestowing patronage are entirely exhausted."

"I don't know," answered Farmer Corntossel. "Judging by some of his favorite magazines, I'm inclined to think he has found out a lot of things he's keepin' to hisself."

HONORED FOR BRAVERY

Toys for Children

Educators know that children derive the greatest pleasure from constructive toys; that a doll, whose face is recognizable as a member of the human family, and whose clothes can be taken off and buttoned on, gives the greatest happiness to a small girl. The wise mother will turn to a kindergarten teacher, to no authoritative book, if she will study her own child, to discover what toys serve their purpose best. And when she goes out to select toys, she will choose them not from her own but from the child's point of view.

Honoring Memory of Father Serra

With civic celebration and religious services, Marin county residents joined at San Rafael, Calif., in a sesquicentennial pageant marking the anniversary of the death of Father Junipero Serra. TRUE DETECTIVE STORY

by Vance Wynn © Public Ledger

The Quebec Mystery

ONE morning in the spring of the year, Mrs. Caroline Poirier, of St. Canute, in the Province of Quebec, roused one of her neighbors and said with much agitation that she was unable to get into her home or rouse her husband.

She had been spending the night with a friend nearby, and said that her husband, who had been working on the repairs to a church at St. Jerome, nine miles distant, was expected home some time the previous evening.

The police were summoned, the door broken in and the husband found lying on the floor dead.

His body bore three knife wounds, and it was quite evident that there had been a life-and-death struggle.

But beyond the disordered appearance of the room there were no clues to indicate who the culprit might have been.

The strange part of it was that nothing had been taken from the house, so that the murder could not have been for the purpose of theft.

Mrs. Poirier was naturally distracted, and went about the work of setting up the estate like a woman in a trance.

The man, who had led a dissipated life, died practically penniless, but he did leave an insurance policy of $2,000 in favor of his wife.

Isidore Poirier had been a contractor and builder in a small way, and he had married Cordelia Vlad, the handsome daughter of a farmer, after a whirlwind wooing.

They had no children, but for some years after their marriage they lived very happily.

At the end of that time the woman seems to have conceived an aversion for her husband.

The reason for this, according to one of the commentators on the affair, is that she was a masterful woman and he was a man of "very common mold."

The gossips had it that she was enamored of another man, one Samuel Purslow, a carpenter who worked for her husband.

At all events they were seen together very much, and he paid her marked attention.

Indeed, on the night when the murder had occurred the two were together.

But that, in itself did not necessarily connect either of them with the crime.

Mrs. Poirier was the organist of the village church, while Purslow was a member of the choir.

That fact might well have explained their frequent meetings.

In the meantime, the authorities were working hard to trace the movements of the dead man prior to the murder.

It was ascertained that he had been working that very day at St. Jerome.

The people of the village informed them that he had left there in a carriage, saying that he was going home.

Other persons living on the road between the two towns testified that they had seen him pass with the team.

One of them said that a woman accompanied him.

Unfortunately, this person was not able to give a very good description of the woman.

At this stage of the investigation the agent of the insurance company which had insured the victim appeared to say that Mrs. Poirier had personally taken out the insurance, had carried on all of the correspondence, and was particularly anxious at the time to be sure that she would get the money, no matter what might have been the cause of death.

The authorities determined to take the bull by the horns, and both Mrs. Poirier and Purslow were arrested. They were placed in different cells, and each told a story that conflicted with the other.

The evidence was circumstantial, but it was shown that the woman had gone to St. Jerome and had brought her husband home on the night the tragedy was supposed to have occurred.

Both were found guilty, and sentence of death was at once pronounced.

In spite of the fact that the woman had been shown in anything but a favorable light petitions were numerously signed and presented to the governor general urging him to show clemency to the female convict.

He declined to interfere, saying that the law must be permitted to take its course.

When the noose was prepared Samuel Purslow was so limp that he had to be literally carried to the platform.

Not so the masterful woman.

She walked up the steps with a firm tread, and as she reached the execution, exclaimed:

"Be quick; that is all I ask."

Air's Composition

The colorless gas which we call the air or atmosphere is a mixture of several gases, about 77.08 per cent being nitrogen, 20.75 per cent oxygen, 0.93 per cent argon, 0.001 per cent carbonic acid gas, 0.001 per cent hydrogen and water vapor, averaging 1.29 per cent. It also contains minute quantities of the rare gases, helium, krypton, neon, xenon and xenon." A cubic foot of air under average conditions weighs about .08 pound, or an ounce and a quarter.

Red Indians' Conception of a Supreme Being

The Indian Supreme Being had a number of different names: "He who gives us food," "He who is master of the earth," etc. Over a considerable part of the region, though not everywhere, he was also called Manitu, the common Algonkian word meaning supernatural being. Professor Cooper, anthropologist of the Catholic university of America, found that some of the Indians remembered his name as Kitci Manitu, or great spirit; but he is inclined to think that this title may have crept in since the coming of white men.

The Indians' Supreme Being was placed at the head of a highly developed organization of spirits by the eastern tribes, among whom Professor Cooper made his studies. He had under him four great "chief" spirits. Three ruled the birds, the four-footed animals and the fish, respectively. To the fourth was given the government of the caribou or wild reindeer, whose great importance to the Indians justified a separate rating.

Under each of the three "divisional chiefs" were many lesser overseer spirits, each having charge of a single species. Most important among the overseers of the birds were the rulers of the eagle and the fish hawk; chief among the overseers of mammals was the ruler of the bear. The Indians all agreed that these lesser spirits had not made their animals and did not own them; ownership was vested in the Supreme Being alone, and only he had the final decision over their disposal.

Why Liquid Laxatives are Back in Favor

The public is fast returning to the use of liquid laxatives. People have learned that the right dose of a properly prepared liquid laxative will bring a more natural movement without any discomfort at the time, or after.

The dose of a liquid laxative can be varied to suit the needs of the individual. The action can thus be regulated. A child is easily given the right dose. And mild liquid laxatives do not irritate the kidneys.

Doctors are generally agreed that senna is a natural laxative. It does not drain the system like the cathartics that leave you so thirsty. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a liquid laxative which relies on senna for its laxative action. It gently helps the average person's constipated bowels until nature restores their regularity.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS

O. I. Gregg Gives Lecture on Home Beautification

Last Thursday Mr. Gregg gave his second lecture in the series of three scheduled for this fall in the assembly room of the Boyne City Federal Building. This proved to be a highly interesting lecture as it showed the results of home landscaping during the last five or six years, there has been hundreds of farm homes beautified throughout the state. By the use of colored slides it was possible to get a glimpse of many farm homes before and after landscaping.

During the forenoon and early afternoon four more planting outlines were made by Mr. Gregg for next spring's use. It is hoped by the end of the next lecture that 12 more farm homes will be beautified, all of which adds to the naturnl beautification of Charlevoix county. Up to the present time the following places in the county have outlines to follow next spring: Orson Cook, Charlevoix; William Hair, Charlevoix; Charles Fett, Boyne City; A. J. Wnngeman, East Jordan; Rudy Korth, Charlevoix; G. B. Yaples, Boyne City; W. D. Burmeister, Boyne City. The third lecture will be given in the same place on Friday, December 14th. The entire public is cordially invited to attend and enjoy the splendid talks. While the schedule is filled up for this landscaping program for this year, if you are interested in beautifying your farm surroundings it is not too early to request a place in next year's program.

Ladies' Extension Program in Full Swing

The extension ladies are well started on their 1934-35 extension program. Already two lessons have been given by Miss Irene Taylor, a clothing specialist from the Michigan State College. Her last visit took place last week Thursday and Friday. Here she gave the second lesson to 36 extension ladies representing all sections of the county.

The name of the project this year is, "The Well Dressed Woman," and it has proved to be a very worth while project. The county is divided into two main groups. One section meeting at Charlevoix, and the other meets in Boyne City. The Charlevoix group meet in the Congregational church, while the Boyne City group meets in the assembly room. Present indications point to an enrollment of nearly 200 farm and city ladies who are taking this work under the direction of Miss Irene Taylor. The following ladies are acting as leaders of the several communities in the county:

County Marl Beds Discussed

Last week two days was devoted to visiting many locations in the county where marl could be gotten out easily and economically. As a result of the rural rehabilitation program if a sufficient tonnage of marl is ordered by farmers, it is possible to buy this material at the rnte of 25c per yard. Alrendy the program has been started in Emmet county as well as in several other counties in other parts of the state.

The main problem in the past has been the expense of buying this material. In many cases it has cost from 50c to $1 a yard. It was felt that if marl enn be purchased at 25c per yard that most of it will be used. Many types of soil respond to such nn extent that the addition of marl makes them much more productive.

By the time you read this article we believe that our county will be organized so thnt we can proceed with this program. There will be a series of meetings held throughout the county to acquaint the farmers with all the details and to secure orders for the marl.

WATCH FOR DISEASE IN POULTRY HOUSES

Isolation of Sick Birds and Sanitation Prevents Losses

Placing the flock in the laying house brings the birds into such close association with each other that colds or other infectious diseases may spread rapidly through the entire flock, according to the poultry department at Michigan State College.

Strict snnitary measures and furnishing an abundance of sunlight are two measures which reduce the possibility of losses of production or of birds from the effects of disease. The sunlight must be furnished by providing plenty of windows which are placed so the light penetrates into the interior of the house.

Care in keeping feeding and drinking utensils clean and frequent changes of litter are effective ways of nvoiding outbrenks of disease. Hot water is a cheap and gnod means to insure that equipment in the house is kept from becoming a breeding place for bacteria.

Ailing birds should be removed from the house and placed in isolation as soon as the sick fowls can be detected. Treatment of poultry diseases is most practical when the disease is prevented rather than to try to cure birds which nre nlready affected.

Poultry houses should be well ventilated so thnt the litter on the floor does not become wet rapidly. Dropping bonrds should be clenned frequently, and the floor litter should be chnnged as it becomes damp. Internal pnrasites of chickens spread rnpidly when healthy fowls nre permitted tp pick no the parasites from contaminated floors.

Vigorous birds resist disease much better than those which are fed rations which do not supply all the essentials of a diet for fowls kept in confinement. Michigan chickens will keep healthier if they are supplied with codliver oil daily. Green feeds should also he supplied in liberal quantities.

FIRST AID STATION FOR DEER IS LATEST WRINKLE

First aid stations are the latest wrinkle in the management of Michigan's deer herd.

From experiments conducted at the Iosco Game refuge it has been found by the Game Division, Department of Conservntion, that deer will frequent a salt trough liberally coated with pine tar. Pine tar has been used with some success in preventing infestations of nose-fly larvae among sheep and it is hoped that it will have the same results among the deer.

He graduated from Charlevoix high school and later a telegraphy college in Cincinnati, O. He had been engaged in railroad work for 25 years, including posts at White Cloud, Fennville, Bellaire, Interlochen and Williamsburg and was highly esteemed in the communities in which he lived. LEGION ACTIVITIES
By F. V. Tyler

All is in readiness for the feather party at the Legion Home on Monday evening, November 26th. Judging from the way that tickets are selling, there should be a record attendance. Eighty-five tickets have been sold, as this goes to the printer. Seating capacity in the hall has been arranged so that the folks will not be crowded. Those who hold tickets should remember that the first set of ten games starts promptly at nine p. m. The game will be a new one, you score a bullseye. An indoor turkey-shoot, you see.

"Rifle," on the same principle as keno, only you yell "Bang!" when

Membership is progressing slowly. Remember, gang, that a new Legion uniform awaits the high-score man. There is still plenty of time to have it ready to wear by Memorial Day. Everyone with a list should go after his prospects, hammer and tongs, because the post needs the members and he needs the points.

Some great improvements will be made in the dug-out, shortly. Tell you more about 'em later.

PLAN OF STRAITS BRIDGE OUTLINED

PROPOSAL SUBMITTED TO PWA FOR APPROVAL

Route of 25 Miles Over Islands, Causeways and Spans Would Cost $30,000,000

Details of the plans for the construction of the proposed bridge across the Straits of Mackinac were published recently by the St. Ignace Enterprise.

Because the bridge is of great interest to residents of Charlevoix and the surrounding territory, the story is reprinted. It follows in part:

According to plans, the bridge, including causeways, spans and routes across the intervening islands, would be just under 25 miles long, stretching from Duncan Bay at Cheboygan to St. Ignace by way of Bois Blanc, Round and Mackinac Islands. It would be 80 feet wide, carrying four lines of vehicular traffic and a double-tracked railroad.

The state is asking $35,000,000 for the project, but Governor Comstock declared that is an outside figure—that the structure probably could be built for $30,000,00. It is conceived as a self-liquidating project. Traffic counts, it is said, show that the cost can be retired out of tolls, no higher, and probably lower, than present ferry charges.

Engineers claim it would furnish jobs directly to from 4,000 to 5,000 men for four years, and indirect employment in upper Michigan to 10,000 persons. This is exclusive of labor that would be employed in fabricating steel elsewhere and producing other material. It is estimated 70 per cent of the money spent would go into labor.

—According to the plans, the fill out into the lake from Cheboygan would be one mile long, followed by 15 bridge spans, each 500 feet long, and one 700-foot drawbridge. A fill four miles long would then carry the highway onto Bois Blanc island. The highway the length of the island would be 11 miles long. A fill would connect Bois Blanc with Round island.

Between Round island and Mackinac island would be a 4,000-foot approach and a 2,500-foot cantilever span. Along Mackinac would be one and a half miles of causeway.

The jump from Mackinac to St. Ignace would be made over eight 600-foot spans, six 900-foot spans, one 700-foot draw and two miles of causeway.

Of the 25 miles, seven would be steel bridge and 18 causeways.

The state highway department would maintain the bridge as a part of the state highway system. Control of the finances, however, would be in the hands of the Mackinac Straits Bridge authority. Details of a proposed contract between the two bodies are to be put up to federal officials for approval.

It is generally known that though the meeting at Detroit did approve the submission of the long route bridge plan, that does not mean that the plan will be continued along the designated route. It was merely a technical means of getting the proposition before the PWA for consideration.

There are three plans for the bridge construction. "A" is the shortest route, from McGulpin's point to Point LaBarbe. "B" is a short route from Mackinaw City to North Graham shoals, forming an angle avoiding much ice pressure. This plans seems to be most favorably considered. Plan "C" is the one submitted, the Bois Blanc Island route.

CHARLEVOIX COURIER

VOLUME 39. NUMBER 48. EIGHT PAGES THE CHARLEVOIX COURIER, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 28, 1934 PRICE $2.00 PER YEAR

WINTER TAX RATE SLIGHTLY HIGHER

BOOST IN SCHOOL DEBT SERVICE IS LISTED

Charlevoix Property Owners Will Pay $19.25 per Thousand Compared With $17.53 in '33

Winter taxes which become payable on December 1st at the office of City Treasurer Robert E. Rife will be higher than last year, according to figures just released.

The rate as spread by the county will be $19.25 per thousand dollars valuation, as compared to $17.53 last year and $28.36 two years ago before the 15 mill tax limitation law went into effect.

	New	Old
County	$ 7.70	$ 8.00
Schools	1.70	5.00
State	.55	.53
School Debt	6.30	4.00
Total	$19.25	$17.53

However, the tax statements which Charlevoix property owners receive will carry different figures than those shown above, due to the fact the city tax is spread on the city valuation as set by the board of review last spring, which embodies a 20 per cent cut in valuation. The property owner who last year paid on a valuation of $1,000 this year pays on a valuation of $800, thus the total spread is not as large as it may appear in figures.

Spread against the city valuation the winter tax charged to Charlevoix property owners will appear per thousand dollars valuation as follows:

County	$ 9.48
Schools	5.78
State	.68
School Debt	7.76
Total	$23.70

The 1933 tax on a piece of property last year assessed at $1,000 was $17.53; this year the same property, assessed at $800, will pay a tax of $18.95.

The winter taxes go for county, state and school purposes. The rate includes a debt service of $6.30, compared with $4.00 a year ago, which was added by school district No. 1, Charlevoix city and township, to retire bonded indebtedness. The rate does not, however, include the extra two mills voted at the annual school meeting last July to cover cost of improvements and furnishing free text books. Approval at that time of the extra tax was on the condition the tax would be spread upon the valuation set by the city board of assessors, providing a straight 20 per cent cut. The tax is spread on the valuation set by the county board of equalization which did not recognize the city's cut, thus the extra two mills is not included.

The big reduction in taxes the past two years is due to the 15 mill tax limitation adopted by Michigan voters. By the new law the general property tax cannot be more than $15 per thousand dollars of valuation, except that an amount can be added as a debt service tax to meet certain previous obligations. In Charlevoix's case the obligation is the new grade building and gymnasium which is now in the process of retirement.

Taxes are payable without 4 per cent penalty for collection until January 9th, unless the penalty limit is later extended.

CHRISTMAS PROGRAM IS PLANNED BY PTA

SEWAGE DISPOSAL WORK UNDER WAY

WORK ON SLUDGE BEDS STARTED MONDAY

Activity Will Increase Steadily Upon Arrival of Materials and Necessary Equipment

Work on Charlevoix's sewage disposal system got under way this week on a small scale and operations will be increased steadily with the arrival of materials and equipment.

A force of ten men started work Monday at the site of the sludge beds near the city dumping grounds and this group was increased to fifteen Tuesday. Other men will be added as other divisions of the project are started.

The H. G. Christman-Lansing Co., contractors, have established offices in the O'Neil Taxi office on Bridge street. F. S. Reynolds is the engineer in charge of the project. Representing the PWA as government inspector is Don W. Bingham, who has established headquarters here.

It is understood some divisions of the work have been sub-let to the Sears Dock & Dredging Co. by the contractors, such as the channel crossing and excavation for the disposal plant.

Daily progress may be noted on the new municipal dock by the Sears Dock & Dredging Co. Most of the steel sheet piling has been driven and cleaning up of the old dock material and the former Wilbur warehouse is nearly finished. Work went ahead Saturday night and Sunday to rush completion of this project.

FERA RECREATION PROGRAM OFFERED

MUCH INTEREST SHOWN AT ORGANIZATION MEETING

Lodges, Legion, School Faculty and Others Organizing Teams for Participation in Program

Gratifying response and interest was manifest Monday and Tuesday evenings at meetings held for the purpose of organizing a winter recreational program in the Charlevoix schools under the FERA.

As a result, the formation of teams among fraternal orders, American Legion, school faculty and local Indians for men's basketball, volley ball, indoor baseball and other sports is now under way.

The program, for adults over 16 years of age and out of school, will be in charge of Dean Davenport and George Higman. Following the meeting a schedule of hours for the various sports was arranged and will soon be announced fully. No fee is charged for participation, although small sums may be collected to pay for purchase of equipment.

A similar organization meeting for women was held Tuesday evening and will result in a schedule of sports being set up.

Indications that a large class in music will result from the meetings are apparent. A good many adults have shown interest in this recreational feature afforded.

Other FERA classes, recently organized, are progressing. Manual training classes are being held each evening and sewing classes are being held both afternoon and evening in the community room in the grade building. Sewing classes have been divided in two groups to accommodate those desiring to attend in the afternoon and others desiring to come in the evening.

Despite the success of the venture so far, more interest must be shown in some of the classes to warrant their continuance, according to Supt. O. P. North.

APPROVAL OF STRAITS BRIDGE IS ANNOUNCED

Gov. Comstock Returns from Washington With Report

Governor Comstock Monday announced, on return from Washington where he conferred with Public Works officials, that the financial and engineering divisions of PWA have approved the $35,000,000 Straits bridge project.

The Governor said the legal department of PWA is expected to pass on the bridge proposal within the next few weeks, although funds must of necessity come from new congressional appropriations.

DOCTORS BACKING SALE OF TB SEALS

ANNUAL CAMPAIGN OPENS ON THANKSGIVING DAY

Forces Throughout State Begin Drive for Funds to Carry on Work Against Dreaded Disease

Urging Michigan residents to contribute generously to the annual sale of tuberculosis Christmas seals, beginning Thanksgiving, school doctors who carry the force of the public health campaign against disease right into the classroom have heartily endorsed the anti-tuberculosis movement in Michigan, the Michigan Tuberculosis Assn. made known today.

"We endorse the activities of the State Tuberculosis Assn. and all affiliated county organizations in their efforts to control and prevent the spread of tuberculosis infection, and we urge the co-operation of the general public in the support of these activities through the liberal purchase of tuberculosis Christmas Seals," read a resolution adopted by the Michigan Assn. of School Physicians recently.

This support was accompanied by three other resolutions designed to assist the Michigan Tuberculosis Assn. in its constant campaign against the disease.

One echoed sentiments voiced at the annual meeting of the Michigan Tuberculosis Assn. in October, by declaring that all high school athletes will be required to have tuberculin tests, and X-rays of the chest when indicated, as part of their annual physical examination. These tests and X-rays are made available with funds derived in the annual sale of tuberculosis Christmas seals and in some cases with the aid of co-operating agencies.

Speedy enactment of legislation favoring required testing of school employes was seen as the result of the School Physicians' invitation to teachers to help on that project. The doctors did not leave themselves out, either, passing measures requiring thorough tuberculosis examinations for all "school health workers" once a year.

For the past 28 years, the Michigan Tuberculosis Assn. has outlined many of the child health education programs carried out in Michigan schools. These programs and the material provided in them were made possible by the sale of tuberculosis Christmas seals, as were the tuberculin tests and X-rays in which the school physicians have assisted many times in the past.

CONSERVATION PATROL BOAT TO WINTER HERE

Will Complete Season's Work on Lakes December 15th

Completing its sixth year of patrol work on the Michigan waters of the Great Lakes, the Department of Conservation Patrol Boat No. 1 will go into winter quarters at Charlevoix December 15th to remain until opening of navigation again next spring.

Since it was commissioned in 1929, Patrol Boat No. 1 has covered more than 100,000 miles in its inspection of commercial fisheries and has uncovered a large number of violations of commercial fishing laws, some of them flagrant.

Several thousand pounds of illegal fish were confiscated by the crew of the boat during the past season and given to state institutions for needy families. In many cases charges were preferred against violators.

BASKETBALL SEASON OFF FRIDAY

PELLSTON-ELLSWORTH HERE FOR DOUBLE-HEADER

Double Bill Should Show Strength of C. H. S. Material—Fourteen Game Schedule Ahead

Friday, November 30th, will mark the opening of the 1934-35 basketball schedule of Charlevoix high school and this sport will provide the major interest for followers of high school athletics throughout the winter.

The initial contests of a 14-game schedule provide a double bill. Charlevoix's cagers, divided in two squads, will meet the varsity teams of Pellston and Ellsworth high schools. Creating more than usual interest in the appearance of the Ellsworth team is the fact that their coach is Max Novak, former head high school basketball star. The Pellston quintet, last year coached by Harold Ikens of this city, made a mark for itself in class D competition.

Coach Ray Kipke has not announced his starting line-ups for Friday's games. Practically the only ones certain of berths on the varsity squad are Charles Carey, Bob Pearl and Jack Foster, members of last year's team. Local fans figure Coach Kipke will use Friday night's games as a means of testing the ability of reserves seeking positions and that the performance shown will go a long way toward determining the future regulars.

Carey, last year a guard, is being groomed for center position. Pearl held down a forward berth last year and Foster played guard. There are several promising candidates in the group of 22 who have been out since practice started over two weeks ago.

EXTENSION GROUP HAD THEIR SECOND MEETING

The second meeting of Charlevoix Group 1, home extension work, was held November 19th and a special meeting November 26th at the home of Mrs. Sylvia Miles.

The topic was "Dress Accessories." The members cut patterns of collars, scarfs, berets and handbags from styles displayed. The next meeting will be held in January at the home of Mrs. Miles.

EXPLAIN USES OF MARL TO FARMERS

TEN MEETINGS ARRANGED IN CHARLEVOIX COUNTY

Project to Furnish Marl for Farms Will Be Supervised by County Rehabilitation Committee

(By B. C. Mellencamp)

A very important series of meetings has been arranged for the week of December 3-7, by B. C. Mellencamp, county agricultural agent.

In each meeting the big topic will be the use of marl, and the arranging of details to open up several marl beds in communities where there are sufficient orders for this material. This will be a county-wide project and will be supervised by the rural rehabilitation committee in Charlevoix county. In making marl available at the very nominal cost of twenty-five cents per yard, welfare labor will be used which of course cuts down the expense considerably.

It is hoped that the farmers in the county will attend one of these meetings and assist in working out some of the details. Briefly the project will be organized if a sufficient yardage of marl is ordered by the farmers. Obviously no bed of marl can be included in our county-wide plans unless several hundred yards are demanded by the farmers in that particular community. If the soil is sour and an effort is being made to improve the productivity the most profitable investment is to sweeten the land. Marl can be used for this purpose somewhat better than any other lime product, because of its low cost and accessibility.

We are most anxious that you attend one of the meetings. Bring a neighbor with you. This is no doubt the best opportunity to sweeten the soil that will ever be offered. Here is the schedule:

Monday, December 3rd — Deer Lake Grange, 10:00 a. m.; Horton Bay I. O. O. F. Hall, 2:00 p. m.

Tuesday, December 4th—Peninsula Grange 10:00 a. m.; South Arm Grange, 2:00 p. m.

Wednesday, December 5th—Rock Elm Grange, 10:00 a. m.; Ironton Grange, 2:00 p. m.

Thursday, December 6th—Marion Center Grange, 10:00 a. m.; Barnard Grange, 2:00 p. m.

Friday, December 7th — Boyne Falls Grange, 10:00 a. m.; Maple Grove Grange, 2:00 p. m.

Please mark on the calendar the time, date, and place. If you have marl in your community we would be glad to have you bring a sample with you so that it may be tested

RABBITS ONLY LEGAL GAME AFTER NOV. 30TH

Hunting in Lower Peninsula Remains Open Until January 31

All but one of the remaining open hunting seasons in Michigan will come to a close Friday, November 30th, according to an announcement by the Game Division, Department of Conservation.

The last day of November marks the close of legal deer and bear hunting in the open counties of the state and the end of the season for hunting raccoon in the lower peninsula.

Hunting for cottontail rabbits and varying hare will remain legal in both the lower and upper peninsulas until January 31st, the Game Division reports. Hunting for such species as bobcats, coyotes, wolves and foxes will remain permissable after January 31st provided the hunter carries a small-game license and proper gun permit.

Trapping for beaver, muskrat, opossum, raccoon and mink is now in full swing. Beaver trapping in all of the counties of the upper peninsula and of the lower peninsula north of Townline 20, except Benzie, Manistee and Wexford, began legal November 25th. The season comes to an end December 20th.

The muskrat trapping setason closes November 30th in the upper peninsula, but continues to December 15th and December 31st, inclusive, in the respective zones of the lower peninsula. Under the zone system raccoon may be taken by trappers in the lower peninsula as late as December 15th and badger as late as January 31st.

CORN-HOG CONTRACTS FOR 1935 ANNOUNCED

New Contract Will Continue Benefit Payments for Reductions

If producers participate in the 1935 adjustment program for corn and hogs in the same numbers as for 1934, the total adjustment payments are expected to run between 150 million and 165 million dollars. The new contract for 1935 was endorsed by a majority of over two-thirds of all producers voting in the corn-hog referendum in October.

In 1935, as in 1934, the corn-hog production program will be voluntary and will be carried out largely by the farmers themselves through their community committees and county control associations.

The corn provisions of the contract limit the corn acreage to 90 per cent of the average for the two years 1932 and 1933—the same base as for 1934. Individual signers may, if they wish, hold out of production anywhere from 10 to 30 per cent of the two-year base average and receive corn benefit payments in proportion. For complying with the corn control provisions, the individual signer will derive the following benefits: (1) a corn adjustment payment; (2) unrestricted use of the land shifted from corn production; and (3) eligibility to participate in any government corn loan program that may be available in the fall of 1935. The corn adjustment payment will be made at the rate of 35 cents per bushel of yield estimated for the number of acres by which the corn land area is kept below the 1932-33 average. In 1935, the "withheld" acres may be located on any part of the farm.

The hog provisions are: The individual contract signer is to limit the number of hogs produced for market from 1935 litters to 90 per cent of the adjusted average number produced from 1932 and 1933 litters. For complying with the new contract, the participating producer will receive a hog adjustment payment of $15 per head on the number of hogs represented by the 10 per cent adjustment. One-half of this payment will be made upon acceptance of the contract by the Secretary of Agriculture. The final payment, less the contract signer's pro rata of the local administrative expenses, will be made on or about January 1, 1936.

Silver-plated Thingumabobs?

COSTLY knickknacks and gorgeous gadgets—or sane practical gifts chosen wisely with a thought of the person to receive them—our homes today have their share of both. And there is a lesson in this for all of us.

Though too much emphasis must not be put on the material side of Christmas, it is well to consider that more money is spent at this season than at any other time of the year. But what percentage of this great expenditure can be classed as a true investment in happiness? How many of our own dollars have been spent unwisely?

A review of our Christmas purchasing, and that done for us by others, reveals that articles outstanding for known and unquestioned value are invariably those well and regularly advertised.

Here is a reliable guide-post for the spending of the family income during the coming year. Be familiar with the products which are advertised in this newspaper. Read about them daily. Such a wise basis of purchasing is an assurance of a full dollar's value for every dollar spent. And a happier Christmas for everybody.

GERMAN PIGEON, WAR CAPTIVE, IS ENJOYING LIFE

Sixteen years ago, just before the end of the World war, writes Helen C. Loomis in the Detroit News, American soldiers participating in the St. Mihiel drive in France found two homing pigeons, Rheingold and Helene, in a dugout that had been occupied by German soldiers. Both birds were taken captive and Rheingold, since rechristened Wilhelm, is still alive and enjoying good health at the pigeon lofts of the U. S. A. signal corps at Fort Monmouth, N. J., Capt. Edgar L. Clewell, public relations officer of the signal corps, reports.

A number of other pigeons were captured by American forces during the war, but Wilhelm is the sole survivor of them all and likewise holds the distinction of being the only one of all of them to claim the Royal Bavarian lofts as his first home. He still wears with pride the band bearing the imprint of the German royal crown and crest, proof of his former associations with royalty.

Like that other Wilhelm, who was destined to spend so many years of his life on alien soil, and for whom he was named by his American captors when it was discovered through his leg band that he had been bred in the Royal Bavarian lofts, the pigeon Wilhelm carries his years well. For at seventeen, an age at which most homing pigeons have long since passed on, he appears as hale and hearty as many much younger birds, nor has he lost his excellent homing instincts.

New Silhouette on Style Horizon

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

WATCH silhouettes! Startling changes are taking place in the "lines" of the newer fashions. The lovely creature centered in the group pictured, is wearing a dress which tells at a glance what is happening in the way of a radical departure from the sleek, suave and beguiling mermaid type of formal gowns which have been gracing the evening scene this many a season.

Not that the glamorous form-fitting effects have entirely gone into oblivion, on the contrary fashion is highlighting any number of slender gowns for the winter social season, although even these are undergoing certain subtle changes which add greatly to their fascination. Perhaps the most outstanding innovation in connection with the sheathlike frocks now worn is their slit hemlines. It is with baffling ingenuity that designers are maneuvering these slits and splits and slashes that ease up the hemline to allow freedom of movement for the wearer.

At one of its recent monthly fashion glimpses and style exhibits the Chicago wholesale market council displayed among scores of equally as fetching numbers the three ultra smart costumes in the illustration. They clearly demonstrate new trends in present and coming silhouettes.

The entracing gown centered in the picture bears a twofold message. At the same time that it tells of the revival of quaint and picturesque full-skirted evening dresses, it bears tidings of the return of stiff grandiose stand-alone types of silks such as in days of yore were the pride and joy of fashion's elite. Not for decades have our eyes beheld such silks as these—crisp, rustling taffetas, high-grade moires, and satins of superior quality together with regal velvets, likewise an imposing array of glittering, sumptuous lame weaves which add yet more glamor to the pageantry of gala fabrics.

It is very important to remember about the new full-gored skirts that the flare widens after it leaves the waistline thus, as you will note in the picture, avoiding destroying the slender hipline which women so covet. The high-standing Medici collar made of quilted silver lame is as radical as is fullness of the skirt.

The narrow straight lines of the stunning supper-club gown to the left directly contrasts the new fullness just described. The very voguish fashion of slashing taut hemlines almost to the knee is frankly declared in this model. This velvet costume is superbly colorful. It combines black tulip (in Paris they call it tulip noir) for the dress and cape with a bright fuchsia tone for the lining, the gloves and the flowers at the throat.

A suave sheathlike styling is given to the distinguished restaurant gown to the right. This is the type of dress which calls for a dressy little dinner hat to be worn with it. Ultra sophisticated it is in fabric as well as line. The material is the new ribbed cire. Lacquer-finished weaves of this sort are in high style this season. The slit or, rather, opening in the hemline is adroitly concealed under the panel streamline train. Rhinestone buttons fasten the bodice above at the back and the sleeves almost halfway to the elbow. A gorgeous rhinestone ornament defines the waistline at the top of the panel back.

This story of new silhouettes would not be complete were we to fail to at least mention that in direct contrast to the role de style and other full-skirted effects, there is a movement toward introducing empire high-waist lines topping skirts of tall sheathlike stature. Then, too, there are many form-fitting princess dresses, with stream-line fullness let in at the back via shirred, pleated and flutty cut flares. Of course, you should know of the new bloused backs and the Russian influence as reflected in the Cossack tunics now the rage, also in the recent tall turbans and the smart high necks, and especially the trend to things Tyrolean. The adoption of monk-like drapes together with cord and tassel fastenings for simple woolen daytime frocks, is another recent gesture.

©, Western Newspaper Union.

TURN DINNER DRESS INTO EVENING GOWN

A dinner costume developed in black crepe and silver lame, the crepe the skirt, the lame the blouse, can be used for a complete new evening dress by simply removing the jacket-blouse and there you stand in a low decolletage back.

Many cocktail frocks and dinner dresses introduce beaded accents, just on the bodice or the bonic, with jet beads, sequins and rhinestones. All employed at once.

Your shirtwaist type of dress is still good—it seems to be having a long and popular day, remaining good for daytime or dinner wear.

Don't forget that daytime necklines are high at will, figure or select your neckline so that it can be worn up or low and open.

Pink and brown are a grand combination for evening. We saw a pink crepe satin with brown accents in the girdle and flower trimming.

Glossy Type Leather Is the Vogue in Shoe Wear

Smooth shoe leathers assume renewed importance, according to models seen at the recent leather show, of unusual prominence are the smooth, very glossy types which have almost the luster of silk.

Combinations of different types of texture in like color in one shoe is another noticeable feature. Patent leather is combined with calf, for example, or calf with suede.

Heavy grain leathers, prominently embossed, are of secondary importance in the spring showings, but are still to be seen in many lines, especially in sport shoes.

PLAID NECKWEAR

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

First we would call attention to the smart "lines" of the youthful velvet gown. It is the new beltless princess form-fitting effect which is the latest vogue going. This simple silhouette is exactly what women who know fashion are seeking. The big collar and wide cuffs are of metal-woven taffeta silk. The smartest accessory sets worn this season are made of metal shot fabrics or perhaps quilted lame in gold or silver.

STRING HOLDER SUNBONNET GIRL

Why All Blame on "the Woman"?

Age-Old Plaint, Revived, Is Distasteful to Real Intelligence.

The former prime minister of one of the smaller European countries recently made a spectacular public announcement in which he blamed all the country's ills on a woman.

And of ills there are many—as in how many other European countries today! Unemployment, poor harvests, political unrest—all the evils of these hard times the ex-premier enumerated, and then—blamed them on one woman!

The woman has for years been known throughout the world as the mistress of the king, who long ago gave up his crown and his loveless marriage to live with her in exile and seclusion. A few years ago he was restored to his throne, and it developed that their separation was less permanent than the king's supporters had hoped it would be. She is back in the country, again the king's close companion. And now all the nation's troubles, from the fall of thirteen cabinets down to everything but drouth, is laid at her door.

"As long as Mme. —— remains in the country," says the former prime minister, "nobody will be able to accomplish anything. She is responsible for all our evils. I suggest we should hold party meetings all over our country to clear up this scandal."

Far be it from this column to hold any brief for the king's mistress. Whatever her real nature, or the circumstances that brought her into the picture, her existence must be distasteful to us. But in throwing upon this woman the blame for all the ills afflicting a nation there is something no less distasteful to our intelligence, unless it happens to strike first our sense of humor.

How easy it is always to blame things on "the woman in the case!" Women, especially the "woman in the case," can cause a good deal of trouble. But if we look deep enough into these cases where everything is heaped upon a woman, we will usually find some man who is not entirely blameless. Not minimizing the devastating powers of many of our sex, it must be pointed out that most men know very well what they want, and very few allow themselves to be used by a woman. To blame the ills of a nation on a woman, in this day and age, will strike most of us as just a bit funny.

If you tire easily—

why not reason out the cause of this unnatural condition?

Your first thought may be, "I must eat more." That's not all. You should enjoy what you do eat. Frequently, the blood cells are low... and this, perhaps, is what makes you feel weak. If this is your trouble the stomach may not be calling for sufficient food. Zest to eat may be lacking. But what a difference S.S.S. makes when taken just before meals. Just try it and notice how your appetite and digestion improve.

S.S.S. stimulates the flow of gastric juices and also supplies the precious mineral elements so necessary in blood-cell and hemo-glo-bin up-building. Do try it. It may be the rainbow you need to brush away present discouragement over your health condition.

Do not be blinded by the efforts of a few unethical dealers who may suggest substitutes. You have a right to insist that S.S.S. be supplied you on request. Its long years of preference is your guarantee of satisfaction.

DANGEROUS SHOALS

Governor Ely, of Massachusetts, severely arraigns the American public for its loss of economic, moral and spiritual values, clearly pointing out the dangerous shoals toward which the ship of state has been drifting in recent years. Either there must be a regeneration of the fundamentals of common honesty and decency in all things, or we are lost, he points out. The people must be aroused to a true sense of the danger which exists, there can be no compromise with underworld activities. To allow present conditions to continue is an admission of weakness in government, a sign of decaying democracy. The bootlegger, the kidnapper, the labor racketeer, the dishonest politician, the corrupt police official, the unpatriotic statesman, crooked bankers, fake bond salesmen, lotteries, gambling devices, every particle of legislative machinery devised for preying upon honest citizenship must be eliminated from our national picture. It is a hollow boast of civilized progress when kidnapping strikes terror to the mother's heart; bandits leisurely loot a bank while spraying the city square with machine gun bullets; men can be hired to murder innocent citizens for a few dollars; lotteries and gambling devices that reach out even for the children's pennies; stagnant apathy of the public actually placing a premium on wrong-doing. Clean house or be cleaned! The battle has already begun!

HE WILL SUCCEED

Governor-elect Frank D. Fitzgerald sets for himself a big undertaking in announcing his intention to lower the cost of state government ten million dollars without impairing its efficiency or seriously crippling institutional requirements. This he believes can be done by cutting away all needless expenditures, duplication of government, and closely checking and closing all avenues of waste. The long experience in state affairs of the governor-elect ably fits him for this task. His position, no new taxes under any consideration is well taken. The people, grown tax conscious, will no longer permit public spendthrifts to remain in office. Today they are demanding more and more actual service for their tax dollar. With the membership of the House evenly divided, a majority of the state administrative board to opposite political faith, it is to be expected that most of his reform measures will be closely questioned, if not actually opposed. However, with the diplomatic ability Mr. Fitzgerald has always shown in going along with the other fellow when the state benefits, it is not too much to expect that the major portion of his program for reducing government costs will be woven into state fabric. We know he will succeed. Clearly Michigan faces a new day in the management of its affairs.

HERE AND ABROAD

An American author returning from a visit in European countries, draws a sharp contrast between conditions here and abroad. In foreign countries he found inhabitants impoverished and hardened, and driven by force and fanaticism. "In Europe the physical facade of civilization is crumbling," he says, "dirt and disorder gain daily ground; and bitterness, hatred and despair drive more and more men to plunge from mad theory to madder action, threatening to topple civilization down the slope of war into an unspeakable abyss." Speaking of fascist and communist rule, he says: "The fascists expel or murder the fellow-citizens they do not like; the communists starve them into abjection by allowing them only 600 grams a month of basic foodstuffs at prohibitive prices." "The menace of both fascism and communism," he says, "is not that they seek to control economic production and the distribution of material goods, but that they threaten the soul of man." In America he finds a more humane civilization with the processes of living less difficult than in other lands. He says: "I find, indeed, that here and here alone there is order, liberty and peace." Here there is no interference with religious beliefs or the education of children. Here there is liberty of the press and of speech, for which the returned traveler is truly grateful.

TRUE LOVE

A spectacular shotgun wedding took place in Washington the other day when Nira, eldest daughter of Miss Democracy, was united in the dubious bonds of matrimony to Mr. Unhappy Industry, noted scion of the House of Capitalism. The nuptials were witnessed by a large concourse of near and distant relatives of both bride and groom, including prominent members of the United States Chamber of Commerce and the President's cabinet. At a family conference held immediately following the ceremony it was decided that the young couple should set up national housekeeping for the present with the parents of the groom. Prominent among the gifts displayed was a mammoth but slightly used Blue Eagle direct from the White House. On a nearby table arranged in the form of a gigantic American rose were countless international bonds sent by relatives of the young man, highly valuable, not for their intrinsic worth, but for sentimental reasons, as the large tear splashes on them would indicate. Following country newspaper tradition we wish the young folks long years of wedded bliss, with the hope that should their union be heaven blessed they'll have the good sense to give the youngster an old-fashioned name and not just a set of initials.

Every community has individuals worthy of aid who get none from the government.

DIXIE THRILLS

Michigan taxpayers should not lose sight of the fact that most of the thrills experienced by President Roosevelt during his recent tour of inspection of TVA activities in the Tennessee valley, were the results of lavish expenditure of public funds in that sparsely settled region, a substantial portion of which was furnished by the income tax payers of this state. The President, according to dispatches, draws a happy picture of extending similar projects into other parts of the nation for the purpose of bringing cheaper electrical power to the people, yet overlooks explaining why it is that Tupelo, Miss., with its own municipally owned electrical plant which he picks as a model, has rates proportionately higher than nearby cities serviced by privately owned power plants. Visitors returning northward from that section tell of expanding business conditions, and that is true. Prosperity would start flowing back into Michigan under similar governmental bounty, but isn't it asking a bit too much that this state, faced with its own monumental problems of recovery, should be compelled to buy electrical stoves for its Southern neighbors while its own children are cold and hungry?

THE HYMN SINGERS

The overwhelming success of the democratic party at the polls is being hailed by the New Dealers as marking the end of the republican party as a political force in the nation. Already the hymn singers are busy at the obsequies—it has become a national dirge. Their Te Deum "hic jacket" might be considered serious were this the first time it happened, but history tells us that hardly have the hymn singers put aside their choral vestments when the picture starts undergoing a change. Even our young folks can recall the time when the "chicken in every pot" champion swung from the floor and nearly drove the "happy warrior" from the banks of the Hudson into eternal political night. Yet less than two years later the nation began to smile over the Hoover congressional victories, first thunders heralding the debacle of 1932. Public sentiment sometimes has a way of reversing itself that is disconcerting even to the major prophets. Right now Upton Sinclair is claiming a foul, the radio priest is forming a new party; and Maine has gone wet for the first time since the Civil War. Beyond the fact that it will be plenty, nobody knows what two short years will bring forth. In the meantime let the hymn singers chant—it helps them to keep up their courage.

PATERNALISM

No plan of centralization has ever been adopted which did not result in bureaucracy, tyranny, inflexibility, reaction and decline. Of all the forms of government those exercised by bureaus are about the least satisfactory to an enlightened people. Being irresponsible, they become autocratic, and being autocratic they resist all development. Unless bureaucracy is constantly resisted it breaks down representative government and overwhelms democracy. It is the one element of our institutions that sets up the pretense of having authority over everbody and being responsible to nobody.—Calvin Coolidge.

CHRISTMAS SEAL SUNDAY

It is entirely fitting, as a churchman said recently, "that the churches of Michigan draw attention in their services to a movement such as that represented by the Michigan Tuberculosis Association and its affiliated societies, a movement as devoted to unselfish service as any in the world today."

Guarding the public health, with its kinship to the medical profession, is one of the few last strongholds of service provided on a truly not-for-profit basis.

By reason of their professions, therefore, the physician and the public health worker come closer, perhaps, to fulfilling the ideal existence than almost any other persons in active life, unless it be members of the clergy.

How really worthwhile it is then, that the churches join in endorsing the annual sale of tuberculosis Christmas seals and mark it by "Christmas Seal Sunday," December 2nd.

The sale opens officially on Thanksgiving Day, lasting until Christmas and everyone in the state and nation is invited to take active part in supporting this public health service to themselves.

Buy and use tuberculosis Christmas seals!

SOCIETY'S YARDSTICK

It is not how many who die, but the circumstances surrounding each death which provides society with the yardstick used to measure public reaction regarding the annual toll of human lives through violence. A little girl meets a horrible fate at the hands of a degenerate. Instantly a city, state and nation join in frenzied search for the slayer. Yet in the very same issue of the newspapers carrying this story of child violation may be found a dozen other accidental deaths caused by traffic accidents over a single week-end in Michigan, scarcely noticed by the readers in their constant search for the melodramatic. Somewhere a human life is sacrificed in the foul smelling cesspool of the eternal triangle, a sordid story of domestic infelicity that flares into streamer headlines completely eclipsing news dispatches telling of 26 men going to their deaths in the north country because of careless hunters. This seeming indifference, this refusal of the public to make itself felt unless thoroughly aroused through some sensational agency, is one of the underlying causes of the ever-growing tribute we are paying to the gods of carelessness.

RETAIL BUYING

There is scarcely a single community in the country that has not felt the effects of wholesale emergency relief spending by the national government. Mostly this increased activity is to be found in the consumption goods market, and not in the durable goods line, which continues to lag behind all other phases of national recovery. Right now retail trade furnishes the brightest spot in the business picture. It has been running recently above the corresponding levels of last year both in dollar amounts and in actual volume of merchandise. The controlling factor appears to be the relief and emergency expenditures of the government which have this autumn been running about ten million dollars a day in addition to agricultural bonus payments. Naturally such federal spending creates trade activity.

A pioneer is a fellow who can remember back when a processing tax on cotton would have had half the women in the nation going bare legged.

We don't know when the next war will break out but we do know that this is time to work for peace.

CONVENIENT DAIRY LOANS ARE AVAILABLE TO FARMERS

How dairymen can obtain short-term loans to finance their farming operations is explained in a circular recently received from A. J. Townsend, secretary-treasurer of the Gaylord Production Credit Association.

The pamphlet explains how competent dairy farmers can borrow to buy feed, cows, machinery, or to refinance indebtedness incurred for these purposes. The circular states that farmers may also borrow from their production credit associations to finance the production, harvesting and marketing of crops and for general agricultural uses.

At the present time, the interest rate on these loans is 5 per cent a year payable when the loan is due and charged only for the time the farmer-borrower has the money. Thus when loans are obtained in installments or repaid in installments out of monthly milk or cream checks, they are able to make substantial savings in their interest charges.

The pamphlet, "Production Loans to Dairymen," Circular D of a series on production loans to farmers, is available for free distribution by the association.

AGRICULTURAL CENSUS WILL START JANUARY 2

Farmers Invited to Write for Sample List of Questions

Among the important governmental activities undertaken primarily for the benefit of the farmers is the Census of Agriculture which will be taken beginning on January 2, 1935. The Fifteen Decennial Census Act approved June 19, 1929, directed the Census Bureau to make this farm enumeration in 1935. The reports will be for the calendar year, 1934.

The accuracy of the information procured will be directly reflected in the statistical work carried on in the farmers behalf. Intelligent business methods must be applied in the successful operation of farms in this day and age and these methods will fail unless farmers and farm organizations have accurate knowledge of actual conditions in various sections of the country. For example, it is useless to increase the production of any crop if the figures show there is overproduction of that crop.

Every farmer and rancher should write immediately to the Bureau of the Census, Washington, D. C., for one of the sample schedules so that they will have an opportunity to study the questions and be prepared to give full and accurate information when the enumerator calls at their home in January.

FARM REAL ESTATE VALUES RISE 20 PCT.

SCHOOL IN THE SKY

The headmaster of a Dutch school has conceived the brilliant idea of using an air liner to teach geography. Instead of trooping dolefully into their classroom, the children now eagerly take their seats in the airplane, each with a map beside him and a pair of earphones. While the flight is in progress, the geography master, sitting before a microphone in the fore part of the cabin, points out and explains the features of the countryside below, and the pupils check his remarks on their maps. A prearranged section of the Netherlands is taken with each flight. The children, it is found, absorb their lessons with 20 times the enthusiasm shown on the ground.—Tit-Bits Magazine.

Why Hospitals Use a Liquid Laxative

Hospitals and doctors have always used liquid laxatives. And the public is fast returning to laxatives in liquid form. Do you know the reasons?

The dose of a liquid laxative can be measured. The action can thus be regulated to suit individual need. It forms no habit; you need not take a "double dose" a day or two later. Nor will a mild liquid laxative irritate the kidneys.

The right dose of a liquid laxative brings a more natural movement, and there is no discomfort at the time, nr after.

The wrong cathartic may often do more harm than good.

A properly prepared liquid laxative like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin brings safe relief from constipation. It gently helps the average person's bowels until nature restores them to regularity. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is an approved liquid laxative which all druggists keep ready for use. It makes an ideal family laxative; effective for all ages, and may be given the youngest child.

And Louder

Money talks, but debts keep on talking longer than money.

COLDS Creomulsion

Your own druggist is authorized to cheerfully refund your money on the spot if you are not relieved by Creomulsion.

WATCH YOUR KIDNEYS!

Be Sure They Properly Cleanse the Blood

YOUR kidneys are constantly filtering impurities from the blood stream. But kidneys get functionally disturbed—ing in their work—fail to remove the poisonous body wastes.

Then you may suffer nagging backache, attacks of dizziness, burning, scanty or too frequent urination, getting up at night, swollen feet and ankles, rheumatic pains; feel "all worn out."

Don't delay! For the quicker you get rid of these poisons, the better your chances of good health.

Use Doan's Pills. Doan's are for the kidneys only. They tend to promote normal functioning of the kidneys; should help them pass off the irritating poisons. Doan's are recommended by users the country over. Get them from any druggist.

It has been estimated that Michigan has more than 5,000 lakes with a total area of 712,861 acres. The largest of these is Houghton lake, in Roscommon county, which is 30.8 square miles in area, and 9.3 long by 5.2 miles wide.

John Sherman in Politics

John Sherman of Mansfield, Ohio, entered politics as soon as he was old enough to vote with such enthusiasm that in 1848, when he was only twenty-five years old, he was sent to the National Whig convention at Philadelphia as one of the delegates from the Thirteenth Ohio district. A natural leader as well as a natural politician, he was in public service in four positions for nearly 43 years, a record so far unequaled.

The Light of Stars

There are several astronomical theories concerning the light of stars. One is that the brilliancy of stars is changed by another heavenly body passing in front of them, partially obscuring the stars and thus reducing the amount of light sent to the earth. Another theory proclaims that the stars themselves, for some reason or other, pulsate much as a human being's chest does in breathing, and thus the intensity of their light is varied.

TRUE DETECTIVE STORY

by Vance Wynn © Public Ledger

The Modern Jekyll and Hyde Mystery

THERE is nothing particularly sensational in a single robbery in one section of a city but when a dozen occur in as many nights and they all show evidence of having been committed by the same person, it is time to sit up and take notice.

That was the feeling of the Brooklyn police not long ago when indignant householders came, one after another, to enter complaints about a strange man who was terrorizing the peaceful city of Churches.

Detective Krummel was detailed to make an investigation, and he did it with the thoroughness with which the modern detective is compelled to work when he matches his wits against the expert criminal.

One of the victims was the minister of a prominent Methodist Episcopal church. Krummel first obtained a description of all the stolen goods, and then with the assistance of the police bureau, he made inquiry in all the pawnbroking establishments of the city.

One of the articles that had been purloined was a handsome watch, which happened to have certain marks upon it by which it could readily be identified.

After the lapse of some days this watch was found in a Brooklyn pawnshop.

The proprietor said the bit of jewelry had been pawned by a young woman.

It required time and ingenuity to trace this person but she was found eventually, and when questioned said that the watch had been given to her by another woman.

This second woman was located and she said that it had been given to her by one James Hafey.

It was not difficult to find the residence of this man, but when the detective went there he was confronted by an unusual state of affairs.

The wife of James Hafey was at home, and she proved to be a woman of culture and refinement. The home also gave every evidence of being that of persons in good, if not affluent circumstances.

When she learned of the charge that was made against her husband she was amazed and indignant.

Mrs. Hafey said that she had been married for some years and that her husband was employed by the United States government at a salary of something like $199 a week.

His working hours, she said, were from four in the afternoon until shortly after midnight.

He was a model husband in every way, and was extremely generous to her.

She was unable to state the exact nature of his employment, but said that he spent all excepting his working hours with her.

Together they visited the art galleries and places of amusement and altogether had an ideal and happy existence.

It was a perplexing situation, because if the suspicions of the police were true, this man must be a regular Raffles, if not a modern counterpart of the celebrated Jekyll and Hyde.

One of the victims of the robberies was a merchant who complained of the loss of a quantity of jewelry belonging to his wife.

A watch was set upon the old Mr. Hafey, and this particular victim was stationed in a place where he could see the suspect without being seen.

After the test had been made he said:

"I have no doubt about it. This man is the same person whom I saw coming down the driveway of my home on the evening that the robbery took place."

This was important, but it was not quite sufficient for legal evidence.

The detective managed to get into the house of Hafey at a time when he was not at home, and he made a thorough search of the premises.

In a room that was kept locked he found a quantity of goods that scarcely belonged to the couple.

The find included seven suitcases filled with jewelry, furs, silver, cut glass and numerous articles of women's wear.

One of the detectives said at the time: "Judging from the number of things that have been identified by the owners Hafey must have committed something like thirty burglaries between the first of January and the middle of April."

He was taken into custody amid the tears and protestations of his wife. Personally he was silent but the magistrate before whom he was taken held him in $10,000 bail to await the action of the second jury.

The Cherokee Alphabet

The Cherokee alphabet was invented by Sequoya, a member of the Cherokee tribe, observes a writer in the Washington Star. The importance of the art of writing and printing as instruments and weapons of civilization began to impress him in 1809, and he studied undismayed by the disparagement and ridicule of his fellows, to elaborate a system of writing suitable to the Cherokee language. In 1821 he submitted his syllabary to the chief men of the nation, and on their approval the Cherokee of all ages set about to learn it with such zeal that after a few months thousands were able to read and write their language.

BLOUSE SERVING DOUBLE PURPOSE

Patterns 9132 and 9133

One of the most pleasant things about the returning vogue of the suit is that blouses are again high style. Women who pride themselves upon the ability to make a limited budget go a long way love their blouses. Think of the same suit, for instance, with the two different blouses sketched today. Pattern 9133 is a simple affair of tailored lines with pleats that flare out at the bottom in a chic little peplum effect. Pattern 9132 has its becoming surplice accentuated by a graceful frill.

Pattern 9132 may be ordered only in sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44. Size 36 requires 2¼ yards 39 inch fabric.

Pattern 9133 may be ordered only in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 2¾ yards 39 inch fabric.

Complete, diagrammed sew chart included.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, the STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

Send your order to Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 232 West Eighteenth Street, New York.

KEEP THE HOME FIRES BURNING

(By The Christmas Seal Doctor)

In these shivery mornings and cooler nights, hungry flames keep the front pages of the newspapers alight with fire stories and the tales of serious injury—sometimes death—from burns.

The Christmas Seal Doctor would warn all mothers to be especially careful of the young child who may not differeatiate between the bright yellow streak that was part of the Hallowe'en decorations and the bright yellow streak that often causes life-long damage.

Hot stoves and radiators should be guarded, if possible, by a railing, screen, or a cover that won't conduct heat. When burns do occur, no matter how trivial they may seem, first aid sense should tell you to cover them immediately with a prepared salve, or lard, or any substance with a grease base that will keep air from the burn.

If there is any difficulty about removing clothing from around a burn, don't remove it. Call your family physician immediately and put the case entirely in his hands, as a burn that has gone this far needs his experienced attention. In fact, any burn that takes in more than an inch or two of territory, should be taken to him, at least for examination.

Keep the home fires burning—safely.—Michigan Tuberculosis Association.

ENDURING SERVICE

The oldest concrete pavement in the world was laid in Gillespie Crescent, Edinburgh, Scotland, in 1862. It is still in good condition and rendering the same service it has given for 72 years.

The first concrete street in the United States was laid in Bellfontaine, O., in 1892, says the Baltimore Sun. It, too, still is in good condition and giving dependable service. An even more remarkable example of the slow wear of concrete surfaces is a photograph showing the imprint of a tree leaf which fell in 1916 on the soft surface of concrete roadway then being built.

Someone evidently pressed the leaf into the concrete making a perfect impression of each vein and other features like the print of ancient leaves sometimes found as fossils. Ever since 1916 this concrete "fossil" has been exposed to traffic passing over the road. Yet the wear of the concrete has been so small that the leaf impression still is almost as clear as when it was made.

Concrete is claimed to be the most permanent road and pavement material ever devised. The world's oldest pavements were made of bricks sometimes put together with asphalt in temple courtyards in ancient Babylonia; but these did not wear well is proved by evidences of frequent relaying and repair even in Babylania days. The Romans used materials similar to concrete in some acqueducts and other stonewark, but seldom if ever in pavements. The famous Roman roads were made of loose stones like modern cobblestones and also required frequent repairs.—Detroit Free Press.

THE POLITICIAN

The politician is a man who seeks to attain the special objects of particular interest. If he is the leader of a political party he will try either to purchase the support of particular interests by specific pledges, or if that is impracticable, he will employ some farm of deception. I include under the term deception the whole art of propaganda, whether it consists of half-truths, lies, ambiguities, evasions, calculated silence, red herrings, unresponsiveness, slogans, catch-words, showmanship, bathos, hokum and buncombe. They are, one and all, methods of preventing a disinterested inquiry into the situation . . . . Sooner or later the politician because he deals in unrealities, is found out. Then he either goes to jail, or he is tolerated cynically as a picturesque and amicable scoundrel; or he retires and ceases to meddle with the destinies of men.—Walter Lippman, in "A Preface to Morals."

CONCENTRATION

How many times we hear the statement made that two per cent of the people own 80 per cent of the wealth. Similarly a recent report of a federally appointed committee states that one-per-cent of the people own 60 per cent of the wealth. Such claims cannot be supported by adequate evidence, for we do not have in this country official statistics on the distribution of wealth. No one knows even approximately how it is distributed. Some efforts have been made to gather information about the distribution of income, taking the year 1929 as being most available for this purpose. From the careful study made, 10 per cent of the richest people were found to be getting 34.6 per cent of the national income, while ten per cent of the poorest people received 3.1 per cent. While the gap separating these two extremes is not as great in the United States as in most European countries, yet the majority of leading economists are agreed that it must be still further reduced if we are to continue as a capitalistic nation.

A COMMENDABLE ACT

The resignation of Governor-elect Frank D. Fitzgerald from the office of secretary of state in order that he may devote all his time to preparing for the January session of the Legislature is a refreshing example of intelligent public service.

A good deal of time and money can be saved the state if the governor-elect gets together with key members of the legislature and formulates in advance of the session a definite legislative program. After that is done, when the legislature meets it knows where it is going and how to get there. Weeks do not have to be wasted in getting started.

Such pre-session conversations, as diplomatists would call them, also afford the governor-elect and the leaders of the legislature an opportunity to establish a friendly and understanding rapport that helps to obviate conflicts of opinion and purpose after the gavel falls.

The state is thus likely to save more than Mr. Fitzgerald's salary as secretary of state for a couple of months—and even in Michigan money is still worth saving.—Detroit Free Press.

Why Artors Die Poor! An interesting article discussing some famous instances will be found in The American Weekly, the magazine distributed with next Sunday's Chicago Herald and Examiner.

FARMERS WINNER TAXATION FIGHT

GIVEN EXEMPTION FROM STATE SALES TAX

Judge Leland Carr Bars Materials Used for Production from Levy Citing Legislative Ruling

Agricultural materials used in the production of crops or livestock which are later to be sold for food are not taxable under the state retail sales levy, Judge Leland W. Carr ruled in Ingham county circuit court.

The holding was in a case instigated by the Farm Bureau Service, Inc., against the State Board of Tax Administration.

The judge ruled, however, that the tax must be paid upon materials used in the production of crops which will be consumed by the farmer himself and that he must pay the levy upon wheat traded for flour or cream traded to dairies for butter.

Judge Carr pointed to a resolution adopted by the legislature in which the solons said that in passing the sales tax they meant to exempt farm materials such as feed and seed from the levy.

"It follows from the conclusion reached as to the interpretation of the statute that sales made by the plaintiff of personal property to farmers, dairymen, fruit growers and others to be used directly or indirectly in the production of crops intended for sale are not within the purview of the act and such sales are in consequence not subject to the tax," Judge Carr said.

CONSERVATION DEPT. WEEKLY BULLETIN

From indications to date the fall flight of ducks through Michigan this year is the lightest on record, says D. H. Janzen, regional director of the Game Management Division, United States Biological Survey, Washington, D. C. "Our game agents have been keeping a close check on hunting conditions in all of the important waterfowl concentration points and their reports to date are very discouraging," Janzen says.

Although the approach of the ice-fishing season is expected to enliven the demand for 1934 fishing licenses with increased sales as a result, the number of 1934 licenses already sold constitutes a new all-time mark, according to the License Division, Department of Conservation. Approximately 415,000 resident and 85,000 non-resident fishing licenses were purchased during the first 11 months of 1934, which will be the first full year in which the 50-cent general resident and the reduced non-resident licenses were effective and enforced.

Illegal hunting or possession of pheasants constituted more than 25 per cent of the arrests for violations of Michigan's conservation laws during October, according to the monthly report of the Field Administration Division, Department of Conservation. The arrests during the month totalled 398 and of this number 113 were for infractions of the laws protecting pheasants. Fifty-eight hunters were taken for illegal possession of hen pheasants and 14 for dressing a pheasant so as to destroy identity. Twenty-four were charged with illegal hunting or possession of pheasants, 15 with exceeding the bag limit and three for attempting to snare or trap pheasants.

LEGION ACTIVITIES
By F. V. Tyler

Attendance at the Legion feather party, Monday evening, surpassed any figure reached at any previous affair sponsored by Leslie T. Shapton Post. It is estimated that during the playing of the first string of ten games, 275 people were seated at the tables or standing about the room. Twenty turkeys, 14 chickens, seven geese and six ducks went to lucky players. So splendid a response from the public was not anticipated by the committee in charge and, therefore, the seating accommodations fell somewhat short of the needs. Next time, this defect will be remedied. Leslie T. Shupton Post wishes to express its sincere appreciation of the fine manner in which the people of Charlevoix co-operated to make the affair a success.

Tuesday night's meeting in the dug-out was garnished with refreshments in the form of venison sandwiches and coffee very generously supplied by Comrade Clarence Meggison from the results of his recent hunting trip—a 180-pound buck, the largest shot by any member of his party. The feed was much appreciated.

Plans are afoot for another feather party to be held on the evening of Friday, December 21st—just before Christmas.

A committee was appointed by Commander Goss, Tuesday night, to form a volley ball team to take part in the adult recreational program at the high school gymnasium. Other sports will be taken up as long-unused muscles get limbered up.

Twenty-three memberships in the post have been renewed for 1935, so far, and one new membership received.

SUNDAY DINNER SUGGESTIONS

Turkey is the big purchase to be made this week, and fortunately it is only slightly higher than last year. Roasting chickens, ducklings and geese are also moderately priced. Legs of lamb and fresh and smoked hams are also popular holiday roasts attractively priced this week.

Favorite holiday vegetables, including sweet potatoes, turnips, onions, cauliflower, broccoli and Brussels sprouts are cheap to moderate. Green beans are plentiful and much cheaper, and spinach is at nearly summer prices.

Oranges of both juice and navel types are available, the former cheap. Both cooking and eating apples are moderate. Cranberries are higher than last year but still reasonable.

Menus for Sunday include the use of holiday left-overs.

CHARLEVOIX COURIER

VOLUME 39. NUMBER 49 — EIGHT PAGES — THE CHARLEVOIX COURIER, WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 5, 1934 — PRICE $2.00 PER YEAR

ORDERED TO RAISE $40,000 FOR RELIEF

COUNTY MUST BEAR PROPORTIONATE SHARE

Various Communities in Effort to Pledge Required Amount to Retain Work Program

Charlevoix county's future participation in the Federal work relief program has been placed squarely up to the communities through the State Emergency Welfare Commission's demand for local financing of a proportionate share with the state and federal agencies.

Some time ago the national relief administration informed the state administration that each county must furnish at least one-third of its welfare load expense, which means $40,000 in Charlevoix county. The matter apparently was not brought before the board of supervisors at their October session, the proper time for its disposal, thus a wild scramble is now in progress to meet the demand.

The ultimatum fortunately does not require actual rising of $10,000 in funds to finance the county's share. Rather, each community and the county at large is required to pledge to draw labor for their regular routine operations from the welfare lists and thus receive credit for the amount of the payrolls involved. It is hoped through this channel that the county will draw $40,000 in labor payrolls from the welfare during the coming year.

Up to the present time the county road commission has pledged $10,000. Boyne City and East Jordan $1,000 each, Melrose township $500 and the city of Charlevoix $2,500 or more. The city's participation was voted at a special council meeting Tuesday evening, to which business men were called in to express their opinions regarding the proposition. As matters now stand the city is prepared to go beyond the $2,500 pledge to put the county proportion across.

In the notice received by Mr. Mama, county director, from the state administration that Charlevoix county pledge $40,000 in order to qualify for work relief, there was no threat nor was there an alternative. It is probable that if the county fails to respond, all work relief will be suspended and only sufficient direct relief will be forthcoming to keep bodies and souls of those on relief work together.

MICHIGAN FIRE LOSS LOW RECORD IN 1934

Michigan's 1934 record of forest fires and acreage burned will go down as one of the lowest in history. A compilation of figures from the 14 forest fire district of the Field Administration Division, Department of Conservation, shows a total of 3,038 fires and 53,016 acres burned over.

The number of fires as well as the acres devastated during the past year is far below the figures of 1933, which had 4,557 fires and 202,030 acres burned. Of the past decade only two years have records of damage lower than 1934.

LIGHTSHIPS ARRIVE IN WINTER QUARTERS

Grey's Reef and Manitou Shoals lightships, stationed in upper Lake Michigan waters since early spring, arrived in winter quarters here Wednesday afternoon. Light buoys will mark the stations guarded by the vessels until the close of navigation on the lakes.

"DON'T THROW DEER HIDES AWAY," IS APPEAL TO HUNTERS

Urging hunters to turn their deer hides over to the welfare, the state conservation department and Michigan state emergency relief administration have issued the following appeal:

"To Michigan Sportsmen: If you have no use for the hide from your buck, don't throw it away. Give it to a group of unemployed men, who will tan it and make it into usable garments.

"Take the hide to your County Emergency Welfare Administrator, whose office is in your county-seat town. He will ship it to a central tannery, owned and operated by men who have been unemployed and are now members of a Self-Help Co-Operative tannery. It is an easy way for you to dispose of the skin, and you will have the satisfaction of doing a 'good turn.'"

FOUR INJURED IN AUTO ACCIDENT LAST FRIDAY

Car Left Highway, Struck Tree on U. S. 31 South of City

Four people were injured, three seriously, when their car, en route from Sault Ste. Marie to Kalmazoo, left the highway and struck a tree on U. S. 31 two miles south of this city Friday afternoon.

Seriously injured were James Hill, the driver, and his wife of Kulmazoo; Mrs. George Nash of the Soo. Garth Scott, also of Sault Ste. Marie, suffered minor cuts.

Scott, the only one conscious following the mishap, was asleep when the machine left the highway and knew nothing of the cause of the accident.

The victims were taken Sunday to Kalamazoo. Mrs. Nash, oldest member of the group, suffered fractures of both legs, one a compound fracture, besides severe scalp lacerations. She was taken by ambulance to a Kalamazoo hospital equipped to set the dangerous fracture. Mrs. Hill suffered a fractured wrist and severe cuts.

KIPMEN VICTORS IN DOUBLE BILL

TAKE VICTORIES FROM ELLSWORTH AND PELLSTON

Three Complete Teams Used During Initial Contests—Play at Traverse City Friday

Scoring victories in both games of a double bill at the local gymnasium last Friday night, Charlevoix's basketeers launched their 1934-35 basketball schedule.

Pellston and Ellsworth, both class D. schools, were the victims, the former by a 21 to 18 score and Ellsworth by a margin of 19 to 11.

As the score indicated, Pellston's rangy and veteran team put up stiff opposition. Against Coach Kipke's starting line-up they were superior, piling up an 8 to 2 lead in the first period. The gap was closed to knot the score 10-all at the half and a complete new Charlevoix team manged only to retain a slim lead in the second half. Pellston controlled the tip from center and because of their height were superior under the basket. Better team play alone in the second half kept Charlevoix from defeat.

Coach Kipke used 19 men in the Ellsworth game, substituting often up to the last quarter when he sent in a complete new team. Charlevoix led all the way in this contest. They were out in front 4 and 2 at the quarter, 8 and 6 at the half and 13 to 7 at the third intermission.

Of the three complete teams sent into the games, the combination of Carey, center, Pearl and Radle, forwards, Foster and Geneit, guards, appeared the best, and these men will in all likelihood form the first-string line-up in future games.

Carey, center, was outstanding for Charlevoix, scoring most of his team's points. MacRae accounted for 11 of Pellston's markers, while for Ellsworth, Edson and Parsons played well.

Charlevoix presented a snappy pair of cheer leaders in Chew and Bergeon, whom, decked out in red and white, the school colors, led rousing cheers throughout the games.

Charlevoix plays away from home twice before making another home appearance Friday night they journey to Traverse City, and the following Friday take on the Petoskey quint at Petoskey.

BOUNTY SYSTEM IS EFFECTIVE JAN. 1ST

RULES AND REGULATIONS ARE ANNOUNCED

Any Resident With Small Game License May Apply for Contract to Take Predators

The bounty system of control of certain predatory animals in Michigan, which becomes effective January 1, will be governed by a code of rules and regulations which the Department of Conservation considers adequate to prevent fraud, Director P. J. Hoffmaster announced Saturday.

It was decided by the State Conservation Commission at its November meeting to return to the bounty system of predator control, following the announcement that the agreement between the Department and the United States Bureau of Biological Survey, under which predator control has been handled for the past several years, had been mutually terminated.

The commission decided to pay bounties on predators according to the following scale;

Bobcats $5, male or female bobcat kittens $2.50, male coyote or wolf $7.50, female coyote or wolf $10, male or female wolf and coyote pups $5.

Young animals to be regarded as pups or kittens respectively up to September of the year in which they were born. No bounties to be paid on unborn pups or kittens.

Director Hoffmaster was instructed to arrange for retention of $40,000 in the Game Protection Fund to finance the bounty plan in 1935 and to have the necessary rules and regulations prepared. The regulations were made known Saturday.

Administration of the bounty system, Hoffmaster stated, is to be handled at the 14 district conservation headquarters offices including the issuance of contracts and the certification of bounty payments.

Any qualified resident of Michigan who holds a small game hunting license and a gun permit may apply for a contract after signing an affidavit of eligibility and having it certified before a notary public. The contracts are issued without cost. Individuals who do not possess a contract cannot collect a bounty on the pelt of a predator, Hoffmaster said. The contracts terminate on the expiration date of the small-game hunting licenses, which is September 30th.

Contracts may be terminated at

CHANGE LOCATION LOCAL POSTOFFICE

Change to Quarters in See Building to Be Made Soon

Persistent rumors of a change in location of the local postoffice have been given foundation by the unofficial announcement that the present location will be vacated in the near future for quarters in the S. M. See & Sons building at the corner of Bridge and Antrim streets.

The date of moving, it is understood, will depend upon completion of changes necessary at the new location to accommodate the postoffice. It is intimated that need for more room, all on one floor, influenced the move.

The building now occupied was built for postoffice purposes and has been occupied as such for a period of fifteen years or more.

HEALTH LEAGUE IS ORGANIZED

SUCCEEDS THE COUNTY CHILD HEALTH COMMITTEE

County Divided Into Five Groups Under Chairmen—Supervising Seal Sales

At a meeting of the Charlevoix County Child Health Committee held at Barnard in November, the name of the organization was changed to the Charlevoix County Child Health League.

The change was made in view of the fact that the name "committee" caused some to feel that only a few people belonged. Everyone interested in an educational program of health is wanted and invited to help.

The county has been divided into five units as follows: No. 1, Charlevoix, Marion, Norwood and Hayes; No. 2, East Jordan, Eveline, South Arm and Wilson; No. 3, Boyne City, Melrose, Evangeline, Advance and Bay; No. 4, Boyne Falls, Hudson, Chandler and Boyne Valley; No. 5, Beaver Island.

The Unit chairmen are: Mrs. Oakley Hammond for Charlevoix; Mrs. Russell Barden for Boyne City; Mrs. Pat Foote for East Jordan; Mrs. Fred DeNise for Boyne Falls and Fr. McLaughlan for Beaver Island.

The various units are at work selling for the needy and participating with the Health Unit nurse. Miss Winifred Golley, in toxoid and educational programs and infant and pre-school clinics.

The particular activity for the month of December is the sale of seals for tuberculosis work in Michigan. The League has taken charge of the sale in Charlevoix county under the direction of Miss Golley.

GIVE ACCOUNT BOOKS TO CONTRACT SIGNERS

Records Show if Need Exists for Operating Changes

A farm record book designed to assist farmers in assembling and preserving information on farm operations can be obtained free from county agricultural agents or from the farm management department at Michigan State College by farmers who have crop contracts with the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

The 1935 record book is similar to the one distributed last year but has been simplified and improved. It provides for the inclusion of records for which there was no space in last year's book. Filling out crop contracts is made much easier if the record books are kept up-to-date. The books are also very convenient in making out financial statements for use in applying for loans from the government or from other sources.

COMMUNITY INTEREST BECOMES CENTERED ON CHRISTMAS

With Thanksgiving Day of 1934 marked off the calendar the community has already turned its attention toward Christmas and the holiday season.

Window displays of Christmas toys and other gifts, the evergreen street decorations which are now being put in place have all helped focus attention on the coming event.

The fact that only 16 more shopping days remain before the gifts go on the Christmas trees on Christmas Eve is also helping to stimulate holiday interest and impress on shoppers that their time is limited. Thanksgiving was later in November than usual this year, cutting down the shopping time between the two holidays.

Farm Boy Wins Battle for Fame and Success

By WILLIAM C. UTLEY

JOE BENTON made good.

The roof of Chicago's palatial Civic Opera house raised a few inches and almost floated away on the crest of a wave of applause that would and did surprise even an opera house, on the night of Tuesday, November 13. The cheers were not for the glamorous and tempestuous Maria Jeritza, whose voice and beauty have made her an international darling of opera. Nor were they for Pasquale Amato, veteran baritone whose lusty notes have been sending chills or delight up and down operatic spines lo, these many years.

They were for Giuseppe Bentonelli, whom the boys back home in Sayre, Okla., and the brothers in the Pi Kappa Alpha house at the University of Oklahoma remember as Joe Benton. But Joe or Giuseppe, Benton or Bentonelli, it was all the same to the musical world and the press who landed his American debut as Mario Cavaradossi in "La Tosca."

Four times at the close of the first act he had to return to the footlights to take bows with Jeritza and Amato, and finally to appease the demands of the 3,000 out in front he had to take a call alone.

The press was equally kind: "He met the test. . . . There was elegance in the pensive opening aria. There was ardor in the ensuing love scene." "His is the kind of debut that gets better as it goes along." "One felt that the future of the artist was bright indeed." "There was in his impersonation the kernel of a real characterization, new, right and convincing."

Toasted by Elites.

After he had left his dressing room and the army of waiting reporters, there was a lavish party in Bentonelli's honor. Toasting him were the musical world, the social world, the artistic world. One of the most enthusiastic celebrants was Prof. William G. Schmidt of the University of Oklahoma. He was the link that night between Giuseppe Bentonelli and Joe Benton. Perhaps he and Benton were the only ones there who knew the story, a story that is America's story, full of red blood and fight and dogged determination. It is the ever-challenging story of how a poor farm boy battled to fame and success.

It starts back in 1901. Oliver Horace Benton was sick. Business worries had precipitated a nervous breakdown. "Change of climate," the doctors said. "He must go to Arizona, where it is high and dry. The fogs and dampness of Kansas City are more than he can stand."

But the Bentons, Oliver and his wife, did not go to Arizona. They moved to western Oklahoma, which the government was just then opening to white settlers. It was wild country and they were brave to pioneer its spacious plains.

But this was the land of hope and health and freedom and new beginning. Oliver was soon well and the Bentons began with a vigor. They were the builders of Oklahoma. When the first railroad train came into the section in the winter of 1901-02 Mr. Benton got possession of a box car some way and started the first church, with himself as the preacher, although he was not a clergyman. Soon it was full of the bristling youth that was growing up in Oklahoma.

Joe remembers when they lived in a tent. He remembers their struggles with the soil and the live stock and the loneliness. He remembers their dread of the wind, the wind that blew and blew across the plains until at night his mother would cover them with the carpets to keep them from freezing.

Worked Long Hours.

Joe was a good boy. He put in long hard hours of heavy work. He picked cotton, tilled the soil (many times it was the first time anyone's plow had dipped its nose into the earth that he cultivated), did most of the chores and tended the live stock. He milked from six to eighteen cows.

"What I hated most was washing the cream separator," Joe says. "We had no hot water and many a time I had to break the ice in the barrel to get at the water. The lye was so strong that it has ruined my hands."

The hands were not ruined to the extent that he couldn't get plenty of music out of a piano, nevertheless. At three, Joe had already shown all the symptoms of becoming a musician. His mother, who was always giving up things for Joe, made some more sacrifices and bought a piano for $25. It was a funny, square thing and it came from St. Louis. It was kind of old. The date on it was 1807.

When it arrived the young man found that his head just about reached the keyboard if he stood up straight. His mother had given him a drum for Christmas; he had beat lots of rhythm and both of the sides out of it, but he still had the drumsticks. He used them to strike the piano keys. The keys were solid ivory—solid, that is, compared to that of a boy in his first pair of long pants. It gave me the confidence of a young man after his first shave."

Playing two difficult selections and singing a familiar church hymn (because any other music was so hard to procure in the wilds of western Oklahoma just then), he won the contest, and with it a teachers' college scholarship which he never used. He was just past sixteen.

After that came dark days, but they were days which had more, perhaps, to do with shaping Joe's career than all of his study so far. He fell sick with typhoid fever. For forty-six days and nights he battled with the fever.

The fever left him weak and wasted. But it was in that sick-bed that Joe Benton, the farm boy, really became Giuseppe Bentonelli, the lyric tenor of American and Continental opera. When he had recovered he entered the University of Oklahoma, and tried out for the glee club. It was amazedly discovered that his baritone voice, which he had not tried since the typhoid got him, had become a fine, rich tenor. He sang as if in a dream while Professor Schmidt struck notes high, higher, higher still, all the way up to a high B flat.

The glamor of the war attracted Joe Benton while he was at the university and he tried to join the army, but was too young. He joined the ROTC, and was commissioned as a lieutenant in the infantry just after the war closed. He was graduated with a bachelor of arts degree and won a Phi Beta Kappa key. He made Phi Mu Alpha musical fraternity.

Joe didn't need the army to get to Europe. On a shoestring he crossed the Atlantic to study with the masters. He didn't always eat, he said, but he studied night and day. At Nice, he studied under the distinguished Polish tenor, Jean de Reske. His lesson on March 31, 1925, was the last ever given by the Pole, who died seven days later. Still known as Joseph Benton, he went to Italy, where he studied for four years.

When his teachers pronounced him ready, young Benton made his debut as the first tenor in the title role of "Andrea Chenier" in the Teatro Reale del l'Opera at Rome. It was the beginning of a European career that was to take him through 311 performances in thirty-four different operas.

He Becomes "Bentonelli."

It was in his Rome debut that, upon the advice of his teacher in Milan, he assumed the name of Bentonelli. His reason was a good one.

"To the Italians my name sounds French," he explained. "They pronounce it 'Ben-Ton'. No matter if you are better than Caruso, if you make your debut in Italy bearing a French name, you are likely to get grape-fruit thrown at you. Martin became Martinelli, so I could see no reason why Benton should not be Bentonetti. In a Milan court it cost me three hundred dollars in law fees to have the new name legalized. I can now use it in perfect security; it is good even on passports."

When he returned home this year it was the first time in five years. But you will never find a more ardent patriot than Giuseppe Bentonelli.

Bentonelli is still a "regular guy"; success hasn't spoiled him. When a Chicago critic scored him for the lusty manner in which he sang to Scarpia, denouncing the chief of the Roman police as a hangman and an unscrupulous butcher, his enthusiasm was unruffled. The critic claimed he overplayed the role.

"What do they want me to do?" he asked. "Waltz up to the old villain, tickle his chin and say, 'Oh, you nassy ol' hangman, you'?"

Bentonelli has been much interested in a career somewhat parallel to his own. It is that of a fellow tenor of the Chicago Grand Opera company, Myron Duncan. Duncan, a logger of the north woods who was discovered singing to the trees up in northern Wisconsin, made his American debut a week later in the same role as did Bentonelli. Like the latter, Duncan "went Italian" over there. His name became Mario Linca, but he has not retained it in the land of his birth.

Bentonelli, dark, handsome and, in his own words "more than thirty and less than thirty-five," is a real American young man. He looks more like a well-dressed collegian than anything else. He likes bow neckties and smart striped shirts with long, pointed collars. He never argues politics or religion or how to pitch the voice.

SCOTT MORGAN stared at the telegram before him. It was from his assistant, Tom Haddon, dated Washington:

MARRIED THIS MORNING STOP SWELL IDEA STOP WHY DON'T YOU TRY IT STOP NOT INTERFERING WITH MY ASSIGNMENT.

So that was why Haddon had been so anxious for the Washington assignment. He remembered vaguely Tom's girl lived in Washington. There had been a misunderstanding: Tom had gone around scowling for days and smoking countless cigarettes.

Well, thank heavens, that Sylvia Ralston affair had taught him his lesson! His first year in New York, too. He had been mad about her; worshiped her. And all she wanted was his influence as a reporter. Well, he had come through for her. Rotogravures; newspaper and magazine articles glorified her. She got her big break . . . and coldly discarded him. Funny he should be thinking about her now. But how could he help it? Today's papers had chronicled her third marriage. Her pictures showed her even more glorified than ever.

At least Tom's girl was sincere; she had complained because Tom had taken out another girl when he was engaged to her. It must be wonderful, Scott thought, for a girl to hold an engagement so sacred.

Mary Sanders came back from lunch and hung her hat on the rack just outside his door. He gave her a curt nod; it was almost rude, she thought. She went into her own cubby-hole of an office next to his, banging the door after her.

"All settled," Scott heard her say. "I'm changing my name."

Leslie Miller stopped her typewriting. "But you weren't at all sure you'd do it this morning!"

"I know, but Doctor Urbanic convinced me at lunch time."

"You seem pretty unenthusiastic," Leslie observed, "for a girl about to change her name and with it the whole destiny of her life. Don't you like the new name, Mary?"

"No!" There was utter distaste in her voice.

"Then, dear, why do it?"

"Oh, the doctor convinced me that for material and financial reasons—for social success and—"

"So!" Scott Morgan observed. "So!" Even Mary Sanders would barter her soul for material and financial reasons. Who could a fellow depend on!

He remembered how often he had had to fight off a tenderness for Mary. Leslie Miller was saying: "But I wouldn't, Mary, dear, not unless I was entirely satisfied. Hold on to your own name and wait till something better comes along. You'll get a bright idea one of these days."

"What do you mean wait till I get a bright idea?" Mary almost cried. "That's all I ever get. Doctor Urbanic says so, too! But what do I get out of it? Not even a raise! Here I plan the whole campaign that gets the new cigarette account from every agency in town—me, a mere girl! And who gets the plums from my bright ideas? Tom Haddon is sent down to Washington to do the publicity stunt that I planned. He gets a raise, too. Scott Morgan brings in the whole lay-out to the president and probably grabs all the credit. I suppose he gets a good bonus, too. While I—I—You just bet I'll change my name!"

"Mary! Why I thought you liked Scott Morgan! . . ."

At that moment Scott Morgan entered. He was flushing furiously. His red hair seemed even redder.

"I had no intention of eavesdropping, Miss Sanders." His voice was like cold steel. "But I assure you I received no bonus on your brilliant ideas. If you had been content to wait until tomorrow, the end of the month, you would have seen I recommended you for a sizable increase in salary. As for a girl changing her name for financial reasons . . . social success . . ."

"It is no concern of yours why I change my name!"

"It is my affair when you say you're changing your name because I got a bonus on your bright ideas. . . ."

"You're insufferable! I loathe you! I've always loathed you!" But tears were in her eyes; her hands trembled.

"And I do not exactly admire you, myself, Miss Sanders." Now his voice was a white heat. "I trust your doctor has all the virtues I lack—every advantage that—"

Leslie Miller laughed hysterically.

"Mary's not getting married! She's just changing her name numerologically to get new vibrations. Doctor Urbanic is a wonderful numerologist. Why, did you know that Mark Twain never had any luck under his own name of Samuel Clemens? All the movie stars—"

"Not getting married?" Scott Morgan gasped.

"Hardly," Mary announced grimly.

"Oh, no," Leslie went on. "There's not even a marriage vibration in her name! Nothing but kindness that's not appreciated, virtue that goes unrewarded, brilliant ideas that—"

"Leslie!" Mary's face was flushed. "I'm not exactly tongue-tied, and I didn't give you my confidence to broadcast to the whole office force!"

"I'm not the whole office force," said Scott Morgan with commanding authority. "I'm merely a man so in love with you that he almost went crazy when he thought you were going to marry some one else."

Leslie Miller discreetly withdrew.

CRITICISM

"What do you think of the critics of your plan?"

"I resent them," answered Senator Sorghum.

"Haven't they any good ideas?"

"Oh, yes. I may utilize some of them. Nevertheless, I don't propose to encourage the nerve they show in expressing them."

Resented Imputation

Specialist—This eccentricity you speak of in your daughter—isn't it, after all, a matter of heredity?

Mother (severely)—No, sir! I'd have you to know there never was any heredity in our family!

Length, Not Breadth

First Voter—How long did the candidate speak, Bill?

Bill—About an hour and a half.

First Voter—And what was it all about?

Bill—He didn't say.—Exchange.

TWO THICKNESSES

"Are you and Tommie as thick as ever?"

"Thick? Why, that boy is too thick for me to ever get thick with him."

Disappointment

"So you are going home," said the kindly stranger to the wanderer. "I suppose they will kill the fatted calf for you?"

"Yes, that's the worst of it," replied the wanderer sourly; "I am on a diet and can't eat any meat."—Pathfinder Magazine.

Thought Revived

Lionel—By Jove, old fellow, when a man's in love he begins to think that his eyes are open for the first time!

Sympathizing Friend—Yes, and when it's all over he sometimes has the same sensation!—Vancouver Province.

The Whole Story

"Been in bed seven weeks."

"Oh, that's too bad. Flu, I suppose?"

"Yes, and crashed!"—Montreal Star.

Lot Like That

Blinks—That dame can say more foolish things than anybody I ever listened to.

Jinks—Yes, her tongue travels along at sixty miles an hour, while her brain is jogging along at about five.

Hard Luck Story

My friend, the visiting nurse, reports that a very sick patient told her that her illness was caused by bad teeth. The way she put it was, "I should have had my teeth excavated two years ago, for pyrex."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Ambition

He—I'd like to write the most popular book of the day.

She—You think that is the way to fame?

He—I don't give a hoot for the fame. It is the way to fill a pocketbook, and that's what interests me.

Cash Wanted

"Pay your taxes with a smile," advised Mrs. Gotrocks.

"I should love to," said Miss Comely, "but they insist on cash."

Two-Piece Frock in Smart Design

PATTERN 2030

In this two-piece frock youth is delightfully served. Make it of one of the new fabric prints which look like wool, or of a smart sheer woolen. It suggests a suit in its trim lines and neat tailored finish. The yoke extends down the front to the edge of the jacket in a vest effect from under which a belt partly encircles the waistline. The bow at the neck is extremely attractive in velvet. Think of it in rust color with the frock in two shades of green. With the diagrammed sewing chart which accompanies the pattern, even a young girl can easily make the frock.

Pattern 2030 is available in sizes 10, 12, 14, 16 and 18. Size 12 takes 2¼ yards 54-inch fabric, and 1⅛ yards 4-inch ribbon.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.

Address orders to Sewing Circle, Pattern Department, 243 West Seventeenth street, New York City.

PREPARATION

"Daddy, I want to be an Arctic explorer."

"That's fine, my boy."

"But, daddy, I want to go into training at once."

"How so?"

"Well, I want a dollar a day for ice cream so that I can get accustomed to the cold."

Suspicious

The maid was cleaning the stairs the morning following a wedding reception, and picked up a spoon.

"Some guest must have had a hole in his pocket," she observed.—Ottawa Citizen.

Her View of It

He—Would you marry for money?

She—Well, a husband with no money to me would be like a garage with no car in it.

ALL IN ORDER

Old-Fashioned Phrase

"Does your parrot talk?"

"Yes; he says 'I beg your pardun.'"

"Hm-m! Must be a very great age."

Not Missing Anything

Old Gentleman—Didn't I give you a dime just now in the High street?

Tramp—Yes, sir; I've got a branch office there.

HAS A REAL JOB

We observe that the well-known and highly publicized "priest of the radio" has finally caught up with a job that will test his mettle. He is engaged in the process of harmonizing six divisions of currency and money reformers ranging from Senator Thomas to young Mr. Stotesbury. One of them is an advocate of the free coinage of silver and the other announces himself as a conservative money reformer. Compared with Father Coughlin's apparent job the activities of the one-armed paper-hanger with the itch represents mere lassitude. — Michigan Manufacturer & Financial Record.

LIFT THAT TAX!

Already agitation against removing the sales tax on food is beginning to be heard. By the time the Legislature assembles these first faint rumblings will have grown into sizeable protest. We hardly believe that Governor-elect Fitzgerald will allow his pre-election promises to lift this tax burden from the poor man's food slyly to be sidetracked by any determined band of tax-spenders. The sales tax was devised to lift a 25 million dollar tax load from real property. It is estimated that without the tax on food, returns from the sales tax during the next fiscal year will be in excess of 30 millions. That will be more than enough to meet its original purpose. Had one prophesied a few years ago that the time was near at hand when, instead of being concerned with filling the workingman's dinner pail we'd be engaged in taxing its contents, he would have been pointed out as an oracle of darkness. Ask any Michigan housewife to compare her grocery bill today with that of a year ago. You will find the answer to the above discussion in her reply. And if ever the legislators are in need of a college yell to pep their flagging spirits we'd suggest that it be: "Lift that tax! Lift that tax!"

JOB INSURANCE

The new Congress which convenes on January 3rd, will find a nation undergoing first real recovery pains following five long years of depression. The national solons will be bombarded by every known nostrum possible or being devised in the minds of our professional political body fixers. If Congress is wise it will devote its time during the session to a recovery program that is backed by the light of experience; it will refrain from raids on the public treasury under the thinly hidden pretext of priming the pump with tax dollars to get us out of a slump. And while it is engaged in solving the problems of the present it should have sufficient vision, once recovery is assured, to adopt safety measures against the return of hard times. Unbiased observers believe this can best be brought about through job insurance. We now have 17 millions of unemployed people in this country. Industry has the choice of providing new employment channels to take care of a large part of this number, or contributing heavily to an out and out dole system. Congress can aid industry in forming a workable plan by refusing to hamstring it with nit wit legislation. Industrial leaders worthy of the name are willing to go along with such a program—but first they want assurance there will be no congressional sniping from the rear.

A WORTHY PROJECT

The proposed State Emergency Relief Administration's plan to provide practical assistance for thousands of out-of-school Michigan young men and women, should have the active support of every clear thinking citizen.

For five years the sight of countless boys and girls, who have finished their common school education, are unable to find places for themselves in the workaday world, has been one of the most ghastly pictures of the depression.

Parents who have known the restraint which these unemployed young people have had to exercise in order to preserve their ideals of decent manhood and womanhood, can appreciate the real value of any movement dedicated to improving present conditions. Their idleness is a challenge to our boasted twentieth century civilization.

THE HOME FOLKS

If one desires to know the real character of a man in public life, it is always a good idea to learn what the old home folks are saying about him. There is seldom deceit or misrepresentation in the analysis made of a man by his friends and neighbors. If he has their faith in his honor and integrity he can face every test of citizenship unafraid. Commenting on the ability of their first citizen, Justice Wm. W. Potter, of the Michigan Supreme Court, the Hastings Banner says:

"The question of leadership of the republican party in the next few years will be of the utmost importance. That leadership must be sound, it must be sincere, it must be progressive. The leader, whoever he may be, must command the confidence of all who know him.

"In the past, leadership for great occasions in the life of our nation, has largely come from smaller communities. Who knows but that Hastings may furnish a real leader for the republican party at this time? We have in mind Supreme Court Justice Wm. W. Potter. While his thought and interest have been largely directed in the line of his profession, the Law, yet he has been a real student of and reverences the institutions of this country and knows its vital needs. He realizes that nations, like individuals, grow; that when they become mature some things must be changed. But he has a profound conviction that the wisdom of the fathers has provided for the United States a constitution broad enough, flexible enough for the growing needs of a developing nation. He would not be afraid to try new things, which commend themselves to his sound reasoning and judgment. But he would not resort to wild experimenting that would ignore the basic law of this country.

"The Banner believes that Wm. W. Potter has in him the ability and the qualities for a sane and great leadership. He is big enough and broad enough to be President of the nation. If he should be chosen for that high office it would not be the first time that one of the country's smaller communities had supplied needed leadership in a time of stress like the present."

The government is compelling the radio stations to revise their patent medicine ballyhoo more in conformity with the truth. What!—and cause us to lose half our symptoms?

PUBLICITY MAD!

Michigan's Liquor Control Commission is shortly to undergo a double auditing of its affairs. Led by the redoubtable Auditor General, John K. Stack, who manages, somehow to keep in the limelight most of the time, a large force of professional auditors will begin the work of wading through the records of this going concern. Satisfied that Mr. Stack is prompted in his demands because of an absurd yen for publicity, the Commission will be forced to call in still more auditors to check the original audit. This double-barreled plan of factual finding is going to cost the already over-burdened taxpayers of Michigan between twenty and thirty thousand dollars, and will consume several months' time. We make the prediction here and now that when both crews have finished their labors and deliver their last fancy check they will have discovered ABSOLUTELY NOTHING! That will be something for the record a couple of years hence.

GOOD ROADS VALUES

The emphatic vote registered at the November election against the threat to cripple Michigan's road building and road maintenance program by reducing the gas tax under the misguided idea of saving money for the automobile owner, is ample evidence that the people are fully aware of the importance of good roads. No single dollar of tax money returns more in actual value than the road dollar. Spending money for good roads means lower cost of car operation under pleasanter driving conditions. There are fewer accidents. Modern road builders have learned the art of laying a heavier slab of concrete that will resist all traffic and weather conditions, considerably reducing the annual maintenance and replacement bill. Highway development is a large employer of labor, needed at a time when thousands of citizens are without work. Road building should be encouraged as a substantial part of the emergency recovery program.

BETTER CITIZENSHIP

One of the most inspiring movements in recent years has been the Michigan Older Boys Conference, which will convene in Lansing for its thirty-second annual gathering on December 1-2. Speakers with State and national reputation will deliver addresses at each session. Boys over 15 years of age are eligible to conference membership. The movement, inaugurated more than three decades ago, has for its fundamental principle the building of cleaner and finer citizenship among boys and young men. Many leaders in the business world today owe their success to the ambition and desires planted in their hearts many years ago. In the midst of so much that is of tinsel and sounding brass it is heartening to visualize the work of holding, reclaiming and protecting our youth. Such movements hold out a golden promise of better citizenship for the morrow.

WILL SEEK NEW PLAN

Delegates to the annual meeting of the Michigan State Farm Bureau view defeat of the county home rule amendment not a "popular verdict against local government reform" but a challenge for the submission of some more acceptable plan of action. Coming, as it does, from one of the groups that were active in opposition to proposal number 4 on the November ballot, this is heartening news indeed.

We were disappointed when the groups who had supported local government reform last spring became divided over the form of amendment that appeared on the ballot, and we believe this disruption of forces was a material factor in the final outcome of the popular vote.

The expressed willingness of the Farm Bureau to cooperate once more on an even better reform measure paves the way, we hope, for early success.

THE AMERICAN SCHOOL

The next time you pass a school pause a moment to think what that school means to humanity. Recall the long dark centuries when the masses were kept in ignorance—when greed and oppression ruled the world with an iron hand. From the very beginning of man's struggle for knowledge, self-respect, and the recognition of his inalienable rights, the school has been his greatest ally. We refer to the school as "common" because it belongs to us all; it is ourselves working together in the education of our children. But it is a most uncommon institution. It is relatively new. Throughout the world, among upward struggling people, wherever parents share in the aspirations of their children, the American common school is being copied. Let us cherish and improve our schools.

The only method of creating sex appeal is by clothes. The woman of the 19th century was a masterpiece of sex appeal from the crown of her head to the soles of her feet. Everything about her except cheeks and nose was a secret.—George Bernard Shaw.

Gas Refunds Are Delayed

The department of state is not responsible for the delay in the issuance of refund vouchers to users of tax-exempt gasoline. After the claims for refunds have been approved by the gasoline tax division of the department of state, the actual check writing is performed by another department. Last Thursday 15,747 checks involving $124,161 in refunds were being held up although many of the claims had been approved by the department of state in September and October.

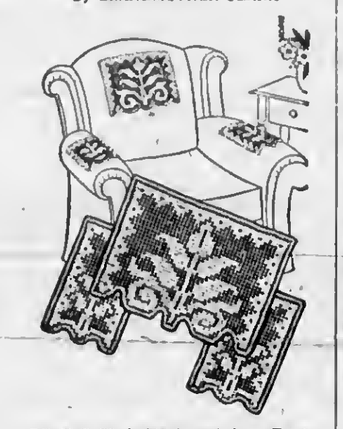
CHAIR BACK AND ARM REST DESIGN

By GRANDMOTHER CLARK



"Tulip" Chair Back and Arm Rests; Three-Piece Set in Filet Crochet.

Chair backs and arm rests in crochet have been used for generations and are today again very popular for practical and decorative purposes.

How much more inviting is a chair that has this added personal touch and in a design that stands out clearly on a dark background.

This set in a conventional tulip design is easy work even for the inexperienced. The large filet stitch being used makes the work interesting, and a surprisingly short time is required to finish the set. It is an attractive addition to your living room or a valued gift for a friend.

The chair back measures 10 by 14 inches, the arm rests 6 by 10 inches if crocheted with a fairly tight stitch.

A looser stitch will produce a larger size. This package, No. 705, contains sufficient cream-colored Mountain Craft Crochet Cotton to complete this three-piece set, also crochet hook. Instructions are included, also a black and white diagram of the design so the meshes may be easily counted.

Write our crochet department, enclosing 25 cents for this complete package, No. 705, which contains sufficient thread to make this beautiful set, or send 10 cents for the instructions and diagram only.

As He Understood Song

Curtis, who has just passed the five-year mark, is getting a big kick out of kindergarten. His parents have been amused at the enthusiasm with which he has entered into the activities of the class, even though he occasionally has not fully understood what they were all about. He likes the games and drawing lessons, but his real delight is the music. Every day he has come home singing a new song, or snatches of it. Recently he astonished his parents by lustily singing a refrain that sounded familiar, but whose words were strangely twisted.

"What's that you're singing, Curtis?" his mother asked.

"Here We Go Around the Mulberry Books," replied Curtis, who hadn't encountered mulberry bushes in his short lifetime.—New York Sun.

No "Cherokee Strip" in the Senate Chamber

Seats in the senate chamber in Washington have been changed around so that new Democratic senators will not have to sit on the side occupied by the minority party. For a time it was thought that the old "Cherokee strip," that is, a row of seats in the rear of the Republican section, would have to be employed, but the shifting has obviated the necessity of doing that.

Old and New in "Flying Windmills"

The very latest development in aerial travel—the new Kellett wingless autogiro—is shown with the older type of the windmill plane. The new "auto" has only three blades in its rotor system. The flexibility of the rotors furnishes control and does away with wings and elevator controls. The ship has a minimum flying speed of 16 miles per hour and a top speed of 125 miles per hour. It can take off within a 60-foot area and land without any landing run at all.

TRUE DETECTIVE STORY

by Vance Wynn © Public Ledger

Clue of the Brass Check

IT WAS in September, 1916, that an enterprising contractor, Abrahum Sugalowitz, determined to build a row of two-story houses at Hegeman avenue and Powell street, in New York.

The work of excavation proceeded expeditiously, but the workmen had not gone very far when they discovered a skeleton.

A few minutes later a second skeleton was brought to the surface.

The authorities were notified and the remains were taken to the bureau of unidentified dead of the New York police department.

Life is supposed to be held cheap in the metropolis, and it would have been quite easy to have dismissed this gruesome find as an unsolved mystery.

But the police did not take that view of the matter.

They felt that a crime had been committed and they went about the solution with all of the ardor of detectives of fiction, but with a great deal more common sense.

By means of a brass check that was found on the first skeleton the remains were identified as those of Rosario Passerelle, a laborer, who had been well known in the Italian colony in East New York.

The second skeleton was not so readily placed.

But it was discovered that Passerelle had a friend named Domnic La Rosa, and that they were inseparable companions.

Also it came to light that Passerelle and La Rosa had strangely disappeared at the same time.

Incidentally, it was suggested that the two men had been in bad odor with some of the wretched secret societies which had imported their bad habits from Italy.

In a word it was felt that the two dead men had been the victims of the dreaded Black Hand.

But before going after the murderers it was necessary to make sure that the second skeleton was that of La Rosa.

In order to demonstrate that the detectives of New York city performed a most remarkable piece of work.

They reconstructed the remains of the dead man.

Around the skeleton was built a face, some hair, and by the use of cosmetics these were made to appear natural.

Two gold teeth that had been found in the lot, and which undoubtedly belonged to the deceased, were placed in such way as to attract immediate attention.

A coffee can, covered with newspapers, served as a neck, and around this false form was draped the ragged coat of the man.

It was a ghastly reproduction of what had once been a human being.

Photographs of this exhibit were taken and shown to those who had known La Rosa in life.

The detectives presently located a blacksmith who lived near the lot where the skeletons had been found.

He said that it bore a striking likeness to a man whom he had seen very often in that locality.

While all of this was going on the police department had been busily engaged in rounding up suspects.

On a fixed day it was resolved to make a test by having the friends of La Rosa, and those suspected of the murder, file past the reconstructed body.

It was a gruesome scene, those sons and daughters of sunny Italy marching in that procession.

One, two, three, five and ten, they filed by without any sign of emotion beyond a natural repugnance over looking at such an abnormal corpse.

Presently a woman in the line wavered.

She was young, with an olive complexion, with great long black earrings, a large gilt breastpin and dressed in bright red and yellow.

Her face paled and she uttered a scream:

"Santa Maria! It is the ghost of Dominic La Rosa!"

Almost at the same moment she turned on one of the suspects in the line and cried out in a wailing voice:

"You devil! Why did you kill him?"

He was taken into custody, was this Giovanni Romano, and before nightfall another Italian, Victor Picciotto, living near the scene of the murder, was also arrested.

Both, charged with homicide, were held to await the action of the grand jury.

Lest it be forgotten, attention should be called to the fact that the idea and the work of reconstructing the body was due to Lieut. Ernest Williams, of the New York police, and Dr. Pecchiul, of the city testing laboratory.

Buttons on Men's Sleeves

Buttons on men's sleeves is an ornament of fashion of which the origin is unknown, but one story says the practice began with the Prussian king, Frederick the Great. He is supposed to have ordered a row of buttons sewed on the upper side of his army's coat sleeves in order to prevent the soldiers from wiping their noses with their sleeves, thus soiling their uniforms. Later, the buttons were shifted to the side of the sleeves and became a matter of style.

FIRST AMERICAN ALMSHOUSE BUILT IN PHILADELPHIA

When William Penn first sailed for America, on the ship Welcome, he left a letter addressed to his wife and children in which he said:

"Pity the distressed and hold out a hand of help to them; it may be your case; and as you mete to others God will mete to you again."

The "Friends" who came with Penn to this country, which was to be the "haven of rest for the oppressed of all nations," were no doubt men of sterling qualities; they believed in the sentiments expressed in the letter left by Penn with his wife and children. It is, therefore, not surprising that the first almshouse established in the Colonies was that of the Friends.

A few years after the landing of Penn in 1681 he conveyed to one John Martin, tailor by trade and member of the Society of Friends, two Philadelphia city lots, each 51 feet by 200 feet, on the south side of Walnut street, between "Delaware, Third and Fourth streets." John Martin died in 1702, having his two city lots to the monthly meeting of the Society of Friends, expressing the wish they should be disposed of in any way the monthly meeting saw fit for the use of poor members of the Society of Friends.

The monthly meeting accepted the gift, and eleven years later, in 1713, when the need of a house of refuge for poor and aged Friends became evident, decided to use "John Martin's lots on Walnut street, as a site for an almshouse.

"Splinting" a Lung

Marvels of modern science have discovered the way to "splint" a lung, just as a broken arm is kept quiet until it has knit—and it works!

BUY CHRISTMAS SEALS

HELP FIGHT TUBERCULOSIS

On the operating table above, a young woman is shown receiving the "pneumothorax" treatment for tuberculosis. In this operation, the diseased lung is collapsed like a deflated toy balloon, until the abscesses created in it by tuberculosis germs have had time to scar over and heal. Then the air is let back into the lung and it begins to function normally again.

Tuberculosis surgery, or "collapse therapy" as it is known to the medical profession, has found its widest use in Michigan. A recent survey conducted by the Michigan Tuberculosis Association and paid for with funds derived in the annual sale of tuberculosis Christmas seals, made known that no state in the country employs as much of this most modern of all tuberculosis treatments as does Michigan.

Other forms of collapse therapy now being practiced in Michigan's nineteen state-accredited sanatoriums are all aimed at the same result—making the lung lie down and rest. Sometimes, both lungs are collapsed partially, when both are infected. Yet, with only part of each lung working, a patient may live and recover from the tuberculosis that would have killed him shortly had not his doctors resorted to this new surgery.

One of the other means of collapsing a lung is managed by taking out rib sections so that the chest wall and the remainder of the ribs will lie down on the lung forcing the air out of it and keeping it inactive. Sometimes sections from all of the ribs on one side are removed, yet when new bone has grown in and the lung has healed, there is not so much noticeable difference between the former patient and a person who never had tuberculosis.

A third method of applying the lung "splint" used most often consists of paralyzing the diaphragm, the muscle which assists the lung in breathing. When paralyzed, either permanently or temporarily the diaphragm pushes the lung up, giving it a smaller space to work in and completely stopping part of it from functioning. This gives the ripe in the lung bag, caused by tuberculosis, a chance to heal.

DISTRICT HEALTH UNIT BULLETIN

Incidence of Disease Among Pre-school Children

The principal causes of diseases which afflict children under 6 years of age fall into four general classes, namely, prenatal, gastric and intestinal, respiratory, and infectious.

Many young babies lose their lives or are seriously weakened by the unfavorable conditions surrounding the mother before the baby is born or by lack of proper care at childbirth. A large number of infant deaths are caused by diarrheal diseases due very largely to bad feeding. The third important cause of death among young children is in the respiratory diseases such as bronchitis and pneumonia, and the fourth in communicable diseases such as measles, whooping cough, and scarlet fever. In general, the rule is that the younger the child the more serious will be the effect of these diseases.

No more harmful doctrine was ever held by mothers than that all children must have the common infectious diseases, and therefore may as well be deliberately exposed to them in order to have them over while young. It will never be known how many lives have been sacrifired to this idea nor how many children have been permanently weakened as a result. For such reasons it should be the aim of every mother to prevent every possible hour of illness among her children.

When children play together there is abundant opportunity for the passing of the germs of infection from one to another if one happens to be ill. Children must be taught to cover the mouth when coughing or sneezing and to keep away from others who frequently cough or sneeze. It is necessary to teach the child not to put into his mouth pencils, horns, whistles, or similar toys which have been used by others. He should also be taught to scrub the teeth, rinse the mouth and gargle the throat. These preventive measures are especially necessary if some disease is present in the neighborhood. At such times, too, it is most important to be quick to recognize early signs of illness and to isolate the child until the symptoms disappear or recovery is complete. It is far better to keep a child by himself for a day or two than to run the risk of spreading the disease by neglect of this simple measure.

The means needed for stamping out infectious diseases are chiefly the careful isolation of the sick child, not only from the other children in the same family but from all children, until the nature of his illness is determined; and if this proves to be infectious, to continue the isolation as long as may be required. Certain diseases, like measles, may be transmitted even before they are recognized; and any child who complains of being tired, who coughs, sneezes, or loses his appetite, is open to suspicion and should be under careful supervision as long as any evidence of illness persists.

Among the more frequent of the serious diseases of childhood are measles, whooping cough, scarlet fever, diphtheria, syphilis, tuberculosis, infantile paralysis, bronchitis and pneumonia.

Pamphlets or information on any of the childhood diseases may be obtained from your county nurse, Miss Winnifred Golley; who will also be glad to help you with any problem you may have on child care.

MANY ARE DRIVING WITHOUT LICENSES

Over Quarter Million Have Failed to Renew Licenses

Approximately 260,000 Michigan motorists are operating automobiles without drivers' licenses, according to records of the department of state.

Under the present motor vehicle operator's license law, which was adopted by the 1931 legislature, 750,000 motorists obtained new licenses by December 1, 1931. These licenses must be renewed every three years but thus far in 1934 only 490,000 drivers have applied for new permits.

While operating a motor vehicle without a proper license has been a misdemeanor in Michigan for years, the financial responsibility act, adopted by the 1933 legislature, makes a motorist without a license liable to the provisions of that act.

"The present operators' license law is intended to bar those unfit to operate automobiles from the highways," Secretary of State Clurke W. Brown asserted. "It protects every user of the highways. I suggest that every automobile driver look at the expiration date of his present license and if it has expired or will do so in a short time, he should apply for a new one."

In order to provide prompt issuance of licenses, the operator's license division of the department is now working 24 hours a day.

Correlative passages to be read from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, include the following (p. 516): "The substance, Life, intelligence, Truth, and Love, which constitute Deity, are reflected by His creation; and when we subordinate the false testimony of the corporeal senses to the facts of Science, we shall see this true likeness and reflection everywhere."

CONSERVATION DEPT. WEEKLY BULLETIN

How many deer will occupy a section of good game cover? In an effort to obtain something of an answer to this question the United States Forest service conducted a drive within the boundaries of Manistee National Forest in Lake county, according to the Department of Conservation. CCC men formed a line and shouting at intervals drove through the woods. Others stationed along firelines around the area to square mile, counted 128 deer as the animals fled before the advancing men. This figure averages 64 deer per section or one deer for every 10 acres of land in the two sections.

More than 6,000 adult pheasants reared at the state game farm near Mason, were released last summer and this fall by Conservation officers in areas of the lower peninsula where food and cover conditions are believed favorable.

A black bear is to be added to the wildlife of the Wilderness area, which embraces 6,400 acres near the northern tip of the lower peninsula. The bear was captured near Alpena and shipped to the park, where it will be kept in a pen for release next spring.

SUNDAY DINNER SUGGESTIONS

By Ann Page

Steaks, chops and roasts have a strong appeal after a feast of poultry. Veal and pork are attractively priced this week, and although beef and lamb are somewhat higher they are still inexpensive. Green beans and spinach are the outstanding green vegetables of the week but cabbage is still the cheapest. A variety of salad greens tempts both appetite and pocketbook.

The citrus fruits, oranges, grapefruit and tangerines, are so abundant that their price is too low to profit the grower. Apples, too, are plentiful and moderate in cost.

THE KINDLY WORD

As a rule, good counsel yesterday still remains good counsel today. Well might it profit us to heed the old-time miller's words of wisdom to his son. It was good advice then; and it's good advice now. Said he, "My son, let thy flour be of the very finest, and thy service unexcelled and much business will be thy reward. But fail not to say the appreciative word, also, lest those who buy return not to trade with thee again."

Words of appreciation are never wasted. No matter how highly we regard our fellow men, if we don't let them know it once in a while our esteem is of little value to them. In private, as well as in business life, success is largely measured by the number of friends we gather along the way. The kindly word, spoken at the right time, is an investment in human happiness and contentment. It is one of the facts of life that should not be overlooked.

TAX IS SMALL PART OF PRICE OF BREAD

Higher Receipts From Farm Products Keep Factories Busy

Consumers who have been blaming the processing tax on wheat for the increased price of bread are advised by government experts that the tax is responsible for only one-fourth of the average two-cent rise in price of a loaf of bread.

The farmer was getting an average of 88 cents a bushel for wheat in October, 1934, as compared to a farm price of 32 cents a bushel in February, 1933. At the same time, the cost of a loaf of bread has increased two cents.

The remainder of the increase in bread prices is due to the higher prices for wheat and to the added costs for other ingredients and for labor. The farmer who signed a wheat contract is getting the average price for wheat, plus the benefit payment which is made from money collected by the processing tax. This gives the wheat grower about $1.10 for the same wheat which sold for 32 cents in February, 1933.

The margin between 32 cents and $1.10 enables many farmers to pay debts which have been hanging over them for years and to buy clothing, equipment, and furnishings that are turned out by city factories. A portion of the two-cent rise in bread prices also goes to employes of bakeries who are city residents.

the discretion of either contracting party, except that conviction of a bounty trapper for fraud, a violation of any of the state game laws or of any of the conditions of the contract, shall automatically terminate the contract.

Requisitions for bounty payments must give the date and the month on which the pelt was taken, whether the predator was shot or trapped and the location, including the town and range. The entire skin of the predator, with the feet attached, and bearing conclusive evidence of the sex must be submitted to the local district headquarters office.

If traps are used, traps must bear metal tags inscribed with the name and address of the trapper. Traps must not be set within 100 feet of the carcass of any protected game bird or animal, under penalty of voiding the contract.

The pelt of the predator must be stretched by the trapper and properly cared for before it is taken to district headquarters. Each predator skin will be marked by the Department to preclude the possibility of it being submitted again for bounty payment.

ITINERANT JEWELRY SALESMEN SEEK EASY MONEY IN THIS REGION

Itinerant jewelry vendors have been invading upper Michigan cities separating the easy marks from their hard earned money by selling them phoney jewelry of all kinds.

The salesmen have been arrested in several places and fined because they did not pay the necessary license to peddle. It may be those folks have been in our town, because here they don't report such gyp artists to the police. They patronize such people because they think they are smart in getting something better and cheaper than the home merchant can sell it to them. It is not only jewelry but includes every thing from fur coat to salted peanuts. Charlevoix is easy picking for that kind of fly-by-night salesmen.

LEGION ACTIVITIES
By F. V. Tyler

Friday, December 21st, is the date set for the Legion's Christmas feather party and tickets are already on sale. We will have dressed fowl this time and the same plan as to play will be followed, as at the Thanksgiving party, except that we will pay doubles instead of cutting cards. It will also be possible to play after most of the crowd has gone home, except that the charge for cards played after the crowd has thinned out will have to be raised to a proportionate figure. Only 200 tickets will be sold.

The post had an excellent meeting at the dug-out Tuesday evening. The most important matter of new business brought up was the consideration of a group insurance plan for members of Leslie T. Shapton Post, to provide a fund to be turned over to the widow or family of a deceased veteran. Rates and methods will be investigated.

Unless otherwise specified, the December meeting of the Charlevoix County Veterans' Council, which is regularly set for the first Thursday in each month, will be postponed a week. The place of meeting this month is Charlevoix.

LEGION AUXILIARY ACTIVITIES
By Gladys Henry

The American Legion Auxiliary met Monday evening in the dug-out of the American Legion Home for their regular monthly meeting.

It was decided to hold a Christmas party, Monday evening, December 17th, at the home of Mrs. George Kelderhouse, with each one attending bringing a 10c gift and names will be drawn for presentation later in the evening.

The local unit has been soliciting 100 glasses of jelly for the children at the Otter Lake billet and members are requested to bring their jell to this party.

Plans were also made to send a Christmas box to the disabled veterans in the hospital at Battle Creek, and presents such as cigarettes, candy, tobacco, soap, shaving cream, etc., should be brought to this meeting so they can be sent to the veterans in time for Christmas.

A series of card games have been under discussion for after the holidays and details will be worked out at our Christmas party, so all members try to be present.

TB SEAL SALE IS NOW IN PROGRESS

CHILD HEALTH LEAGUE GETS BEHIND DRIVE

Cite Work Done in County by State Association in Urge for Citizens to Purchase Seals

Attacking tuberculosis on four fronts, the tuberculosis Christmas seal sale, under the direction of the Charlevoix Child Health League, was able to report success in its first week of operation, Mrs. O. J. Hammond, Charlevoix chairman, has announced.

No seals will be received by Charlevoix county residents through the mails this year, the Michigan Tuberculosis Association which sponsors the sale and the anti-tuberculosis movement in Michigan, having turned the project over to the Child Health League.

"We are giving every citizen in the county an opportunity to purchase Christmas seals this year," Mrs. Hammond declared, "by using every known means of selling these tiny stamps which are the sole support of the Michigan Tuberculosis Association's program against disease."

"Everyone purchasing seals is aiding in the splendid work of prevention and treatment of tuberculosis, life-saving work made possible by the sale of the little Christmas seal. The 2,124 tuberculosis tests made in Charlevoix county the past year and the 344 x-rays taken were financed by funds obtained by the sale of seals. Two children from this county are under treatment at Otter Lake, two at Ann Arbor, one of these from Beaver Island, and one adult is receiving hospital care."

Personal solicitation of a selected list, delivery of seals by members of the Girls' League under the direction of Mrs. Ray Elizabeth Sawyer, seal sale booths at social functions and prominent places and a sale through the schools, have all been put in motion for the success of the sale.

With the help of the Hi-Y club at the school, the Girls' League will also put up posters and displays advertising the campaign. The Palace Theater has been showing the motion picture trailer distributed by the Association.

"If the residents of Charlevoix county respond as readily to the sale as those who have already offered their help, we're sure that 1934's seal sale will top that held last year," declared Mrs. Carl Thorsen, East Jordan, county chairman, "because of increased demands for tuberculin tests and x-rays in all parts of the state, the Michigan Tuberculosis Association tell us that the need for an increased sale of seals this year is greater than ever before.

Assisting Mrs. Thorsen in the sale is Miss Winifred Golley, Children's Fund nurse.

The Atwood male quartet that receives a hearty welcome every where will be present to furnish music.

On Sunday the morning service has been postponed to Sunday night at 8:00 o'clock. The Sunday school will be held as usual. In the evening the anniversary sermon will be delivered by Dr. F. F. KIPMEN HANG UP THIRD VICTORY

DEFEATED TRAVERSE TROJANS BY 20 TO 18 COUNT

Show Well Against Traverse—Meet Petoskey, Second Class B Opponent, Friday Night

Charlevoix basketeers hung up their third consecutive victory last Friday night at the expense of Traverse City's Trojans on the latter's court. The victory against this class B school may be considered an indication of the strength of the 1934-35 Kipke-coached aggregation which in previous years has always been near the top in northern Michigan court competition.

Charlevoix fought an up-hill battle to down the Traverse outfit. Unable to get their attack under way and erratic at the hoop, the Kipmen found themselves trailing 8 and 2 at the quarter. They began to find themselves near the close of the second stanza, however, breaking through for 7 points to cut the Trojan's lead 12 to 9 at the half.

The Kipmen stowed the game away in the third quarter, coming through with eight counters to pass Traverse and pile up a 17 to 12 advantage before the period closed. Traverse tried desperately to close the gap in the final eight minutes of play, but the Kipmen, content with a comfortable margin, protected their lead to the final whistle.

Carey, center, was high pointer for Charlevoix with six, while Ginther and Griffin, guards, chalked up seven each for Traverse.

Charlevoix takes on another class B opponent Friday night. They go to Petoskey for the first of two encounters with the Northmen, who last Friday opening their schedule, by soundly trouncing Boyne City. The Kipmen make their next home appearance on Thursday, December 27th, when they meet Union high of Grand Rapids in what will probably be the feature home game of the season.

ADULT CLASSES STARTED TUESDAY AT BAY SHORE

Educational Program Under Direction of Charlevoix Instructors

Adult classes, sponsored by the Charlevoix county welfare administration and Charlevtix public schools, were organized at Bay Shore last Friday evening. Twenty-two were present at the organization meeting.

The first classes were held Tuesday night. Subjects offered will include sewing, commercial and grade review, with Helen Halverson, Clarence Arnold and A. C. Belding the respective instructors. The three instructors also conduct classes in similar subjects in Charlevoix, but so fur the enrollment for some subjects has been too small to warrant continuance, thus the classes at Bay Shore have been organized.

COMMUNITY XMAS PROGRAM PLANNED

Free Movies for Kiddies, Gifts at Legion Home, Carol Parade in Evening Is the Program

(By F. V. Tyler)

Children of Charlevoix are to enjoy an unusual treat on Saturday, December 22nd. Santa Claus—that funny old chap who comes down chimneys and fills stockings and loads Christmas trees with presents for good boys and girls—will spend a whole day in Charlevoix.

Santa will arrive some time Saturday morning in his sleigh, with bells jingling and reindeer prancing. He will come down U. S. 31 from the country, drive through the streets to see where the good children live and where he will stop on Christmas eve and, later, will visit the stores along Bridge street to see if they are properly stocked with toys and games.

At one o'clock, or thereabouts, the good Saint, with the assistance of the American Legion, will distribute gifts of candy and nuts at the Legion Home on East Garfield avenue. At 3 p. m., Mrs. Moon is giving a free movie entertainment for children under 12 years of age at the Palace Theatre. Santa will be there, too, and around most of the afternoon to see that the youngsters are enjoying themselves.

Saturday evening, Santa Claus has kindly consented to lead a parade of wait singers through the streets. They will sing the good old Christmas carols, as they used to in England, France and Germany, hundreds of years ago, and will stop before the homes of the shut-ins—the sick and disabled people who cannot get out to see the fun.

Hammond, who inaugurated the first airmail service between Charlevoix and St. James several years ago, held the contract a couple winters. He operated a route between St. Ignace and Mackinac Island and a general service in the upper peninsula.

Bill Brown, who has been associated with Hammond, will handle the Charlevoix contract, it is understood.

IRONTON CHURCH HELD OBSERVANCE

50TH ANNIVERSARY EVENT OF FRIDAY AND SUNDAY

Appropriate Program Recalled Early Years of Church and Provided Enjoyable Entertainment

The Ironton Congregational church celebrated its 50th anniversary last Friday and Sunday nights.

A large crowd gathered for the fellowship supper. Many were from Charlevoix, Boyne City, East Jordan, Atwood and Norwood. After the supper all gathered in the auditorium and under the direction of William Sanderson were treated to a very interesting program.

Rev. G. R. Parker, pastor of the church, gave a few words of welcome which were responded to by Rev. P. G. Koopman of the Atwood Reformed church. The Reformed church quartet was present and gave several selections to the delight of all present.

Judge J. M. Harris of Boyne City, who was the principal of the Ironton schools for several years, gave some very interesting recollections. He produced an old autograph album in which were names of his former pupils. He called upon Mrs. Harris, whose father operated the first hotel in Ironton, and she told of the families as they moved into the community. Many interesting events, some amusing, were recalled. Letters were read by Ralph Price from persons unable to be present, and a local group of young people furnished a musical number.

Sunday evening the last service was held and Dr. Pillsbury delivered a very fine anniversary sermon. Music under the direction of Mrs. William Sanderson was rendered by a choir composed of former singers. Mr. and Mrs. John Seiler gave a number and Mr. and Mrs. Datus Dean and two nieces, daughters of Mrs. Chew of this city, gave a number. After the service Mrs. Sam Alexander cut a large anniversary cake, and all present enjoyed an hour of fellowship. The ladies served bountiful refreshments and all indicated that the celebration would long be remembered.

COUNCIL PROVIDES FOR WINTER SPORTS

GRANT STREET HILL SET ASIDE FOR COASTING

City to Share Cost of Municipal Skating Rink and Provide Finances for Christmas Gifts

Provisions for regulated coasting, a municipal skating rink and financial cooperation with the American Legion for a community Christmas program resulted from the regular meeting of the city council.

Grant street hill has been designated as a coasting place for kiddies and winter sports enthusiasts this winter. The intersections at Antrim and Mason streets have been blocked and a guard placed to detour traffic and safeguard those using the hill. Working in conjunction with the board of education, the council street committee has set the coasting hours between 4 and 10 p. m. on all days except Saturday and Sunday, when the hours will be from 8 a. m. to 10 p. m.

The council voted to share its usual proportion of the expense of building and maintaining a municipal skating rink on the school grounds. The work of scraping the rink was started Tuesday and with this completed icing will be started at once. It is expected the rink will be ready for use some time soon. It is expected skating competition and hockey will be supervised by directors of the FERA recreational program when the rink is ready for use.

The American Legion will again this year have charge of the distribution of Christmas candy bags to kiddies of Charlevoix and community. The council voted a sum to aid in defraying the expense of this annual undertaking. The time and hour will be set by the Legion and complete announcement will be made when information is available.

Contracts for snow removal from sidewalks during the remaining winter months were awarded. John Gallagher will serve the south hill district, Robert Mitchell the valley and Edgar Smith the north side district.

Resolutions for certain sewage disposal projects were adopted and a payroll aggregating $3,899.27 approved.

AL "SLIM" GERHART SUBMITS TO ARREST

Sought Since October 24, Appeared Here Last Saturday

Al "Slim" Gerhart, sought by Charlevoix county officers since October 24th, voluntarily submitted to arrest here last Saturday.

Gerhart, owner of the Manitou Club located between Petoskey and Harbor Springs, is charged with an attempt to steal from the Charlevoix County Nursery on the night of Tuesday, October 23rd, also with assault with intent to do great bodily harm less than the crime of murder.

Waiving examination at a justice court hearing, Gerhart was bound over to the March term of circuit court. He furnished bond of $1,000 for his appearance.

It is alleged that Gerhart and two companions, Art Connolly and Fred Herrick, were apprehended by Jim Wilson, Eveline township farmer, as they were about to steal shrubbery from the Charlevoix County Nursery. In the fracas which followed, it is claimed Gerhart fired three shots at Wilson. Connolly and Herrick, held by Wilson and taken into custody by Sheriff Floyd Ikens, whom he called, were held for questioning and later released under bond. They will appear in court at the March term also.

DISTRICT HEALTH UNIT BULLETIN

Incidence of Defects Among Preschool Children

Only by keeping watch over his physical and mental abilities can one know that a child is big enough and strong enough for his age.

Through medical examinations by your family physician and at clinics, facts that should be obvious but frequently are not, come out as a result of checking up on the preschool child's condition. Thus, this close check-up will enable us to curb the incidence of disease and defects in the younger age groups and correct these defects early in life.

Throat 122, teeth 94, glands 70, nutrition 51, ears 33, eyes 21, skin and scalp 19, posture 12, heart 10, orthopedic 10, lungs 10, nasal passages 9, nervous symptoms 9, speech 7, thyroid 5. Total 481.

From the above figures, we can readily see where the periodic examinations act as a safeguard against future trouble and as a guide in the child's daily management. Evidence may show that he is getting too much or too little food, that his elimination is not what it should be, or that he needs more of these things, particularly necessary to the health child, such as orange juice or cod liver oil.

Increase in weight is not all there is to good nutrition. Quality of tissue is of more importance than quantity. From 2 to 5 years the child is growing rapidly. He is gaining about five pounds a year in weight and about 1½ inches in height. The growing child should receive sufficient amounts of milk, eggs, cereals, vegetables and fruits, for these meet his food requirements. Since the foods supply him with material for growth and also for maintenance to keep him warm in order to give him energy and activity and proper functioning of his body, the feeding and diet of a young child is a serious business.

Among the numerous defects observed in preschool children is that of crossed eyes. The child should be taken to a competent physician and treatment for cross eye should be begun as soon as it is recognized. Cross eye does not improve of itself as the child grows older; the tendency is for the condition to become worse. In many cases, the eye may be straightened later, but its power of sight is gravely impaired.

Another defect less frequently found but one so vitally important to human life is the heart. The most important type of heart disease in children, because it is by far the most common and crippling kind, is rheumatic heart disease, which follows rheumatic fever, St. Vitus, dance and sometimes tonsilitis or other less definite rheumatic infections. Proper care and rest are necessary in remedying this serious defect.

Therefore, the preschool child is greatly benefited by his medical examination in which is revealed the true picture of his physical make-up, which should be the basis for advice as to what to do to assure a better chance for health and well being. If you have any question or wish any advice as to the health of your child, your county nurse, Miss A. Winnifred Golby, will be glad to aid you or you may bring him to the preschool clinic conducted nearest your community for a check-up.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS

By B. C. Mellencamp

Charlevoix County Potato Club Member Wins High Award

News has been received that Howard McDonald, East Jordan, one of the outstanding club members in this county, won first on his club sample on Russet Rurals at the National Club Congress, Chicago. Furthermore, the Michigan State Club sample, likewise, won first in national competition. This state exhibit consisted of five individual samples, and Charlevoix county had three exhibits used in making up the state exhibit of five. This latest accomplishment again reflects the quality of work being accomplished by the young farmers. The other two exhibits used in the state exhibit were grown by Gwendon Holt and Wilbur McDonald.

We have not been informed as yet on the places won by the last named two club members, but hope that they will be near the top. It will be recalled that our county exhibit won first at the Gaylord Potato Show, and that the exhibit of Gwendon Holt was the best peck in the entire junior department. Thus, Charlevoix county has again demonstrated its potato show ability. The next event will be the State Seed Show held at the Michigan State College during Farmers' Week. There should be some equally good announcement during that week in regard to our potatoes.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCH

205 Clinton Street

Sunday morning service, 10:45.

First Wednesday of month, 7:15 p. m.

Reading room—Saturdays, 2 to 5 p. m.

We cordially invite the public to our services and reading room.

"God the Preserver of Man," will be the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Christian Science churches throughout the world on Sunday, December 16th.

Among the Bible citations is this passage (Acts 9:33,34): "And there he found a certain man named Aeneas, which had kept his bed eight years, and was sick of the palsy. And Peter said unto him, Aeneas, Jesus Christ maketh thee whole: arise, and make thy bed. And he arose immediately."

Correlative passages to be read from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, include the following (p. 99): "The calm, strong current of true spirituality, the manifestations of which are health, purity, and self-immolation, must deepen human experience, until the beliefs of material existence are seen to be a bald imposition, and sin, disease, and death give everlasting place to the scientific demonstration of divine Spirit and to God's spiritual, perfect man."

EDITORIAL

BEFORE THE DAWN

The order to cease firing has been given—a new armistice is about to be signed—battle flags are being lowered and happy faces are to be seen by the light of the campfires gleam. Out of Washington comes the news that former conflicting viewpoints existing between the national administration and banking and industry are being shaped into better understanding of each other's needs and purposes. Through the United States Chamber of Commerce leaders in capital and industry have made it known their desire to go along with administration plans of rehabilitation. And not to be outdone in overtures of peace and friendliness President Roosevelt with characteristic diplomacy conveys the impression that unlimited government spending must be ended; there will be no further attempt at inflation; reasonable profits in industry encouraged; eventually a balanced budget. Thus do both sides remove the fear of each other seriously retarding recovery efforts. Just as republicans and democrats alike recognized the danger of Upton Sinclair success in California, so do national leaders recognize the importance of presenting a solid front against "cure shouters" offering every quack concoction known to mankind for the alleviation of our national ills. And the common citizen, caught between the upper and lower millstones of their differences, will welcome this belated opportunity to join in a sensible solution of our difficulties. Let us hope we are about to witness the dawning of a new and better day in American history.

NEED OF THE HOUR

Charity must be administered in a way that will help people maintain their self-respect and become self-supporting as soon as possible. Money spent this way will return many times the benefit of haphazard, personally administered relief. Assistance must continue sometimes for years before the families are completely rebuilt, but the result will be for generations to come. The boys and girls of such a family restored to health, confidence, and ambition become normal citizens and heads of healthy, useful families. Neglected, they may burden the world for many generations to come with children of inferiority complexes and twisted morals. Human engineering, the rebuilding of families, intelligent aid, sustained assistance until the job is well done—this is the need of the hour.—Albert D. Lasker

There are people in Charlevoix county anxious to build homes and the government is anxious for them to get the money and give out the work. The combination ought to get along.

THIS CHRISTMAS SEASON

How many Michigan men and women are there who would like to make a small contribution to future good citizenship? Just a matter of a single dollar, but it will be a dollar returning splendid result on the investment for years to come. The Starr Commonwealth for Boys, located near Albion, is desperately in need of financial assistance as winter comes down upon the earth. Ninety boys at the Commonwealth are looking hopefully to you and I to make this small investment in humanity. Depression years have weighed heavily upon them. The Starr Commonwealth for Boys is one of the finest movements for the salvation of wayward and friendless youth in all Michigan. Be the kind of a person God intended you should be by putting a crisp one dollar bill in an envelope today and mailing it to the Starr Commonwealth for Boys, Albion, Michigan. Don't disappoint these youngsters—help to give them the best Christmas season they have ever had.

MORE GENEROUS

A dispatch from the Michigan Tuberculosis Association states contributions paying for some of the ten million seals sent out on Thanksgiving Day are "very encouraging."

The movement these tuberculosis Christmas Seals support deserves "very encouraging" returns from the people of Michigan. It is the people's project, constructed, and managed by them, to help protect their health and the health of their children.

But it needs expansion to take care of the demands it will feel next year, and it must be sure of that ability to expand within the next few weeks, because tuberculosis Christmas Seals, sold but once a year, are it only source of revenue.

So those who have not yet paid for their seals are urged to do so at once and to continue the good work of making this year's contribution more generous than last.

Do so today, and the returns to you in improved public health and safety from tuberculosis, will also be more generous.

"The world today is full of persons ready to name anyone who is not willing to be done good to in the precise manner recommended by the proposer. Scientific humanitarians who have become so extremely scientific that they have ceased to be humanitarians, are the order of the day."—Joseph Wood Krutch.

APPEAL FOR DEER SKINS BRINGS FINE RESPONSE

Thousands of Hides Are Turned Over to Welfare Agencies

There has been a hearty response from hunters to the request that they turn over unwanted deer skins for processing and distribution by the State Relief Administration's self-help cooperatives. Literally thousands of skins have been delivered to county administrators or are being reserved for shipment later.

Administrators have been advised by the state office that three or more hides may be sent, freight collect, to Ludwig Evenson, president of the Iron Mountain self-help cooperative, which is equipped to tan them. Skilled workers are available for fashioning the skins into jackets. The finished product will be sold or used as a medium of barter and exchange between cooperatives.

SPORTSMEN SEEK REAPPOINTMENT OF TITUS AND LOUTIT

A movement of statewide proportions is on foot among Michigan sportsmen and conservationists to promote the reappointment of Harold Titus of Traverse City, and William Loutit of Grand Haven to the State Conservation Commission when their terms expire on April 1.

"Both these men have ably proven their worth. Both not only have shown that they have the natural ability to serve Michigan efficiently, but—greater than that—their personal inclinations have furnished a guiding determination to keep the administration of our conservation activities on a non-political basis."

MICHIGAN BUSINESS SHOWS IMPROVEMENT

Records of the corporation division of the department of state indicate that business in Michigan is on the upgrade. Department executives predict that for the first time since 1929 the corporation privilege tax, which provides a good index into business conditions, will show an increase. In 1933 this tax amounted to $4,720,915 while it is estimated that the 1934 tax will exceed this amount by $10,000 or $15,000.

STATE LIQUOR REVENUE NEARLY EIGHT MILLIONS

Net revenue from the sale of beer and liquor for 1934 will approximate $8,000,000, William G. Lewis, member of the state liquor control commission, estimated Friday. Revenue for the first 10 months of the year was $6,507,784 and Lewis said he estimates the November and December profit will be about $1,250,000.

FARM CENSUS BEGINS IN MICHIGAN JAN. 1

Regular Five-Year Inventory of Agriculture Need Now

Beginning January 1, census enumerators will call on all Michigan farmers to obtain information in accordance with the law which requires that an agricultural census shall be taken every five years, according to the director of the census, William L. Austin, Washington, D. C.

The farm census will be very important, in view of the unusual conditions under which agriculture has been conducted in the past few years. The first farm census was taken in 1840, and others at intervals of 10 years until 1925 when the new law requiring that the census be taken every five years was passed.

Many of the governmental plans to aid farmers are based upon information provided by the data secured by the census reports.

ESTIMATE DEER KILL EXCEEDS LAST SEASON

Record Number Black Bear Brought Across Straits This Year

Reports received by the Department of Conservation during and following the open deer hunting season indicate that the kill this year was a little larger than that of 1933, but that the percentage of successful hunters was smaller.

The Department of Conservation estimates that in the neighborhood of 20,000 deer were killed.

More bear were transported across the Straits of Mackinac than in any previous year, the number being over 150, according to reports received by the department. The largest number of any previous year was 72.

Many hunters returning from the upper peninsula reported relatively fewer does and fawns and an apparent increase in predatory animals.

PEOPLE ARE BUYING LITTLE FLUID MILK

Parents Who Skimp Takes Chances With Health of Children

One reason why Michigan dairy farmers are not finding a ready market for their product is that consumers are not buying adequate amounts of milk, even when lack of money is not involved, according to Dr. Fred C. Howe, Consumers Counsel, Washington, D. C.

A study of the way 29,485 families in 51 cities spent their food budget reveals that 14 per cent of these families bought no whole milk. All these families had an income adequate to provide the food needed by the group. The purchase of milk was avoided to permit the spending of money for some other purpose.

These families included many children which needed milk to insure proper growth and the protection of health. The deficiencies of diet which are imposed upon a child can not be restored later in life. Weaknesses attributable to the lack of vital elements may not become evident for year but they certainly will appear.

Fluid milk in a condition suitable for children's food can not be produced and delivered to city dwellings on the same basis as potatoes or beans. Fluid milk must be protected from contamination by anything which would reduce its food value. This protection costs money and the milk can not be sold at less than the cost of production if the farmer is to remain in business.

Children need fluid milk and many adults would be much healthier if they drank milk each day. Spending the milk dollar for other purposes is bartering the children's health for things of much less value.

Oats Grown With Alfalfa Advised

Serves as Good Nurse Crop, Protects During Winter, Halts Erosion.

By C. H. Farnham, Assistant in Soil Experiment Fields, University of Illinois.—WNU Service.

Damage from dust storms, which proved so devastating to young alfalfa seedings in some sections, can be practically eliminated if oats is sown as a nurse crop with the new alfalfa seedings this fall.

Largely as a result of the poor stands of forage caused by the drouth and the provisions of the AAA programs, it is anticipated that an exceptionally large acreage of alfalfa will be seeded during the next few weeks. An appreciable amount of these seedings will be on sandy or light windblown soils which are subject to wind erosion capable of ruining seedings made during the latter part of the summer.

Tests at the Oquawka soil experiment field, maintained in Henderson county by the University of Illinois College of Agriculture, show that this damage may be largely done away with by the use of oats as a combination nurse and cover crop for fall-seeded alfalfa on sandy land. Observations made at the Oquawka field disclosed no damage to alfalfa seeded last fall where surrounded by good oats growth. However, a few feet away where no oats had grown the alfalfa was either badly damaged or entirely killed by the wind-blown sand. In a larger unprotected area on the field, sand had drifted several inches deep, completely burying a strip of bluegrass.

In addition to preventing the movement of the soil by high winds, oats sown as a nurse crop with alfalfa this fall supplies at least three other advantages. Grasshoppers prefer the oats to the young alfalfa plants and thus are not so likely to feed upon the legume; oats is less of a competitive companion for the alfalfa than weeds would be, and oats aids in protecting the alfalfa against the winter cold.

Slat or Trench Silo

The farmer who wants a cheap silo for storing his fodder, corn or other roughage this year may take his choice of two kinds, both very inexpensive and easy to make, and quite satisfactory when correctly used. One is the trench silo; the other is the cornerib or snow fence type. Directions for locating, building and filling both kinds of temporary silos are available from county agents. Trench silos are better adapted to clay soils than to other types of soils. They must be located so that surface water will drain away. They are cheap to fill because no blower is needed. Crib silos are easier to build, but require more purchased material. Lining crib silos with building paper reduces spoilage of the ensilage near the outside.

DAIRY NOTES

The "boarder" cow is not a profitable boarder.

Missouri and Iowa are the largest poultry producing states in the Union.

A dairy cow needs to be fed liberally to get the highest test of fat, but this feed should be balanced.

The first requisite for safe milk is healthy cows free from tuberculosis, contagious abortion, and mastitis.

The roughage is of first importance and determines, to a large extent, the character of the entire ration and the feed cost of producing milk.

Trusting any bull is risky business. Most of the accidents could be avoided by having the right kind of barn and yard in which to keep the animal.

The barn should be located where it can be kept in good sanitary condition regardless of weather. Well-drained cow yards are essential.

United States grades of alfalfa best adapted to dairy feeding are No. 1 extra leafy, No. 1 leafy, No. 1 alfalfa, No. 2 leafy, No. 2 alfalfa, No. 3 alfalfa.

Digestibility of hay is the measure of the feed value which animals obtain from it. Feeding the right kind of hay to dairy cows is the quickest way to lay a solid foundation for dairy profits.

Best Way to Save Crops Too Late in Maturing in Natural Way.

By W. A. Foster, Farm Building Specialist, University of Illinois.—WNU Service.

Silos are coming into such importance as a result of the critical feed situation that one farmer even wanted to know how he could move a concrete silo instead of building another.

Extremely dry weather and the chinch bugs have combined to reduce the amount of hay and other forage that are normally stored for winter live stock consumption. But on farms with silos, this loss can be overcome at least partially by putting up additional silage. Corn planted or replanted too late to mature for grain will make good silage. Furthermore, such chinch-bug resistant crops as sunflowers, soybeans and cowpeas may be made into silage. Where grain sorghum is grown this, too, may serve as a substitute for the more common corn silage.

If a new silo of any kind is to be built, there are certain things that must be kept in mind. In the first place, the structure should be strong enough so that it will not burst under great pressure. It should be smooth on the inside so that the ensilage will settle freely, and leak-proof so that the juices will not seep away and air enter to cause spoilage. The silo should be economical, of ample capacity, storm and fire-proof and attractive. The latter feature may not be essential, but it will add to its value as a permanent improvement in the farm building group.

Whether or not a silo is necessary on most farms is, of course, debatable in some cases. However, with the increased difficulty of earning a livelihood out of the soil because of keen competition, insect pests, drouth and floods, late freezes and early frosts, the silo is becoming increasingly important in farm operations.

It is admitted that silo filling is hard work, but it is all done in a few days. Then, after the task is completed, the farmer has available, in a 100-ton silo, sufficient feed to carry a herd of 25 cows through the winter feeding period with enough silage left over for four to six weeks' feed during the summer when pastures are short.

"Back to Grass" Means the Forage Crops Also

"Back to grass," now the objective of farmers for millions of acres in the United States, is a term the explanation of according to crop specialists in the United States Department of Agriculture. Grass in this sense means legumes as well, and these are in most cases forage crops.

Grass, to the average person, connotes only plants, in which the leaves are narrow and spear shaped blades. When speaking of pasture land farmers usually refer to land in grass sod year after year. In the West they mean the native grasses.

"Back to grass" means more grasses and legumes in semipermanent pastures and hay land, or in crop rotations of two to five years. It means in many cases using better soil for pastures. "Only pasturelands" is a phrase common in the Middle West—really, when referring to land too poor and too rough for plow land.

Grasses and legumes grown on soils as good as those used for grain crops, say the department specialists, often will return greater net profit to the live stock farmer than grains on similar soil.

The Reddest Tomatoes

The reddest tomatoes are not the ones that grow where the sun is hottest. On the contrary, scientists of the United States Department of Agriculture, and several state experiment stations, who made a careful comparative study of tomato varieties in connection with the identification of the principal commercial varieties, found that the ideal red color of a variety does not always develop to the same extent in different regions. Under abnormally high temperatures or when the fruits are exposed to the direct rays of the sun without shade, green leaves the characteristic rich red may not develop. Varieties that are of a rich brilliant scarlet in the central and northern states tend in the southern and toward a green color under the higher temperatures of the Southwest.

FRESHMAN COLLEGE "5" WINS FROM PETOSKEY

Overcome Early Lead to Take Victory by 21 to 16 Score

A crowd of about 200 people witnessed a very exciting basketball game last Friday evening at the local gymnasium. The opposing teams were the representatives of the Charlevoix and Petoskey Freshman colleges.

Charlevoix's starting line-up included Ance, Potter, Livingston, W. Kirby and T. Kirby. Petoskey was represented by Maxfield, Potts, Crawford, Tillotson, and Reid. Davenport officiated.

Petoskey got off to a fast start, and was leading by a score of 8 to 2 at the end of the first quarter. Charlevoix spurted in the second canto, and led Petoskey 13 to 12 at the end of the half. The locals maintained this lead in the third quarter, which ended 16 to 15, and then gradually forged ahead in the final round to have a comfortable five-point lead as the game ended with the score at 21 to 16. Potter and W. Kirby led the scoring for the locals, while Crawford was high point man for the visitors.

This game was played as part of the recreation program for that night, and no charge was made. The locals will go to Petoskey on December 21st for a return game. They also expect to have more home games with such teams as neighboring Freshman colleges might put in the field. These games will be announced later, as the schedule is not yet complete.

HEALTH INSTITUTE LARGELY ATTENDED

OVER ONE HUNDRED PRESENT HERE SATURDAY

Prominent Medical Authorities Appeared on Program; Traveling Library Left for Public

Over 100 persons representing the northern Michigan region attended the health institute sponsored by the Petoskey Sub-district Nurses' Association here last Saturday.

The program, featuring prominent speakers in state medical circles, was highly educational and many took advantage of the instruction offered.

Outstanding among the speakers were Dr. William Meade of Manistee, formerly with the Howell sanatorium, who spoke on "Tuberculosis"; Jacob Khassen, assistant supervisor of the state department of rehabilitation, whose subject was "Rehabilitation"; Dr. William Conway of Petoskey, who spoke on the topic, "How Can We Find and Help the Child With Poor Vision"; Dr. R. Phillip Sheets, superintendent of the Traverse City state hospital, whose topic was "Mental Hygiene"; and Dr. R. B. Armstrong of Charlevoix.

Also taking a prominent part on the program were Miss Melinka Herc, Detroit, president of the State Organization of Public Nursing; Miss Louise Knapp of Wayne University, Detroit, and Mrs. Moore of the state health department.

A traveling library, property of the State Organization of Public Nursing, was left at the District Health Unit offices on Petoskey avenue for a month. The public is invited to call for books at any time during that period.

CHANGE IN ELECTION LAW IS ANTICIPATED

Seek to Eliminate Special Session to Cost from $10,000 to $80,000

The controversy over the election of the next Secretary of State is apt to result in a complete overhauling of the state's election code and it is possible that amendments to the state constitution will be submitted to the people at a future election.

These changes will be aimed at the elimination of costly procedures in the final determination of elections. It is estimated that the special session of the legislature which started Monday, December 10th, will cost the taxpayers of Michigan from $10,000 to $80,000. In event the legislature orders a recount the cost may run as high as $200,000.

The calling of a special legislative session to determine the result of an election for state office, set a new precedent in the state's history as previously the legislature has only been called upon to settle contests over its own membership.

Regardless of the decision of the legislature, it is almost certain that the controversy will be carried into either the state or federal courts, and the final determination may not be made for several weeks. One of the questions that is almost sure to be carried into court is whether the questions regarding the election should have been submitted to the special session or whether the regular 1935 session, which meets January 2nd, should decide the issues. No additional cost would have been imposed upon the taxpayers, had the protests been submitted to the 1935 session.

JUDGE SPRAGUE SEEKS RE-ELECTION IN APRIL

No Petitions Yet for Judgeship in This Circuit Court District

Nomination petitions have been placed in circulation in Emmet county for Judge Victor D. Sprague, placing his name in nomination as the Republican candidate for circuit judge in that district.

As far as is known no petitions have been circulated in the district of which Charlevoix county is a part and in which Parm C. Gilbert of Traverse City, is circuit judge. A school commissioner for Charlevoix county will also be elected.

The primary will be in March and the election at the regular time for township and city elections in April.

Excellent skating is reported at East Jordan where the south arm of Lake Charlevoix has frozen over with ice sufficiently thick for this sport. While the lake is frozen at Ironton, the ferry is still being operated with some difficulty. This service will be continued as long as conditions permit.

LEGION ACTIVITIES
By F. V. Tyler

Charlevoix County Veterans' Council meets Thursday evening in the dug-out here.

Interest in the arquirement of new members for 1935 has revived and the work of signing them up will be pushed strongly after the holidays. The post now has 29 paid members for 1935.

Investigation of the matter of group insurance for the members of Leslie T. Shaplan Post is still under way. Determination of the best method of establishing an insurance fund with suitable rates is the big question.

The post is planning a 30-foot small-calibre rifle range in the basement of the Legion Home. Target shooting is a heap of fun and may be turned to good account at entertainments to provide revenue for the post.

AUTO CRASH KILLS TWO LOCAL PEOPLE

DR. AND MRS. F. H. WILKINSON VICTIMS

Former's Sister, Mrs. Roxanna Morrow, Bellaire, Also Dead From Injuries Received Monday

Dr. and Mrs. Frank H. Wilkinson, prominent local residents, and the former's sister, Mrs. Roxanna Morrow of Bellaire, are dead as the result of an automobile accident Monday afternoon near Paw Paw.

According to newspaper reports, the car driven by Dr. Wilkinson, en route to California on a vacation trip, skidded into a Greyhound bus when Wilkinson attempted to pass another car.

Mrs. Wilkinson and Mrs. Morrow died from their injuries shortly after the collision. Dr. Wilkinson succumbed early Tuesday morning in Bronson hospital, Kalamazoo. The bodies, brought here Tuesday night, are being held at the Glenn See funeral home awaiting the arrival of relatives and completion of funeral arrangements.

Dr. and Mrs. Wilkinson and Mrs. Morrow left here Saturday, on a trip which would have taken them to Beverly Hills, Calif., for a visit with the former's brother, Dr. A. M. Wilkinson. They stopped over Sunday and part of Monday in Grand Rapids before continuing the journey.

Charlevoix loses two eminent citizens in the death of Dr. and Mrs. Wilkinson. Both were prominently identified in club, social and fraternal activities. Dr. Wilkinson was chairman of the Charlevoix county Republican committee and was active in the fall campaigns. He was past commander of Ivanhoe Commandery, Knights Templar, and member of the Council at Petoskey; member of the Blue Lodge, Chapter, and O. E. S. here. He was vice-president of the newly-organized local Kiwanis Club, member of the American Legion, a past member of the board of education.

Dr. Wilkinson served in the Spanish-American war, in Company C, 35th Michigan U. S. V. I. He retired February 21, 1899, with the rank of sergeant. He was commissioned 1st Lieutenant in the dental corps during the World War, serving until January 17, 1919, at Camp Wadsworth, N. C. He was recently promoted to the rank of Major in the Dental Reserve Corps. Both were members of the First Church of Christ, Scientist, of Charlevoix.

Born January 22, 1877, at Atwood, Dr. Wilkinson had lived in this vicinity his entire life. He was educated in the local schools and graduated June 19, 1902, from the University of Michigan dental college. He practiced several years at Gladstone and in this city since around 1907.

Mrs. Wilkinson had lived in Charlevoix since early girlhood when she came here with her parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. James A. Hawkins from Grand Rapids. The couple were married about 30 years ago.

Dr. Wilkinson is survived by three brothers, James of Detroit, Charles of Lansing, and Dr. Allen M. Wilkinson of Beverly Hills, Calif.

Condolence

Am deeply grieved over the tragic accident to the Wilkinsons. Please extend my deepest sympathy to their many friends.

Douglas Tibbits

The death of Dr. and Mrs. Wilkinson has brought forth many expressions of real grief, and has caused deep and sincere regret among the many who knew and honored them. Much could be said of Dr. Wilkinson's private and public life, much could be said of his attainments; all will be said and re-said many times by those who knew him. Life is not measured by years alone but by thoughts and deeds, and by this measure Dr. Wilkinson has lived an exemplary life.

Plan Memorial Service

The exact day and time of the funeral is still undetermined as the Courier goes to press, but so far as known the service will be private. A public memorial service will be held Sunday afternoon, December 23rd, at 2:30, in the high school gymnasium.

SCHOOLS CLOSE FRIDAY FOR TWO WEEKS

Appropriate Programs Will Be Held Last Day Before Vacation

Charlevoix public schools will close Friday afternoon for the annual holiday vacation period. Classes will be resumed on Monday, January 7th, according to Supt. O. P. North.

Exercises appropriate to the season will be held in all school grades Friday afternoon. An assembly program has been arranged for the high school classes. Mrs. W. W. Hurd will speak and a number of Christmas dramatizations will be given.

Gaily trimmed Christmas trees and festive decorations are found in every room in the spirit of the season.

PREPARE SEE BUILDING FOR POSTOFFICE SITE

An extensive program and alterations and repairs is under way at the S. M. See & Sons building at the corner of Bridge and Antrim streets in preparation for the removal of the postoffice to new quarters in the building. It is understood it will be several weeks before the transfer is made.

MAKE DRIVE RAISE WELFARE FUNDS

COUNTY REQUESTED A PLEDGE OF $40,000 FOR 1935

Eighteen Thousand Promised and Officials Study Finances to Work Out the Balance

A concerted effort to raise $40,000 requested as this county's portion of the welfare work relief load for 1935 is being made by county, city and township officials.

Up to the present time pledges have been made for approximately $18,000. The county road commission has agreed to use welfare labor up to $10,000 and is now studying the outlay estimated for the coming year in an effort to raise the amount to $15,000 or possibly $20,000.

The three cities of the county have pledged an aggregate of $4,500. Charlevoix has agreed to furnish $2,500 and East Jordan and Boyne City $1,000 each. The township of Melrose has pledged $500, Boyne Valley township $200 and Marion township has agreed to give $150 in cash and turn over delinquent road tax collections in 1935.

Other townships are studying the situation and making an effort to learn what amount they will be able to give as their share of the total requested. It is understood credit on the pledge will be allowed for funds expended by the county poor commission other than for hospitalization and infirmary expenses. Just what the figure will run has not been ascertained.

In the meantime, local welfare authorities have had orders from the state commission not to start any new FERA work relief projects until the amount requested of the county has been pledged in full. Projects now under way will be completed, it is understood, but no new ones will be started, whether approved or not.

PLANS FOR CHARITY BALL PROGRESSING

First Annual Affair at Gymnasium Friday Evening, Dec. 28

Plans for Charlevoix's first annual Charity Ball, to be held Friday evening, December 28th, at the high school gymnasium, are rapidly reaching completion.

Some of the committees have already completed their work, while those in charge of refreshments, decorations, etc., are still active. Those desiring to attend who have not already received invitations are requested to communicate by mail with the Program Committee, general delivery, city. Only a limited number of invitations are still available.

Proceeds from the entertainment, which is to be made an annual event, will be used for charity.

LIQUOR STORE CLOSING ORDER COUNTERMANDED

According to Alonza Powers, manager of the local liquor store, orders have been received from the state liquor control commission to operate the store six days a week until further notice.

This order countermands previous instructions for operation three days weekly. One day was lost by the previous order, according to Mr. Powers.

CHRISTMAS

The best Christmas editorial ever written is in the Bible. It tells, in beautiful simplicity, a changeless story. There is the star moving across the heavens and fixing itself finally as a diadem above a Bethlehem stable. There are the wise men of the East, first of hundreds of millions to bend before the power and beauty of the Christian ideal. There are the shepherd in the fields, for whom the veil of eternity lifts so that the mortal sees the immortal choirs pouring "good tidings" upon him. There is, in fact, for the Christian, the most beautiful, the most significant and the most necessary story of all history. In its crowning moment the narrative pronounces this superb, matchless benediction:

"Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace . . . . . "

The sentence epitomizes the Christian faith and sums up Christ-like living. Glory to God is exemplified in an upright life, peace on earth is the expression of a sublime and sensitive humanity. The world struggles bravely toward the goal, and each passing age sees the spreading consciousness of generous conduct. "Man's inhumanity to man" yields to the mellowing grace of civilized society.

Civilized society is most intense in the family group, focused today around a common remembrance, however far scattered its members may be. It is of the genius of the Christmas season that men far way from the hearthstone can snuff the odors of the past, and snatch from the vanished years a wisp of experience, a flavor of recollection, that holds the heart steady and the mind clear to those affections which irrevocably bind us together.

The home at Christmas is the symbol of that peace and open-hearted living for which the world so wistfully seeks. The gifts, the gay cries of happiness, the sweet union of kindness together form the cradle of mankind's better destiny.

It is a wonderful story, whose words sing down the corridors of time reclaiming and inspiring countless generations. No other narrative has unlocked so swiftly the door to the human heart; none other as able to lift our imaginations so tenderly into universal communion.

RECREATION PROGRAM ORGANIZED

BASKETBALL AND BASEBALL LEAGUES FORMED

Eleven Groups Have Teams Competing Nightly in Sports at High School Gymnasium

A well developed recreational program, sponsored by the FERA and Charlevoix public schools, has gained rapidly in popularity since organization several weeks ago.

A basket ball league of four teams and an indoor baseball league of seven teams are participating in a nightly schedule of contests which provides a competition for one group in each division every evening. Four fraternal orders are identified, also the Freshman College, American Legion, local Indian youths and others. Basketball teams have been organized representing the west end, valley, north and south sides.

At the present time the West Enders are leading the basketball league with three straight wins. Others in order are the North Side, Valley and South Side. The Eskimos, a team composed of younger men, leads the baseball league with three victories. Three of the indoor baseball teams have so far purchased their own equipment.

Dean Davenport, who directs the basketball and indoor baseball sports, has announced that volley ball teams will be organized after the Christmas holidays. It is also planned to pick an all-star indoor baseball team for competition with Petoskey and East Jordan after the holidays.

The outdoor sports, which cover the coasting hill and ice rink, are under the direction of George Higman. Hockey will be a supervised sport and teams organized as soon as the municipal rink is in better condition.

Following is the present standing of teams in the basketball and indoor baseball leagues:

Basketball

Team	W	L	Pct.
West End	3	0	1000
North Side	3	1	750
Valley	1	3	250
South Side	0	3	000

Baseball

Team	W	L	T	Pct.
Eskimos	3	0	0	1000
Frosh College	1	1	0	500
Indians	1	1	0	500
K. of P.	1	1	0	500
Legion	1	3	0	250
I. O. O. F.	0	0	1	000
Masons	0	1	1	000

Games scheduled for Thursday and Friday are as follows:

Basketball: Thurs. 6:15—North Side vs. South Side; Friday, 6:15—West End vs. Valley.

Baseball: Thurs., 7:30—Eskimos vs. Freshman College; Friday, 7:30—K. of P. vs. Indians.

Mrs. George Pappin Died Tuesday; Buried Here Friday

Funeral services were conducted Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock from Brookside chapel for Mrs. Gulnare Pappin, long-time resident of the city, who died late Tuesday in Lansing.

Mrs. Pappin's death followed closely that of her son, Jerome, who was recently buried. She was visiting in Lansing with her daughter, Mrs. John F. Berry, when stricken.

Gulnare Page was born in Peterboro, Ontario, Canada, May 4, 1860. She came to Charlevoix about two years following her marriage to George Pappin, now deceased, and had been a resident of this city 52 years.

Surviving are four daughters: Mrs. Harry Weed of Detroit; Mrs. John F. Berry of Lansing; Mrs. Edwin Wicht of Detroit, and Mrs. Neil Bennett of Mt. Clemens.

Prayers were held Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock at the Lavey Funeral Home in Lansing by Rev. Putney of St. Paul's Episcopal church.

KIDDIES XMAS PROGRAM IS SATURDAY

FREE MOVIES PROVIDED AT PALACE THEATER

Santa Claus Will Distribute Gift Candy Bags at American Legion Home—Carol Singers

Saturday, December 22nd, will be a big day for the kiddies of Charlevoix and adjoining rural districts if plans prepared for their entertainment may be taken as an indication.

First and most important is the fact that Old Santa Claus will spend the entire day in Charlevoix to assist in the entertainment features arranged. Santa will put in his first appearance at the American Legion home on Garfield avenue, where he is scheduled to distribute bags and candy and nuts to the children. This event will take place at approximately 1 o'clock and it is unnecessary to urge all the children to be there.

The next big event of the afternoon will be at 3 o'clock; Mrs. Elizabeth Moon, manager of the Palace Theater, is providing a free movie show for all children under the age of 12 years. Santa Claus will also be present at the theater.

In the evening Santa will lead a parade of singers who will go through the streets singing Christmas carols the same as was done many years ago in France, England and Germany. The homes of the sick and shut-in will be visited by the carol singers.

The festive decorations of the Yuletide season were never more in evidence in Charlevoix than this year. The street decorations are worthy of praise and many private homes have this year arranged outdoor Christmas decorations.

CHARLEVOIX WINS OVER PETOSKEY 5

VARSITY VICTORS 23 TO 15; RESERVES 21 TO 16

Team Idle This Week But Have Battles With Union and Petoskey December 27th and 29th

Charlevoix maintained an unmarred basketball record by scoring its fourth consecutive victory at Petoskey last Friday night. The varsity turned in an impressive 23 to 15 victory and the reserves topped the preliminary by a 21 to 16 count.

The Kipmen combined accuracy at the hoop with a strong defense to out-stride the Northmen in a game that was fast all the way. Deuces by Pearl, Carey, Radle and Schwab produced 8 points in the first quarter, while Dombroski and Bremmyr counted for Petoskey for 4 points.

Charlevoix doubled the count in the second stanza. Foster located the meshes twice and Radle and Schwab added goals. Dombroski marked up 3 for the loser and Upton a free toss. The count at the half was 16 to 8.

The two teams maintained an even pace in the last two periods, each scoring 7 points. Radle scored twice, Hebert a goal and Pearl a free one to match a goal and a free toss by Dombroski and goals by Bremmyr and Ross.

Radle, forward, led the scoring for Charlevoix with four goals. Foster and Schwab counted four points each, Pearl 3, Carey and Hebert 2 each. Dombroski was high for Petoskey with 8 points.

Charlevoix substituted Hebert for Carey and Petoskey used Upton. Pezet of Traverse City was referee.

Charlevoix used two full teams to defeat the Petoskey reserves in the preliminary.

Union High Here Next

Charlevoix has no game for the present week, but the following week will appear on the home court twice. On Thursday evening, December 27th, they meet Union high of Grand Rapids, in what promises to be the feature home game of the season. With the local team on top of the northern Michigan heap the outcome of this contest with a class A school of Union's caliber will furnish a fair comparison of the strength of upper Michigan and down-state teams. On Saturday evening, December 29th, the Kipmen play a return tilt with Petoskey's Northmen.

CHIEF WARNS ABOUT CHRISTMAS FIRES

Points Out Precautions Which Will Eliminate Dangers

Just to make Christmas a little more safe and, for that reason, a Merrier Christmas, Fire Chief Charles Marshall has issued an appeal to all people of the city to avoid the fire hazards which usually accompany the holiday season.

Every year in some part of the nation a Christmas fire tragedy occurs and Chief Marshall doesn't want this year's tragedy to happen in Charlevoix.

The opportunity for fire is increased during the holidays by the wide use of lighting equipment. This equipment can be used safely if a few simple rules are observed and if all people will remember the following facts we should avoid fire or tragedy.

Place tree a safe distance from stove or fireplace.

Use metal tinsel for trim and mica or flake asbestos for imitation snow.

Never leave lighted Christmas tree unguarded at any time.

Do not place tree where it will obstruct any exit of a room.

Keep candles and open lights away from window curtains, paper wreaths and Christmas bells.

Remove the tree from the house before it becomes dry.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS

By B. C. Mellencamp

Child Training Course Offered to the Parents of Charlevoix County

Parents of this county will soon have the opportunity of attending three discussion meetings on common every-day problems of child training. This is one of the regular home economic extension projects being offered this year to the rural people of the state, and is being organized by the county agricultural agent. The title of this project is, "Meeting Your Child's Problems," and will be given by Mrs. Lydia Ann Lynde, specialist in child care and training, Michigan State College. Mrs. Lynde is especially fitted for this work through her training and experience. She is a graduate, and has a Master of Science from Purdue University, and has studied in the graduating schools of Indiana University, and the Universities of Minnesota and California. In 1927-28 as National Fellow in Child Development under the Laural Spellman Rockefellow Memorial Fund, she spent 11 months studying the problems of childhood. She has had many years as a home maker, and is a mother of two sons who are now 13 and 16 years old. As a teacher of home economics, she worked with under-privileged, undernourished and problems of children, and helped many children and their parents happily work out their difficulties.

For four and one-half years, Mrs. Lynde has been meeting with parents in this state, and helping them understand the little difficulties in their homes. Through the three meetings, Mrs. Lynde will give to both fathers and mothers some of this helpful information.

The first two meetings will be held on Wednesday, January 9th. One will be held in Charlevoix, and the other location has not been determined yet. Further details will appear next week, but kindly keep this date in mind, as I know you will be interested in this splendid opportunity.

Third Landscaping Lecture Given Last Friday

The third and last lecture in the 1934 series was given last Friday by O. I. Gregg. This proved to be the most interesting yet given. Mr. Gregg used a background made of flannel material. On this he placed different farm homes with the accommodating shrubbery and flowers. He very effectively showed the various steps to be considered in beautifying home surroundings. When he finished the picture looked exactly as though it had been painted.

During the forenoon of this same day and early afternoon he completed outlines for the following four operators: Robert Tainter, Boyne City; John Matthews, Boyne City; Leslie Howe, Charlevoix, and Clarence Meggison, Charlevoix. This means that a total of 11 more homes have been furnished with complete outlines and will be planted early next spring. This is certainly a step in the right direction as beautiful farm homes add considerable to the beauty of Charlevoix county and contribute to happiness and enjoyment within the home. It is hoped that next year the same program will be continued.

AT THE MOVIES

Girls, Comedy, and Hit Tunes in Penner Film

Girls, melody and laughs play an equal part in Parnmount's campus comedy, "College Rhythm," roming Saturday and Sunday to the Palace Theater, with Joe Penner heading the featured part.

Directed by Norman Taurog, "College Rhythm" presents Penner, Lanny Ross, Jack Oakie, Helen Mack, Lyda Roberti and Mary Brian in a story about the campus cut-ups who turned the department store business into a college football campaign.

College Rivals

The story has its beginning at State College where Jack Oakie, as "Love and Kisses" Finnegan, a football hero, becomes Lanny Ross' deadly rival for the love of Mary Brian.

Their rivalry is carried over into the business world, but temporarily submerged when Oakie gets a job in the store owned by Lanny Ross' father.

Here he gets the bright idea of introducing collegiate atmosphere—beautiful girls, cheering sections and football teams—into department store business as a means of whooping up sales. Everything goes beautifully until their competitors start stealing their thunder.

Gordon-Revel Tunes

The climax of the film comes after the big football game when Lanny Ross realizes that he does not love Mary Brian after all, but his father's demure little secretary, played by Helen Mack. And Oakie and Miss Brian turn lovebirds on their own account.

The cold weather which has more or less blanketed the country has decreased the supply of fresh fruits and vegetables and sharply increased their prices. Root vegetables are particularly good choices at this time. Cabbage and kale are hardy and are still plentiful and fairly low in price.

Here are three menus, including a Christmas dinner, made up from seasonable foods.

EDITORIAL

CHRISTMAS

Soon the entire world will celebrate the birth of The Saviour. This year it will approach the tragedy of the Cross with a deep feeling of humility. For many year- mankind wandered far afield now it is engaged in the great task of finding its way back into the channels of sane and sensible living. As human beings we are dependent upon a source of power outside our individual selves for guidance and safety. Twenty centuries ago a humble carpenter lad wrote upon the tablets of human understanding the only course of safety a sinful world could pursue. We may forget His teachings for a time, we may in our ignorance elevate ourselves into the sphere of wisdom beyond our capabilities, but as certain as one day follows another we are at last faced with the great adventure to preface our beliefs with the realities of eternity.

Canada is discounting our dollar. If they don't cut that out we'll retaliate by plowing under every third row of Canadian thistles.

MICHIGAN MOURNS

Citizens of Michigan mourn the appalling loss of human life in the Hotel Kerns fire at Lansing. Almost without warning death rode out of the darkness of the early morning hours to claim the lives of nearly two score persons, most of them caught without a moment's warning in a seething inferno that but a few short hours before had been a popular hostelry catering to a wide clientage. Investigations inquiring into the source of the conflagration will be begun and eventually concluded, but it is doubtful if the exact cause of the fire will ever become known. About the only purpose these investigations will serve will be a warning to other communities to check carefully on their fire hazards in preventing a similar catastrophe. When the traveling public buys hotel service it is entitled, above all else, to security of life and limb. Any city with a habit of inviting outsiders to partake of its hospitality, business or social, owes to those visitors positive guarantee from any harm. It is regrettable, in more instances than we would care to admit, that there is not a single connection between the chamber of commerce seeking to bring visitors to town and the local authorities who are supposed to watch every possible avenue of harm which might befall them during their stay. It is sad dereliction from duty, when from carelessness or from any other reason, stark tragedy is allowed to stalk across the stage. Lansing must purge herself of such charges.

Jackson prison has an inmate with a record of 73 arrests since 1913. Why not get the fellow to write a book on "Does Crime Pay?"

A RIFT OCCURS

A slight misunderstanding seems to have arisen between Governor-elect Frank D. Fitzgerald and members of the Legislative Council. The breach should not be allowed to widen. Governor Fitzgerald and members of the Council are patiently in search of the same goal—sensible legislation reflecting state needs, with particular emphasis on matters closely identified with lower cost of government. Governor Fitzgerald intends standing firm in his determination to protect the taxpayers. We believe the legislature also has the same broad aim and view. Now is no time for division of opinions as how best to go about their work. All those engaged in the present controversy are men of mature judgment, who, we believe, will gladly forego private desires for public good. Manifestly it is with such spirit that problems affecting the public weal during these troublesome times should be met and solved. The governor-elect has stated on many occasion that he will not hesitate to point out any individual or individuals found deliberately trying to hamstring his efforts to provide tax relief for the people of Michigan. There can be no particular objection to such a statement, but it would seem the better plan in the long run for everybody concerned if minor differences are speedily adjusted. What the rank and file of the people really desire is unity of both purpose and effort, regardless the source from which they originate.

THE NUMBERS RACKET

Do you happen to unthinkingly belong to the thousands of American citizens who have been indulging in what they believed was the harmless little gambling scheme known as "numbers"? If you are a member it might surprise you to learn it is one of the sweetest rackets now in the possession of gang-land with an annual take in excess of three hundred million dollars. With this enormous sum it is possible to buy protection from corrupt police officials and crooked politicians, to say nothing about an occasional murder when it becomes necessary to blot out rivals and discourage competition.

Numbers supplied for betting purposes are obtained from daily reports of the national treasury, the stock exchange, grain balances, and even race meets. It is interesting to note that regardless of the source from which these numbers are obtained it is possible to manipulate them so that no killing of the bookmakers is ever possible—the sucker always pays. Bets as low as five cents are accepted, the average wager being ten cents. With more than half of the industrial workers eager victims, canvassed and cajoled by 10,000 salesmen, it is small wonder that welfare administrators are complaining that millions of dollars of tax money, intended for food, shelter and clothing is finding its way into the pockets of gangland. If for the short period of one year every loyal American citizen would quit contributing to these games of chance, would back to the limit the government's fight against crime, gangland could be destroyed. Crime can only survive on a golden stream of money flowing into its coffers—cut off that supply and it quicly perishes.

There are men and women in Charlevoix who have already forgotten how the investment bankers took the nation to ride.

A "DISCOVERY" PROGRAM

In these days of lifted faces and hopeful, happier, steps a program that keeps time with recovery should attract popular support. One that has gone on and on, in the face of depression difficulties—fighting to keep its head up at times, but doing it, in order that others might live—that movement deserves a loyalty that will make every effort to see it grow.

We refer to the "discovery" program of the Michigan Tuberculosis Association.

Discovery of tuberculosis, with just one portable x-ray machine and lots of determination. Kept alive during these past few years by the will to make the support it receives at Christmas time do for the whole twelve months of the year, last year it set a record in service to Michigan school children and others who desire a free examination for signs of tuberculosis.

That program needs expansion to take care of added demands in 1935. Its future depends on the annual sale of tuberculosis Christmas Seals, which have been available to you since Thanksgiving.

Now that recovery is well-started—let's aid "discovery." Buy Christmas Seals!

"Baby talk," says Dr. Mehran Thompson of Michigan State College, "is not to be scorned as a husband winner—but it should be stopped after marriage."

KEEPING FAITH

Throughout a long campaign for the governorship, Frank D. Fitzgerald stated on many occasions his desire for drastic reductions in the cost of state government. The voters of Michigan accepted his challenge to bring about certain reforms, and since election he has assiduously devoted himself to the task of formulating certain programs that will permit him to carry out his pre-election promises.

The people of Michigan have faith and confidence in Frank Fitzgerald. He has their best wishes for a successful administration as governor of this great state. They are willing to back him to the limit in all that he undertakes, so long as they are convinced he is doing his level best to serve the best interests of a distressed people. If he finds himself being balked in his plans, if obstructionists attempt to thwart the expressed will of the majority, Mr. Fitzgerald should not hesitate to point them out in public places as the enemies of good government. Of course by this we do not mean to include the conscientious objector who also serves a valuable end—but it does mean the individual who cries, "wolf" to hide his own machinations. These fellows may not know it yet, but the average citizen is pretty much fed up on those who insist on playing politics with human misery. This is a friendly warning: if they the wise they will vote themselves a long vacation from anything having to do with public affairs.

One should not speak evil of people with whom one has just dined within a radius of a hundred yards from their house.—Andre Maurois.

ADVICE—GOOD AND BAD

Whenever a man finds himself elected to an important political office he immediately becomes the recipient of a deluge of advice from his friends and well wishers warning him of dangerous shoals ahead. If he happens to be a veteran in political affairs he knows that much of this advice is tainted with self-interest—somebody is grinding their own axe with him supplying the motive power.

Advice from an unselfish source is always helpful as a rule. No one man can be expected to have the capacity for clear vision in all things effecting the business of government. To a great extent he must depend upon the knowledge of others. If somebody deliberately proffers misleading information, that fact should immediately be made known. In their perfidy they are not only enemies of those holding executive positions, but of the people whose votes placed them in temporary places of trust. If democracy is to endure we must demand more and more truth and veravity in matters affecting the public weal. Liars in the temple of government must no longer be tolerated—they should be scourged with whips of fire and driven into oblivion.

Speaking frankly, as a newspaper editor should, we point out that any good newspaper has sore-headed critics all the time.

WHERE LIFE ABOUNDS

Studies have been made of retailing in metropolitan centers, but only a few of business in the small town or rural area.—In fact, not only persons living in the cities, but also many economists have been so accustomed to thinking in terms of city affairs and metropolitan merchandising that the importance of small cities and rural areas in our national economic life has been largely overlooked.

But the small town is highly important. Recent data shows that 52 per cent of the total population of the United States live in the small cities and rural areas, and that 45 per cent of all retailers are located in this general region, doing 30 per cent of the total retail business of the country. One of the most encouraging facts, from the point of view of the small town merchant, is the evidence that the residents of the smaller cities and rural districts supply by far the major part of their needs from the home stores.

The small town and the merchant who is the backbone of the small town still have a place in the sun. And that is fortunate, for when it comes to really happy living you have to go to the small town and the rural community to find it.—Herman Rae in the Northville (Minn.) News.

The idea that schools are for children only will be badly out of date in the next few years.

CHARITY FAKIRS

At this particular season of the year, when one is a little more inclined to find himself in a charitable mood, it might be well to heed the warnings of special investigators against innumerable fake charity rackets being worked all over the country. Most of them claiming to have a hold on your sympathetic philanthropy are genuine fakes. A surprisingly large number are not even located in Michigan, but they come here with all the guile in the world seeking your contribution. And strange to say, they meet with a considerable amount of success, or they would not be returning year after year to ply their nefarious trade. Before falling a victim to their schemes through the skill and tact of these high-powered solicitors, plead for a bit of time to investigate their legitimate claim to a portion of your giving. If you will surround yourself with this simple bit of protection the chances are you will not hear from them again. Investigation of their worthiness is the one thing they are ever seeking to avoid.

THOSE IN FAVOR—

The willingness with which many persons are inclined to pull Uncle Sam's leg- inspires the Omaha Journal-Stockman to say: "Everybody is apparently in favor of old age pension as well as unemployment insurance. The question is, who is going to pay for these things? Uncle Sam, of course, but who is Uncle Sam? And where does he get his money As a matter of fact Uncle Sam is all of us and we will have to contribute to his exchequer. The idea that the government gets this money, that is being spent so freely, out of the air is responsible for the popular notion that Uncle Sam's business is to play Santa Claus.

DRINKING AND DRIVING

Most certainly the plea of intoxication should not mitigate the punishment of any driver held responsible for accident. If such a plea has any effect, it should be to make the sentence more severe, for every drunken driver is a potential killer.

The increasingly number of drunken pedestrians creates a new problem. It will be said, of course, that he who gets drunk and tries to walk the congested highways, must assume the risks of his indiscretion, but there is much more to be said on this subject. The drunken pedestrian may involve the soberest and most careful driver in a serious, and perhaps fatal accident. There are many motorists whose greatest worry is not for their own safety, but for the safety of the drunken pedestrians and the drunken or incompetent drivers they encounter on the highways—Toledo Blade.

PROPER DESTINATION

John drove furiously, but he was sober when he did it, and he was traveling an open country road with a clear space ahead; not a crowded city thoroughfare. Besides that, John really was going after something that wouldn't wait, a throne, no less.

In these particulars the gentleman differed materially from many of the modern Sons of Nun who neither are sober when they drive nor have any clear idea about why they are going or where.

Consequently their destinations are properly very different. When they have the fortune to escape the hospital or the morgue, the courts should see to it that their finish is inside of a jail cell.

We notice that quite frequently the men who preside over the local traffic court seem to feel that way about it.

Which is all to the good. Detroit Free Press.

WHO HIRES THEM?

Almost simultaneously with the convening of the extraordinary special session of the Legislature comes news of the sensational arrest of a veteran lobbyist and another man, charged with attempted bribery of a legislative member. And this in face of a statement given to the press a few days ago by Lieut. Gov.-Elect Thomas Read that he intended to deal drastically with lobbyists if they invaded the Senate chamber while he presided over its deliberations.

It is common knowledge that the lobbying fraternity has grown both bold and strong in recent years. It would seem as if they actually met the legislators on the capitol steps at Lansing on their return, and that nothing was too inimical to the welfare of the state for them to lend their services. If this is the situation why wouldn't it be the wise thing to do to investigate just exactly whom their employers happen to be? Certainly nobody but a mere dote believes them to be philanthropists, spending their own money to accomplish their nefarious purposes. Somebody, in search of special favors, is meeting the bill. Let's find out who they are, and if proven guilty of using money for illegal purposes, hold them up to the severe public criticism they deserve.

THE DANGER

Economic dictatorship is much more dangerous than people believe. Once authoritative control has been established it will not always be possible to limit it to the economic domain. If we allow economic freedom and self-reliance to be destroyed the powers standing for liberty will have lost so much in strength that they will not be able to offer any effective resistance against a progressive extension of such destruction to constitutional and public life generally. And if this resistance is gradually given up—perhaps without people ever realizing what is actually going on—such fundamental values as personal liberty, freedom of thought and speech, and independence of science are exposed to imminent danger. What stands to be lost is nothing less than the whole of that civilization that we have inherited from generations which once fought hard to lay its foundations and even gave their life for it. What they have accomplished and handed down to us is a precious inheritance, placing upon the present generation the commanding responsibility of maintaining such treasures intact for the benefit of future generations. This historical responsibility falls with its heaviest weight on those nations that have done most for the development of freedom and for the life and prosperity of which individual liberty had played the most dominant part.—Dr. Gustav Cassel, eminent Swedish economist.

DISTRIBUTE FINAL OF PRIMARY MONEY

Schools Receive Over Two Million Less Than During 1931-32

The distribution of $3,565,964.95 this week completes the 1934-35 Primary School Interest Fund allocation. The final installment is based on a per capita allowance of $2.57 for each child enumerated on the school census of May 31, 1933. At that time there were 1,387,535 children between the ages of five and 19 in the state. The final distribution gives a total of $14,443,664.05 for the year, this sum being sufficient to produce $10.41 per census child. This total figure is $2,955,159.82 less than the distribution in 1933-34 and represents a decrease of $9,694,234.86, or a reduction of 40.1 per cent, from the amount available in 1931-32.

Since the Primary School Interest Fund represents approximately one-quarter of the school revenue, this reduction has been a major factor in the shortage of school funds.

FIRE FATALITIES CAUSE DEMOCRATIC MAJORITY

Death of Two Re-Elected Republicans Wipes Out GOP Lead

The death of three re-elected legislators in the Hotel Kerns fire has apparently dashed Republican hopes of controlling the next house of representatives.

Republicans' only hope of gaining a majority of 51 votes would be in special elections which the governor might call to elect successors to the victims.

Dead in the fire were representatives Donald E. Sias, Midland; John W. Goodwine, Marlette, and Charles D. Parker of Otisville. Sias and Goodwine were Republicans, Parker was a Democrat. They had been re-elected to the next legislature.

Before the tragedy, membership of the next House was evenly divided between Republicans and Democrats, with 50 votes each. The three deaths, however, leave Republicans with 48 votes and Democrats with 49.

WINTER FISHING SEASON IS OPEN

SPEARS LAWFUL IN JANUARY AND FEBRUARY

All Inland Lakes Except Trout Lakes Open to Fishing Until Thirtieth of April, 1935

Freezing weather, snow and ice, have brought a new pastime that takes its place beside rabbit hunting in the interest of Michigan sportsmen. Fishing through the ice in its various forms is now in full swing throughout the state, according to the Department of Conservation.

Rabbit hunting is legal to and including January 31st in both the upper and lower peninsulas, but those individuals who enjoy sitting in a fishing shanty on an inland lake or fishing through the ice in the open may enjoy their sport as long as the ice remains on the open waters.

Except for designated trout lakes and streams all inland waters of Michigan are open to legal fishing until April 30th.

Spearing and hook-and-line fishing affords an out-door pastime that will help sportsmen to bridge the winter months. The spear may be used through the ice only in January and February on waters not otherwise closed to spearing. The following species of fish may be taken with the spear: Carp, suckers, mullet, redhorse, sheepshead, lake trout, smelt, wall-eyed pike, great northern grass pike or pickerel, garpike, muskellunge, whitefish, ciscoes, pilotfish or Menominee whitefish and dogfish. The use of a jacklight or any form of artificial light with spears is illegal.

As in past seasons, state fishing regulations permit each hook and line fisherman the use of no more than five single lines with one hook attached to each line for fishing through the ice. The lines must be attended every two hours.

The following species of fish may be taken by means of hook and line through the ice or until April 30: Wall-eyed pike, great northern grass pike or pickerel, perch, rock, calico and strawberry bass, crappies, bluegills and sunfish, white bass, warmouth bass, muskellunge and all non-game species. Black bass may not be taken after December 31st.

Under the general fishing license law adopted by the state legislature in 1933, the possession of a fishing license is necessary for fishing through the ice.

TEMPERANCE GROUP MEETING ON FRIDAY

Progress on Activities Reported; Mrs. Armstrong Speaker

There was a good attendance at the W. C. T. U. meeting held last Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. William C. Palmer.

Reports showed that a Loyal Temperance Legion had been organized in the Congregational Junior church; that U. S. flags and standards had been provided where lacking in the school rooms; and that the Charlevoix Union's Jubilee Year Scrap Book (1933-34) had been awarded first prize—a look—in the press directors' exhibit at the state convention.

Mrs. R. B. Armstrong presented the topic, "Counting the Cost," (of one year of repeal) in an interesting talk which revealed that there has been a large increase in drunkenness, auto accidents and Keeley Institute patients; drinking has been stimulated among women and children; substitutes for the saloon are infinitely worse than that old time evil; bootlegging is wide-spread; more enforcement officers are necessary than under prohibition; about three billion dollars has been diverted from other industries to the liquor traffic. Wet propaganda was largely responsible for repeal but to date the repealists have not fulfilled any of their pre-election promises except that some liquor taxes have accrued to the public treasury. Distillers and brewers are spending huge sums on advertising their products in an attempt to increase their sales and induce more drinking.

As the community room is not available at present, arrangements were made for parlor meetings during the winter and Mrs. Robert Withers extended an invitation for January 11th.

Nina Vinkel of Walloon Lake, Weaver's companion, was taken into custody Tuesday and is being held for state health authorities.

MORE GRADES NEEDED FOR ECONOMY BUYING

No Means of Selecting Products to Suit Particular Purposes

More grades of food products canned or in packages, are needed to enable the housewife to shop more advantageously, according to foods specialists at Michigan State College.

Buying the cheapest article does not constitute economy of purchase, nor is it necessary to buy the most expensive grade. The most important factor in purchasing is to know what grade or quality is most suited to a particular purpose.

The quantities of contents are required by interstate commerce to be marked plainly on the outside of the package or container. This may be by weight, measure, or by numerical count. Due allowance for evaporation of water must be made, so that the label reads so many ounces "when packed." If fluid ounces are used, the label must say so.

Tricky labels are also barred, as their purpose is to mislead the purchaser. The label can not be imitative, that is assume a quality or characteristic which it does not have. Pictures or statements which tend to mislead are not allowed.

In spite of these general protections offered the consumer in labeled products, more information is necessary to enable the purchaser to make quick and economical selections of products. Every can should be so labeled that the grade is clearly indicated.

God is infinite, therefore ever present, and there is no other power nor presence. Hence the spirituality of the universe is the only fact of creation."

"SO?" The word was a withering expletive as Fiberg said it. "Now ain't that nice! Vincent asking me, and seeing de kid only vonce, you sign her up for a test. Huh!"

Perched on the producer's desk, Garrison waved one hand imperiously and demanded:

"Well, what of it? I told you I listened to her singing records before I made the arrangement. And, I, she's a positive wow, and think what a real child star could do for us right now! With Shirley Temple the year's big hit and every one hollering for 'clean' pictures, it's just what we need most."

Mollified, Fiberg conceded:

"Well, maybe it ain't so bad a idea. When is it she's coming?"

"Today—she's here now. I wanted you to see her before anybody else snapped her up."

"Okay." The producer rose with a decisive air.

Together they entered a miniature auditorium. In the last row of seats facing the small stage a child with fluffy golden hair sat with her father.

"Mr. Fiberg," Garrison said, "this is Mr. Joseph Fiberg, our production chief. He's going to hear Virginia."

"If you don't mind, I'll sit up front there. It'll give her confidence."

Distinctly Dugan called out:

"All right, Virgie—begin."

From the stage came a crooning, childish voice that yet held an element of wise impishness. "You're Gonna Lose Your Gal" was her song. She sang with a charm, an originality, a fresh insouciance such as none present had ever heard before. As the last note faded away, Fiberg was on his feet, crying:

"Lights! I ain't needing no more! Right now I give it to her a contract at five hundred a week, and ve start her first starring picture immediate."

In fifteen days everything was ready. Dugan guarded the child's interests but made no unreasonable demands, insisting only that he be allowed to conduct Virginia's rehearsals in private.

When actual production commenced, the father was always present and remained close by the child.

On the sixteenth day Dugan and Virginia failed to appear. Work was at a standstill. Repeated calls to the Dugan home were unanswered. At last, as Fiberg fumed impotently, his secretary entered to announce that a man was phoning him long distance, about Virginia.

Snatching the instrument, Fiberg answered crisply and heard in unemotional tones:

"My name doesn't concern you, but I am now Virginia Dugan's guardian. Her father was shot to death in a gambling game this morning. According to his will, I must immediately withdraw Virginia from all performances."

Briefly the producer was left speechless; then words cascaded from him.

"What! You mean she ain't gonna go on vit' dis picture after two hundred t'ousand dollars ve're spending on it already? Listen, I got it a contract vhat's absolutely legal and de kid's got to fulfill it and if she don't I can go to court and—"

"Check it, J. L.," a voice at his side cut in coolly. Fiberg whirled in his chair, to face Garrison.

Slowly the producer replaced the phone and waited for Garrison to continue.

"I've been working," the latter said, "on a private investigation. Trying to dig up background for press stuff on the youngster. I found more than Pat suspected plenty more; but too late to reach Dugan before he was plugged.

"I was wondering if the kid inherited her talent, so I looked up the old man's past history and there was the answer, sure enough. Twenty years ago J. L. Dugan was a big headliner in English vaudeville."

He paused slightly. Fiberg swallowed once and murmured: "Go on."

"Just after the war he retired and came to America. He'd saved a small fortune, but had a weakness for cards and lost most of it gambling. In 1925 he met a wealthy young widow and persuaded her to marry him. Then six years ago Virginia was born and the wife died, leaving her money to relatives. He took the kid into the desert until six months ago they lived there, with an old deaf-mute Indian woman. He spent that time training the kid in pantomime and keeping her away from people. Virginia can only say about ten words."

For a long moment Fiberg stared at the other man, mouth wide. Finally, in a thin gasp, he managed:

"What—what are you talking about? It don't—"

"Twenty years ago," Garrison interrupted evenly, "Virginia's father was killed all over the British empire as 'The Great Dugan, World's Premier Ventriloquist.'"

Dosing With Drugs Will Not Benefit Laying Hens

Dosing the flocks with drugs will not result in more eggs. That is the conclusion of the poultry department of Michigan Agricultural college. Egg production is a matter of inherited characteristics and of proper feeding. Mongrel birds are very apt to be unprofitable and hens which are compelled to forage for their living have little time to fill the egg basket.

Drugs do not change the factors inherited by hens nor do they supply needed food elements so the possibility of nostrums affecting egg production are very remote. Dr. H. R. Moskey, United States Department of Agriculture, says positively that no known drug or combination of drugs will increase egg production.

Rations for laying flocks must supply the food elements needed to maintain the body weight of the hen, to supply warmth and energy, and to supply the material contained in the eggs themselves. Good grains, green feeds, milk, shell, and grit furnish all the materials needed by the laying hen.

Diseased hens should be treated for the malady with which they are affected, and, in case of contagious disorders, proper sanitary measures should be practised in the houses and runs where chickens are confined.—Indiana Farmer's Guide.

"Fading Out" Epidemic

A recent survey covering five years of study in fourteen southern California poultry flocks including 14,733 birds shows a mortality in these flocks running from a minimum of 17% to a maximum of 61 per cent. This report is very disturbing and would indicate that something is radically wrong in handling breeding stock and birds intended for replacement. Mortality seems to have been steadily increasing for the past five years. In the last two years it has increased 36 per cent over the averages of 1928, 1929 and 1930. The trouble is known among commercial poultrymen as "fading out" and it has caused the loss of thousands of dollars to southern California poultrymen. This trouble is not confined to this country. English poultrymen are complaining of a similar condition.—Los Angeles Times.

POULTRY

SKIMPING BROODER FUEL CAUSES LOSS

Poor Judgment to Economize on Heat for Chicks.

By H. P. Alp, Poultry Extension Specialist, University of Illinois.—WNU Service.

With the possibility that poultry and egg prices may advance following continued improvement in business activity and employment, poultrymen cannot afford to economize on brooder fuel at the expense of death losses in their baby chicks.

Every year, it is said, there are many instances where great damage is done to growing chicks by not maintaining a fire in the brooder stove until all likelihood of cool weather is past or until such time as the chicks have started to roost.

It is not uncommon that each spring there are several days of exceptionally warm weather at which time many poultry raisers decide to save on brooding expense by discontinuing the artificial heat for the chicks. This unusual weather is often followed by cold and rain, and where the chicks are not old enough to roost, they will crowd together for heat. This results in some becoming too warm and others being chilled. Many outbreaks of coccidiosis have been observed under such conditions.

It is always a good plan to encourage early roosting, for when the young birds can perch above the floor there is less probability of ill effects from sudden severe changes in the weather, other housing conditions being satisfactory.

The poultryman who cares for his chicks so as to save the greatest number to laying or marketable age has a lower initial cost for each bird and is in a better position to make a profit whether prices are low or high. With the possibility of improved prices, he has an additional advantage over the less efficient producer.

SANITARY BROODER HOUSE IMPORTANT

Clean Well Before Chicks Are Placed in It.

By H. C. Bauer, Professor in Poultry Department, North Carolina State College.—WNU Service.

The greatest chick losses occur during the brooding period which makes it necessary to clean the house thoroughly before the chicks are placed in it.

To go about having a sanitary brooder house the poultryman should first scrape all the old manure and dirt from the lower side walls and floor of the house and clean the water containers, mash hoppers and other equipment used in the house. After this thorough mechanical cleansing has been done, the lower side walls, floor, water containers, feeding equipment, brooder stove and canopy should be scrubbed with a lye solution made by dissolving one pound of lye in ten gallons of hot water. A stiff bristle broom may be used to apply the solution. This lye mixture will not only further cleanse the house but it also has germ-killing power. Where the poultryman has a fire gun, he may use this instead of the lye solution.

After the brooder house has been thoroughly cleaned, it must be cleaned again at intervals during the brooding period. If the house has a dirt floor, remove the top few inches and replace it with clean dry soil, sand or gravel.

The use of wire frames on which to place the feeders and water containers is also advised. The house needs to be free from drafts and if it is movable, it is well to take it to a new location after cleansing.

Do not crowd the chicks in the house. About six square inches of floor space per chick is necessary for good health.

Color of Poultry Skin

A dealer in market poultry once stated that in his opinion the American preference for yellow legs and skin was based on the undeniable fact that a fowl with good yellow legs and skin was invariably a good bird in good health, while if one let his color preferences guide him in the other direction, he was quite likely to get a poor chicken. He thought the preference for white skin must help the sale of poor poultry wherever it existed. Without taking a position for or against the possible value of the presence in the meat of a fowl of elements which determine the color of skin, fat or plumage, sufficient grounds exist for scientific study of the matter; and that breeders of the black breeds of meat type might well give it their attention.

Chickens Need Water

Plenty of clean, fresh water should be available for chickens at all times. Chickens don't swim but they do get thirsty as well as hungry, and a chicken is always hungry, no matter how much it is fed. For a flock of 75 to 100 hens there should be a 10 or 12 quart stand or trough. For larger flocks larger containers are necessary. Even baby chicks need water. They should be provided with a place to get a drink, without the danger of falling in and drowning.

Culling in Spring Is Found to Be Good Plan

Those who manage their flocks in the most efficient manner possible do not confine their culling to late summer and early fall, but to a certain extent cull throughout the entire year. Especially do they pay a good deal of attention to spring culling when the flock comes into the peak production period. Some of the birds that have produced heavily throughout the previous fall and winter months often break down toward spring. They are the individuals that could not stand continuous heavy feeding. In some flocks, the percentage of these partially broken down birds is larger than in others, but invariably some are found in every flock that are no longer profitable producers.

That is why spring culling is usually a profitable proposition. As soon as a bird is unable to pay its feed bill and its total cost of keep, and yield a small profit, it is time for it to go to market. For rough figuring, one may assume that the feed cost of a hen is only half of her total cost of keep. To pay her way, therefore, assume that her egg income must be twice as large as her feed bill before any profit can be derived from her.—Wallaces' Farmer.

Sweet Clover Hay Rated High in Minnesota Tests

Steers will fatten practically as well on sweet clover hay as on alfalfa of similar quality, according to Minnesota experiment station trials recently completed. Other university farm trials showed that the two kinds of hay were about equal also for winter beef cows and heifers. Trials have given like results with lambs.

Cutting the cured sweet clover with an ensilage cutter was found advisable for cattle feeding but there was no apparent advantage in cutting it for fattening lambs. Fine grinding of roughage makes the feed too expensive for cattle.

Cut corn fodder also was found a fairly satisfactory roughage for dry beef cows and heifers, when fed in limited quantities with corn silage and cut sweet clover hay and when fed with shelled corn to fattening lambs. The heifers lost some flesh on a ration of roughage only, and it was found necessary to add a little grain to keep them gaining. Adding linseed meal to the lamb ration of shelled corn and cut corn fodder improved it slightly but decreased the feeding profit.

Prairie hay, even though of excellent quality and supplemented with linseed meal and limestone, proved an unsatisfactory roughage for fattening yearling steer calves and lambs.

Give Pastures Start

Good pastures are an asset to any farm, and particularly to a good live stock farm. Many farmers damage their pastures by turning stock on them during the early days of spring. The ground is usually soft and trampling damages the plants. The worst damage, however, comes through close grazing of the young plants before they have a chance to get started. Plants require a reasonable top growth in order that their roots become firmly established. The young, tender grass of early spring does not have as much nutritive value as it will have a few weeks later. It is best for the live stock and much the best for pastures if they are given a chance to get a good start.

Use Planes to Fight Hoppers

The adoption of airplanes to fight grasshoppers is another illustration of the resourcefulness of the western Canada farmer. Spreading of poison for grasshoppers has been so successful in one or two areas in southern Alberta that it will probably be adopted as a regular method in future. The planes were used in flying at 100 feet elevation, using four pounds of bait to the acre. The cost per section was $8 to $10 and the distribution thinly and evenly done, and so effective, with the use of oiled bait, that hoppers were still dying a week after the bait was spread.

Turn to Pasture

Farmers in the corn belt are taking a leaf from the book of experience of the British farmers after the Napoleonic wars. The latter, finding themselves unable to compete with cheap foreign grain, which came in after hostilities ended, turned their fields back into pasture land. Pasture land offers many advantages because it provides a rotation which is beneficial to the soil. It requires plowing each year. Many of the grasses used are annuals which do not reseed.

The demand in New England is for eggs weighing 25-26 ounces to the dozen with two ounces the minimum weight of individual eggs. In general consumers take eggs below that standard only at prices representing a loss to the producer. In the nature of the case weight requirements cannot be accurately measured in retailing shell eggs. Hence as the buyer does not greatly desire them anyway, he takes small eggs only at a price he feels gives him his money's worth.

The heretofore careless attitude taken by many farmers toward their pasture land is to be changed, if the Department of Agriculture has its way. Efforts will be made to convince the live stock raiser and the general farmer that by proper care to the type of grass planted in pasture a return which will more than compensate for the troubles will be old men. The best pasture land on Northern farms is the most worthless land that it can be put to for no other purpose will pay success

NEW TRAILER LAW IN EFFECT JAN. 1

UNITS OVER 3,000 POUNDS REQUIRE BRAKES

Secretary of State Calls Attention to New 1933 Law Requiring Truck Equipment

The department of state will be unable to register and issue license plates after January 1st for trailers weighing more than 3,000 pounds unless the trailers are equipped with brakes in conformity with the law adopted by the legislature in 1933.

The law also prohibits the use of trailers of 3,000 pounds on the highways after that date unless they are equipped with brakes that can be operated by the truck driver.

Reports reaching the department of state are to the effect that many owners of trailers are not familiar with the provisions of this law. Section 6a of Act 253 of Public Acts of 1933 reads as follows:

"It shall be unlawful to operate any train or combination of motor vehicles upon the public highways of this state, on or after the first day of January, nineteen hundred thirty-five, unless the power generating unit of such train or combination of vehicles be equipped with brakes as required by law, and unless each and every other vehicle in said train or combination of vehicles, the gross weight of which shall exceed three thousand pounds, be equipped with air, vacuum, hydraulically or electrically operated brakes, or some equally effective device, for controlling the speed of such vehicle and adequate to control the movement of and to stop and hold such vehicle, which brakes may be applied by the chauffeur or driver of such train or combination of vehicles to each vehicle in such train or combination of vehicles concurrently, and which brakes shall at all times be kept in effective conditions of repair and ready for use at the discretion of such chauffeur or driver.

M-131, 3.400 miles of 20-foot concrete pavement from the north county line south, at $92,000.

The total estimated cost of state highways construction in Charlevoix county, to be financed from the $6,-452,568 grant from the Federal government under the Cartwright Act, already under contract or to be placed under contract early in 1935, including engineering and contingencies, is $42,500. It is contemplated that this program will be completed by July 1, 1935.

RECOUNT OF VOTES APPEARS STRANDED

LEGISLATURE IS ADJOURNED UNTIL THURSDAY

Senate and House Still Fail to Assemble in Joint Session; Committee In Session

Michigan's comic opera legislature neared the finale of successful season Tuesday, neatly deadlocked and with the Democratic plan for a recount of their defeat at the November election apparently stranded.

Officially the solons are in adjournment until Thursday morning when the recount matter should be taken up, but developments left it clear that nothing will come out of the present special session that will stand the test of the courts.

The Thursday adjournment was forced upon the house with its strong Democratic majority by the Senate convening Monday night with 13 members of each party present. Two Democratic Senators failed to vote on a motion for adjournment and the proposal carried, 13 to 11 and the House was left alone in the other wing of the capitol.

Previously Lieut. Gov. Allen E. Stebbins had put a motion relative to accepting the bid of the House for a joint convention, but whether or not it passed will have to be determined by better parliamentarians than are now present in the upper chamber.

The legislature is in special session at the call of Governor Comstock because Major Guy M. Wilson of Flint (R), believes that his defeat for secretary of state was accompanied by Detroit by fraud and error. He asked the state board of canvassers for a recount, but the state supreme court said that the legislature is the only body that can go into the matter.

At this stage in the proceedings Attorney General Patrick H. O'Brien decided that his 57,700 defeat for re-election by Prosecuting Attorney Harry S. Toy, of Wayne county needed legislative attention.

Monday a special committee named a week ago to take preliminary testimony started hearings in Detroit, but when the Republicans proposed to call Elmer R. O'Harn chairman of the Democratic state central committee, the ten Democrats bolted leaving the ten Republicans alone.

The Democratic majority in the House lost no time in proceeding to dutch its special committee and go into a joint session with the Senate where the majorities would count most.

The motion for a joint session, which under the constitution is the only kind of session the recount must be conducted in, was presented by Rep. George Schroeder of Detroit, (D).

Objection was immediately raised by Rep. Geo. C. Watson of Capac, (R), who said it was the first time in his legislative career that "an attempt has been made to steal an election by the force of mere majorities in the legislature."

"We are willing to proceed with this recount, but not until certain rules of procedure are agreed to by both houses," he said.

The joint convention motion, however, was passed on strictly party lines in a 46 to 29 vote. Meanwhile the senate was busy adjourning.

Informed of this fact, the House also quit work, but after Democrats charged that "the Republicans are afraid of a recount."

MILD WEATHER SLOWS SKATING RINK WORK

Ice Building Up Slow Through Lack of Freezing Temperatures

While weather conditions have not been altogether favorable, work of preparing the municipal skating rink at the school grounds is progressing.

Mild weather has made the work of building up a good ice surface a slow process. The ice is still rough and not sufficiently thick for use in spots. Sprinkling day and night is being continued, however, and the rink will be placed in use as soon as possible.

Two splendid evergreen trees have been placed at the ends of the rink and discarded Christmas trees will be used to form an enclosure.

FITCH MOVES OFFICES TO K. OF P. BUILDING

Fitch, who retires as prosecuting attorney of Charlevoix county on January 1st, has vacated offices in the court house and is moving into a suite of office rooms in the K. of P. hall in preparation for renewal of his private law practice. SOUTH BARNARD

Miss Evelyn Shapton was hostess to the class in Christian Doctrine last week Wednesday in her Charlevoix home. This week the class is meeting with the Bass trio—Jacob, Oscar and Lawrence. You are most cordially invited to attend the class. The topic this week is "The Second Coming of Christ."

The Christmas program of the "Little White Church on the Hill" will be given on Monday evening of next week at eight o'clock. The program will be featured by music, speaking, etc. You are welcome to attend.

The schools of the community are giving their programs this week. The Clark school district has theirs on Thursday evening, while the Barnard school will be on Friday evening. The kiddies are looking forward to the visit of old Saint Nick.

"What a thrill," says Miss Margaret Bass, as she tells of her recent visit to New York City. The subways, the fast elevators, the tall buildings, the mammoth department stores with their oceans of merchandise, the huge crowds, etc., were eye-openers to her, but she claims that she didn't get a stiff neck from looking at the skyscrapers of this metropolitan city.

"Maggie" as she is known to her friends here, says that she is enjoying her stay in the east.

The pastor of the South Barnard church was very pleasantly surprised last Sunday when his congregation presented him with a "purse" as a holiday gift. Ministers enjoy the spirit manifested in such tokens of appreciation. But how much more we should be grateful for that greatest of all gifts given to the world nearly twenty centuries ago! May we all think of the significance of Christmas the day designated to celebrate the birthday or advent of our Saviour Jesus Christ.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Davis have returned from their visit in Traverse City. This young couple are now making their home in the house formerly occupied by Mrs. Davis' grandmother.

Mrs. and Mrs. Dick Potter, John E. Ross, and Hiram Klooster were visitors in Petoskey Monday of this week.

The Ralph Klooster family visited at the old Klooster homestead Sunday afternoon of this week. Jacob Klooster is spending a couple of weeks at the Ralph Klooster home. No, he's not an assistant cook now, but woodchopper and butcher. He's very adept in these lines.

WILKINSON MEMORIAL SUNDAY WAS IMPRESSIVE

Hundreds Gathered to Pay Last Respects to Prominent Charlevoix Residents

Charlevoix and northern Michigan paid last respects Sunday afternoon at a memorial service held in the gymnasium to Dr. and Mrs. Frank H. Wilkinson, who lost their lives in an automobile accident last Monday.

Twenty-five Knight Templars of the Ivanhoe Commandery at Petoskey, in full uniform, attended in a body. Delegations from other organizations of which Dr. Wilkinson was a member also attended, including the Masons, Eastern Star, White Shrine, Spanish War Veterans, American Legion and Kiwanis Club.

The service was attended by several hundred friends of the eminent couple. The service included invocation by Rev. W. W. Hurd; remarks by Dr. F. F. McMillan, a close personal friend; an eulogy by Rev. G. Russell Parker and reading of the obituary by Dr. C. J. Winder. Mrs. A. J. Stelter opened he service with appropriate piano numbers and played the accompaniment for vocal selections. These included solos, "Crossing the Bar," by Robert E. Edwards of Petoskey; "In Heavenly Love Abiding," by Harker Kirby and "Abide By Me," sung by the American Legion quartette. The sounding of "taps" brought the impressive ceremonies to a close.

Huge banks of floral tokens attested the esteem in which the departed couple were held. Following are reproduced a resolution by the Charlevoix County Republican committee, and a telegram from Ethan W. Thompson, supreme commander of Knights of the Maccabees and a comrade of Dr. Wilkinson during the Spanish-American war:

—WHEREAS, Death, the grim spectre, has without warning, taken from our midst, our honorable Republican County Committee chairman, Dr. Frank H. Wilkinson;

WHEREAS, His untiring labors as chairman of the Republican County Committee, to rally the forces of a party, standing for sound government, based upon tried and proven principles, were crowned with victory in the recent Fall elections;

WHEREAS, The Republican party is justly proud of the fact that a man of the character of Dr. Frank H. Wilkinson, has embraced its principles and stood staunchly for the soundness of its political beliefs;

THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED, That we hereby, with deep emotion and heads humbly bowed, bemoan the irreparable loss to the Republican party of our capable and highly esteemed chairman and leader;

BE IT FIRTHER RESOLVED, That copies of this resolution be given to his nearest of kin, and also that same be published in the county newspapers, so that all may join in our bereavement, in the passing of a staunch leader and supporter of the Republican party, and a most valuable citizen of Charlevoix county.

WM. M. SANDERSON,
Vice-Chairman.
MRS. AGNES LORCH,
Secretary.
DR. G. W. BECHTOLD,
Treasurer.

"Regret inability to be present at funeral of my old comrade-in-arms of Spanish-American war and his good wife. Convey my sincerest sympathy to relatives, friends and the community in their great loss of these patriotic and public-spirited citizens. They represented the highest ideals of American life in devotion to home and country.

Ethan W. Thompson."

LESS TAX DELINQUENCY TREASURER REPORT

Only Half As Much Returned Unpaid in 1934 As in 1933

Evidence that a greater percentage of both summer and winter taxes are being paid in 1934 than in 1933 is revealed by figures from City Treasurer Robert E. Rife.

On December 1st the amount of summer or city taxes remaining unpaid was $6,788.07, as compared to $12,295.52 on the same date a year ago. In other words $6,509.45 more tax money was received by the city of Charlevoix during 1934 than in 1933.

While the difference is not so great, the same may be reported of the winter tax which goes for state, county, and school purposes. On December 24th the collections reported by Treasurer Rife total $11,366.48, as compared to $9,377.26 on the same date a year ago.

Unless extended, the deadline for payment of winter taxes without penalty is January 9th.

Bird, veteran in years of service, continues for his sixth term as register of deeds; Floyd W. Ikens his second term as sheriff; Ervan A. Ruegsegger as judge of probate and Frank H. Wangeman as county road commissioner by virtue of renomination and election last fall.

At the spring primary election offices to be voted for include circuit court judge and county school commissioner along with numerous state offices. The primary is in March and the election in April.

PRODUCTION CREDIT ASSN. MEETS

1ST ANNUAL SESSION AT GAYLORD JANUARY 23

Representatives of Ten Counties Gather for Review of Last Year's Accomplishments

Members of the Gaylord Production Credit Association will assemble January 23rd at 10:30 o'clock at Gaylord court house for the association's first annual meeting, it was announced here this week by A. J. Townsend, secretary-treasurer. This is one of the 46 similar associations organized by farmers in this state under the Farm Credit Administration for the purpose of affording themselves a source of funds for putting in crops, to purchase livestock, feed, equipment, supplies, etc., and for other general farm purposes.

Since the association was formed early this year it has gained 181 members and had made loans totaling $31,847.13 up to November 30th. The Board of directors and the officers chosen at the organization meeting last spring were named to hold office until the first annual meeting. Every member, that is, every borrower, of the association is entitled to one vote, and Secretary A. J. Townsend says he hopes for a large attendance.

"A representative of the Production Credit Corporation of St. Paul will attend the meeting and address the stockholders, and there will be reports of our financial condition and the discussion of several important matters which require action by the stockholders," he said. "Farmers who are not stockholders are also invited to attend the meeting.

"The organization of the production credit associations is one of the steps in behalf of agriculture that farmers have long contended for, that is a chance to obtain credit at low rates and on reasonable terms for their current or seasonal farm needs. The association is organized on a permanent basis and is not a temporary or emergency set-up. It is up to the farmers to take an active part in directing its affairs, and the annual meeting should be well attended.

"The association has members in Antrim, Alpena, Charlevoix, Cheboygan, Crawford, Emmet, Oscoda, Otsego, Montmorency and Presque Isle counties. This is a cooperative association which belongs to its members. It was organized to make sound agricultural loans at as favorable a rate of interest as possible. Any earnings above expenses go into reserve and when a guaranty fund equal to 25 per cent of the outstanding capital stock has been built up the association may pay dividends to its stockholders."

1934 LICENSES GOOD UNTIL FEBRUARY 1ST

Extension of One Month Is Granted Michigan Motorists

Michigan motorists received a belated Christmas gift in the joint statement issued by Secretary of State Clarke W. Brown and Orville E. Atwood, secretary of state-elect.

The announcement was to the effect that 1934 license plates will be legal until February 1, 1935, on all motor vehicles except trailers of more than 3,000 pounds.

Under the trailer-brake law adopted by the 1933 legislature, all trailers of more than 3,000 pounds gross weight must be equipped with brakes that can be operated by the driver of the truck. Because of this law, 1934 trailer license plates cannot be used legally after December 31, 1934, on trailers weighing more than 3,000 pounds.

COLLEGE QUINTET LOSES AT PETOSKEY

Count Between Two Teams Evened as Charlevoix Drops Second

The second game between the Charlevoix and Petoskey Freshman College basketball quintets played at Petoskey last Friday, ended with a victory for Petoskey, thus evening the series. The game was close all the way, the score being 14 to 11 at the half, and 24 to 19 at the final whistle.

The local team was composed of Ance, Potter, W. Kirby, T. Kirby, and Livingston. Petoskey was represented by Maxfield, Potts, Crawford, Tillotson, and Reed. Winfield Kirby led Charlevoix in scoring, while Crawford set the pace for Petoskey.

These two teams will meet for the third time on Thursday evening. The contest will be played on the local floor, and will be the preliminary to the widely heralded exhibition between the local Maroon Wave and Grand Rapids Union.

TWO BASKETBALL GAMES THIS WEEK

KIPMEN TAKE ON G. R. UNION THURSDAY NIGHT

Petoskey Comes Here for a Return Tilt Saturday to Provide Second Contest of Week

Charlevoix basketeers, idle for a week due to a vacancy in their schedule, will make two appearances on the home court this week.

On Thursday evening the Kipmen step out into high class competition when they take on Union high school of Grand Rapids. The fact that Union heads the Grand Rapids city basketball race, which they won last season, that they are a class A school and the first team south of Traverse City to engage in interscholastic competition here, puts the contest in the limelight as the outstanding home attraction of the year.

The Kipmen, with victories over Petoskey and Traverse City, northern Michigan class B schools, can be figured to give Union a battle. The outcome of the contest should provide a fair comparison between the caliber of upper Michigan and downstate teams.

The second basketball attraction of the week is scheduled for Saturday evening, December 29th, when the Kipmen meet Petoskey's Northmen in a return engagement. Charlevoix defeated Petoskey by a decisive margin at Petoskey a week ago, but the outcome of that game does not spell another victory. Since then Petoskey polished off Alpena high and with a little more luck at the basket than they experienced in their previous encounter may make the evening an interesting one for the Kipmen.

Preliminary contests have been scheduled to open the evening's entertainment both Thursday and Saturday.

LEGISLATURE IS NEAR ITS FINISH

NEXT MONDAY WILL BRING DOWN FINAL CURTAIN

Solons May Meet in Meantime But Little Hope Held for Any Action of Vote Recount

(From Cheboygan Tribune)

Next Monday will see the final curtain rung down on one of the most unique legislatures it has been the state's fortune good or bad, to possess.

When bells are tolling in the new year during the first minutes of 1935 the present group of lawmakers will definitely and positively go out of existence. That minute will be the first one in which there has been anything definite about the legislature in two years.

In the meantime the solons may meet again in an attempt to do something about recounting the votes for secretary of state cast last November, but this is extremely unlikely.

Come what may, there is no chance for progress upon the recount, for which Governor Comstock summoned the legislature in special session, before Christmas and there is little hope that anything can be done in the period remaining before the first of the year.

Everybody is disgusted with everybody else.

In the last two years there have been some sparkling sessions of the senate which have been generously studded with parliamentary errors and ten cent store politics. In the session last Thursday night and early Friday morning, however, the "upper" chamber reached its peak.

In the 16 hours and 30 minutes that elapsed after 10 a. m. Thursday there were but two questions before the chamber for action and when the gavel fell for the final time neither had been disposed of. The questions the statesmen were confronted with were those of a joint session with the House and the rules under which the session was to have operated.

Amendment followed amendment, with futility; parliamentary snarls piled up until the galleries were convulsed with amusement and newspapermen and others interested in the proceedings tore their hair.

Sessions such as that of Thursday have been the usual thing during the last two years and the reason is the personnel of the senate itself. The genial undertaker from Ionia, Lieut. Gov. Allen E. Stebbins who had a hard time at one time running the Ionia city council, has been lost in the presiding officer's chair.

His natural ability for confusion has been greatly augmented by the veteran Republican minority whose tactics in many cases can only be described as "smart Alec."

The personal record of Sen. Leon D. Case of Watervliet, (D) is clean, but as administration leader he has been unable to hold together the slender majority of "green" Democrats many of whom were chiefly interested in making newspaper headlines.

AT THE MOVIES

Anna Wong With Raft in Picture

After an absence of more than a year from American pictures, Anna May Wong, Chinese-American star, returns to the Hollywood screen in Paramount's "Limehouse Blues," fetatured with George Raft. The picture, directed by Alexander Hall, comes Saturday and Sunday to the Palace Theater.

In the supporting cast of this picture, which is set in the sinister and shuddery confines of the most famous of Occidental Chinatowns, are Jean Parker, Kent Taylor and Montagu Love.

Sing-Song Girl

At the opening of the picture, Raft is seen as Harry Young, secret leader of a group of river pirates who is carrying on a deadly warfare with the London police under the guise of a respectable cafe owner.

Miss Wong is the sing-song girl of his cafe, devoted and subservient to Raft. She becomes jealous when a little Limehouse waif, played by Jean Parker, enters Raft's life and captures his heart.

From that point on there is enmity between these two and when Anna May Wong discovers that Jean Parker has fallen in love with an honest young man, played by Kent Taylor, she reveals her secret to Raft.

Alexander Hall Directed

With almost fiendish ingenuity, Raft lays plans to destroy the man who he believes stands between himself and Jean Parker. The thrilling climax of the picture comes when Raft realizes that Jean Parker's happiness means more to him than anything else and sacrifices his life to save the man she loves.

CONSERVATION DEPT. WEEKLY BULLETIN

Of 758 deer hunters counted at Detour on their return from Drummond island during the past deer hunting season, 344 or nearly 50 per cent had shot a buck, reports to the Department of Conservation indicate. Of the 344 successful hunters, 302 had antlered bucks and 42 spikehorn bucks. In addition two hunters had bagged coyotes and one had shot a black bear.

The title of being one of the meanest hunters of the 1934 season goes to the unknown nimrod who tried his marksmanship in the Ogemaw state forest on a deer fawn no larger than a good-sized collie dog. Walter E. Hastings, Department of Conservation staff photographer, found the fawn riddled with buckshot. When placed on a scales, the carcass weighed only 43 pounds, according to the report to the department.

Five million lake trout eggs are developing at state fish hatcheries for next year's planting work, reports the Fisheries Division, Department of Conservation.

Blaine Brannon, keeper of the Ogemaw refuge, estimated that approximately 100 does and fawns were shot during the open deer season in the area surrounding the Ogemaw refuge.

Lost Continents Exist in Legends or Theories

Many Parts of Present Ocean Floor Once Dry Land.

Washington.—Man's steady progress in mapping the unseen world beneath the oceans by means of echo soundings, sheds occasional tantalizing glimmers of light on the extravagant but haunting legends or scientific theories of lands that vanished under the sea.

On the floor of the Indian ocean a British oceanographic expedition recently discovered a submarine plateau and two buried mountain ranges separated by a deep valley. Immediately men wondered whether these were vestiges of a hypothetical continent, "Lemuria," assumed by the late Ernst Heinrich Haeckel, German naturalist, to have existed in this very locality, in order to explain the distribution of the monkeylike lemurs.

The captain of an American naval vessel, on sounding duty in the Pacific for years, has pieced together the outlines of a huge continentlike mass lying deeply submerged between North America and Asia, raising again the question of the one-time existence of a continent in the largest of oceans.

Stirs Imagination.

"Since the days of Plato—and probably even before—the imagination of men has been stirred by tales of a whole continent, freighted with humans, suddenly going down by the head like a stricken ship," says the National Geographic society.

"In the folklore of peoples in many parts of the world survive stories of widespread inundation—prototypes, perhaps, of our own Biblical account of the Deluge and Noah's Ark.

"That immense changes have taken place in the distribution of land and water areas in the long life of our planet, has long been known, of course, to students of science. Even elementary students of geology know that our great mountain ranges are largely composed of rocks laid down on the bottom of vanished seas, and then upraised. The recent discovery of submerged river valleys off Cape Cod and nearly three miles below the surface of the sea in the Bahamas region gives proof that many areas of the present ocean floor were once dry land.

"Many islands are known to have disappeared suddenly. Among them is little Sarah Ann, in the mid-Pacific. Scientists expected to use it as a gravistand from which to observe the solar eclipse of 1937, but recently United States naval vessels sought it in vain. The island had vanished. Thousands of lives were lost when Tunnaki in the Cook group was swallowed by the Pacific in 1836.

The Story of Atlantis.

"Atlantis is the most famous land lost in the sea. The poignant and fascinating story of Atlantis was given to the world by Plato who had it from Solon who in turn had heard it from a priest of Egypt.

"The great Greek wrote of a civilization which flourished some 9,000 years before his time on an island of continental size called Atlantis, which lay beyond Gibraltar, the 'Pillars of Hercules.' A mighty war ensued between Atlantis and Greece. After a fierce battle 'there occurred violent earthquakes and floods' and 'in a day and a fatal night' the rich and populous Atlantis 'disappeared and was sunk beneath the sea.'

"The name of the 'lost Atlantis' survives in the name of the ocean—Atlantic.

"The mammoth Pacific too has its mysteries of vanished lands. Remarkable stone images found on lonesome little Easter island 2,000 miles west of South America have led men to wonder whether this 40-square-mile patch of land is not all that is left of a large island group or continent and an extinct civilization.

"Much farther to the west, in the South Pacific, the thousands of islands have long been regarded as the possible debris of a sunken continent. Unexplained ruins exist in the Carolines and on Malden island between Tahiti and Hawaii. A leading British oceanographer recently published the conclusion that an extensive continent foundered in the central Pacific in early Tertiary times.

"Geology too has created a suppositious continent, Gondwanaland. Taking its name from a rock formation found in the Gondwana section of India and also in many other parts of the world, it is supposed to have included Lemuria, Africa, Australia, most of South America, and Antarctica."

This "Sea Monster" Just Turns Turtle

Lancaster, Pa.—The "sea" monster" of Long Park lake has been found.

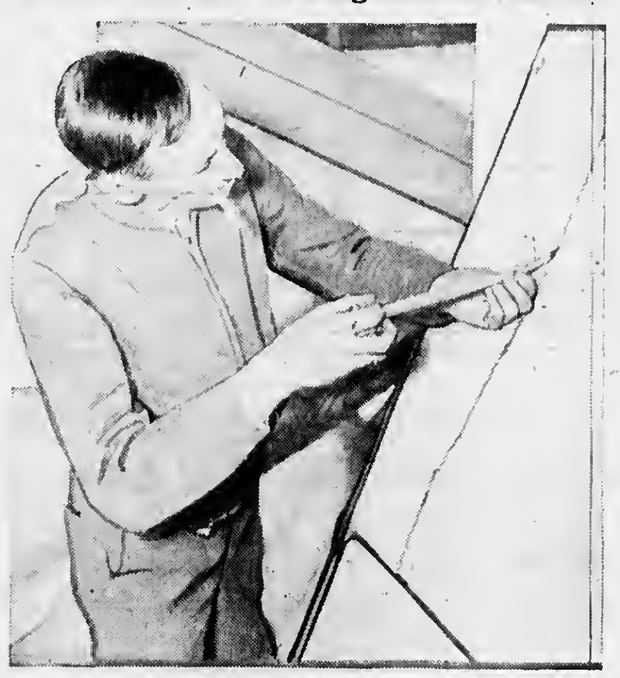
Sportsmen seining the lake for undesirable fish, snagged "Old Snapper," huge turtle which fishermen have reported seeing in the lake for years.

As a precaution, the turtle's jaws were bound with a brass bar.

After the lake had been seined, the water was drained into a creek. Sportsmen said they mean to restore "Old Snapper" to his kingdom when they complete cleaning the lake bed.

The turtle was estimated to weigh more than 50 pounds.

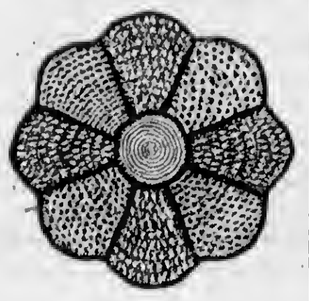
Bad Crack in Washington Monument



William M. Greig, government engineer, examining a large crack which extends through the entire thickness of one of the marble blocks near the top of the Washington monument. Only the lightning rods have held the huge piece of marble in place, and the whole stone will have to be replaced in order to make the monument structurally sound.

"DRESDEN PLATE" CROCHETED RUG

By GRANDMOTHER CLARK



In Colonial days patchwork quilts and rag rugs were very popular. During the past 3 or 4 years patchwork quilts have been the leading item of interest for home art needleworkers. In 1933, when the crocheted rag rug in quilt design appeared, women all over the country took great interest in this new and beautiful way of making rag rugs. The old rugs were either round or oval, crocheted row after row until desired size was obtained. Changing of colors was the only variation. In quilt design rugs many beautiful combinations are possible and the work is really interesting.

Illustration above shows the "Dresden Plate" rug, named after the Dresden Plate or Friendship quilt, a pattern that every woman knows. This rug is another popular pattern, measures 34 inches and can be made from 40 oz. of Grandmother Clark's rag rug strips or 32 oz. of "Linkraft," the new woven material for rag rugs.

Send 10c to our Rug Department and get our book No. 21 showing 20 different crocheted rugs in quilt design in colors with illustrations.

COLOR BLIND NOT ALIKE IN THEIR IDEAS OF LIGHT

At the Indiana State Medical association's exhibit at the Indiana state fair, free examinations for color blindness were offered. Tests were made of 4,412 men, women and children—2,079 males and 2,363 females. Of the males, 156, or 7.5 per cent, were color blind to some degree, and only ten of the females, or .423 per cent.

Of 166 persons who had some impairment, 61 were completely red-green blind, 43 incompletely red-green blind, 25 blind to the lighter shades of green, 22 incompletely green blind, eight completely green blind and incompletely red blind; two completely red blind and two completely red blind and incompletely green blind. Of the ten women, four were completely red-green blind, four incompletely green blind and two incompletely red-green blind. Eight were blonds and two brunettes. Only two knew they were color blind. Three were sisters that had a brother who was incompletely green blind.

Only 66 of the 166 knew that they could not tell the difference between red and green. Some who lived on farms said that they could not tell ripe tomatoes or strawberries from green ones and could not see red apples in orchards. All the color blind who were old enough to drive automobiles did so. A report published in the Journal of the Indiana State Medical association says: "Only 22 of the 126 confessed any trouble with the stop lights, although a large number stated that they could not tell the difference until they got much closer to the lights than was necessary for other members of the family. Still others stated that they had a little trouble with traffic lights at twilight or when they came upon them before they changed." Two stated that they could not tell the difference at all, and drove their cars either by the "stop" and "go" lettering on the signs or by observing the other traffic.—Indianapolis News.

Rats Now Installed as Pets of Science

Succeed Guinea Pigs in Laboratory Research Work.

Berkeley, Calif. — In laboratories scattered all over the world the rat has superseded the guinea pig as the leading experimental animal.

A single department of the University of California, where vitamin and hormone investigations are directed by Dr. Herbert Evans, has raised, or purchased, approximately 1,800 rats a month for the last ten to twelve years.

Scientific Pied Pipers are leading rats to new goals of investigation furnishing answers to hundreds of questions which closely concern mankind. Their work is yielding important data on cancer, leprosy, psychology, heredity, glandular functions, parasites, chemicals, jaundice and diet.

Rats have been sent on "heavy water" sprees to furnish chemists new data on hydrogen isotopes, hybrid elements which combine with oxygen to form strange water. Oscar, a partly rat of good family, kicked his heels and behaved in a generally intoxicated manner when given heavy water to drink.

The mysteries that surround hormones, secreted by the endocrine glands, have been partly solved by tests on rats. Dwarf rats fed hormones from pituitary glands have been brought to normal size, while normal rats given the same substance have been developed to giant stature, two to three times average size.

Potency of these hormones fed laboratory rats is illustrated by the fact 650,000,000 gallons of water would not destroy all effectiveness of a single ounce of hormones from the human thyroid gland.

Among the most interesting experiments being conducted on rats at the University of California are "oxygen starvation" tests, wherein the animals are kept in tanks under pressure equivalent to that at altitudes of 17,000 to 25,000 feet.

Tests have shown that cancer cells vary in oxygen consumption from that of normal cells. The oxygen starvation experiment was designed to indicate whether their activity could be reduced by cutting off the normal oxygen supply. No final conclusions have been reached in the test.

VOLCANO PUPS

Father Hubbard, Alaska's famous "Padre of the Snows," is pictured with the seven malemute pups that were born in an Alaskan volcano crater in the Aghileen pinnacles, wildest part of the Aliuskan peninsula. "Margie," their mother, carried them in a pack sack on her back for a month. They were "laxled" over ridges, across rivers and through swamps that had never before been traversed by white men.

Hogs Carry Their Own Shipping Tags in Kansas

Topeka, Kan.—The Santa Fe, in an effort to meet the competition of truck carriers, has inaugurated a new system on the branch line for serving shippers of small lots. The road will pick up one hog, or more, at any station and carry it to Kansas City at the car-lot rate.

Each station on the line is supplied with a can of paint and a brush and each farmer marks his own hog or hogs so the buyer at the market can take care of the shipments consigned to him.

Man Tames a Mink.

Worcester, Mass.—Charles M. Kane accomplished, perhaps, one of the most difficult task among animals—taming a mink. Kane has the small animal so well trained that it laps his hands, searches his trousers' pockets for keys and cigarettes, climbs around his neck and bounces a rubber ball.

Sheep Herded 70 Miles

Osage Indians Once More on Road to Affluence

Pawhuska, Okla.—Oil, which in 1917 lifted the Osages from poverty to affluence and then in the depression dropped them into poverty again, is on the up-trail once more, and automobile and airplane salesmen look forward to good business.

In 1925 the per capita income of Osages is expected to be more than $200 a month, and these days that will mean the freest of spending. At one sale in March the Indians received $14,000,000. A lease sale made a few weeks ago brought more than a million dollars.

Formerly, when oil money poured in the Indians bought expensive homes, all the dogs they wanted and several high-priced automobiles. Their chiefs, notably Bacon Rind, advised them to work their farms and save money for the lean years. They paid no heed and in 1932 some of the former wealthy Indians were broke.

State Women Workers Must Tone Down Style

Columbus, Ohio.—A new style note was issued to young women working in Ohio's old-age pension division offices here by heads of the department—all on the side of conservatism in dress.

The girls were called into closed conference and told that too many of them came to work dressed as for a party. Mall L. Brown, head of the department, believed their dress should be toned down. The girls described it as "pin order."

Brown called it "a recommendation" and said it was issued at suggestion of a woman supervisor of the department who criticized girls who came to work dressed as if they were "going to a social engagement."

60-Year-Old Women Back From 4,000-Mile Hike

Livingston, Mont.—With the avowed purpose of seeing the President, two widows, Mrs. Josephine Kline and Mrs. Helen Sherwood, both over sixty years old, hitch-hiked from here to Washington and back recently, a distance of well over 4,000 miles.

Starting out with $14, their experiences varied from the landlady in Washington, who held their baggage for unpaid room rent to the truck driver, who showed them about St. Paul and gave them a dollar. Although they did not see the President, the women consider their trip a success and the most exciting experience of their lives.

THE KING IS DEAD—

As the old year slowly comes to a close there is increasing evidence that the long reign of King Depression is nearing its end. Even if complete abdication is not forced, the "man of misery" in the long black coat of unemployment and want will find himself at the head of a limited monarchy during the coming twelve months. This will be good news to millions of American citizens who have been walking in the valley of hopelessness and despair for more than five years.

The automotive industry announces the building of 3,400,000 cars in 1935, and simultaneously with that broadcast comes news of the contemplated erection within six months of a 12 million dollar steel plant at Detroit to supply demands of motor manufacturers and allied industries. The building industry is double that of a year ago in spite of continuing high costs of building material and skilled labor. The impetus given this basic industry from Washington in building and furnishing new homes alone will prove a big supporting factor in advancing good times.

Retail buying has shown a remarkable increase over that of 1933 and we can see no real dark spots on the future. Much of the distrust existing between the administration and finance and industry is rapidly being cleared away. The big boys on both sides of the national highways who have been riding blindly through the chaotic night of economical displacement are now claiming to see in the dawn of a new day the necessity of a well-planned, well thought out course to pursue if old evils are to be discredited and modern plans of rejuvenation and readjustment made fact not theory. On the whole the future augurs well.

NEW YEAR NEEDS

'Twixt the old year and the new, the Michigan Tuberculosis Association declares that it can be thankful for 1934 and look forward with considerable hope and pleasure toward 1935.

To the people of Michigan who made their contributions to the 1934 sale of tuberculosis Christmas Seals, to the editors, theater managers, merchants, radio station owners, billboard companies who helped in that sale, it is indeed thankful.

To 1935 and the program of tuberculosis-fighting during that year made possible by the seal sale just officially closed, it can look hopefully and in the spirit of meeting new opportunity.

One thing only is needed to complete the picture. That is realization of the expanded program needed so desperately in the anti-tuberculosis campaign for the coming year. That can come true only one way.

If you have not yet purchased your Christmas Seals—even though the sale closed officially on Christmas Day—don't fail to do so now. Every dollar contributed is just that much more toward the extra work that must be done in 1935.

If in doubt don't go back the next night for your hat.

BLIGHT OF BUREAUCRACY

A more concise description of what appears to be happening to us under the New Deal would be difficult to find than the following quotation from an address by the lord chief justice of England before the American Bar association in 1927: "The name 'self-government' would be a mockery if it should come to mean government by a vast array of anonymous officials, 'hidden from view but placed above the law and administered a topsy-turvy system whereby the servants of the public had made themselves its masters."

In a sense that is a definition of bureaucracy. That it may be precisely what we are coming to in the United States in the name of a benign and smiling New Deal is a genuine and well-founded fear—and the fact that the new rule professes high humanitarianism does not lessen its possible dangers. Some defenders of the bureaucracy inherent in our modern trend of government incline to the idea that anything is better than the status quo, so aptly described by the old colored gentleman of the story as being "de mess we's in." Although typical, that theory ought to be thoroughly discredited for it presupposes that economic recovery is wholly impossible without sacrifice of the ideals of freedom which have been achieved after centuries of struggle.

In other words, we are told by certain champions of the New Deal that if we want economic security for all we must be prepared to subject ourselves to increased government regulations and direction. Certain European countries without our tradition of liberty, have been willing to make the sacrifice. But the American people, in the end, may be expected to resist the blight of both bureaucracy and dictatorship.—Herman Roe in Northfield (Minn.) News.

Well, we see the fleet's in for Clara.

BEING KIND TO UNCLE

One reason why the overlords of the banking world are sitting steady in the boat these days, while the administration craft sails on gaily beneath smiling skies, is because of what is likely to happen to them if their chief customer, good old Uncle Sam, should suddenly run into a spell of bad weather.

You may not approve the life your neighbor is leading, you know it is not good for his financial health, but if he happens to owe you a lot of money you are going to be the last person in the world to call attention to his unorthodox habits. And that is why the big money boys are praying so fervently for a safe coming ashore. Because of the scarcity of other earning investments since 1929 they have been pouring their idle millions into government securities. No matter what happens they dare not let them go sour.

That is the reason why each succeeding bond issue has been snapped up with such avidity. Other bond issues will be welcomed with open arms. They don't want any quarrel with Uncle Sam, and if there are signs of mutiny aboard it will be promptly squelched. By the simple expedient of taking over the Federal Reserve System the administration has placed itself in a strategic position. It can peg the bond market almost at will, it can deal for lower interest rates, in short the center of the financial world has been transferred from Wall Street to Washington.

Even if the administration decides to continue its campaign of prodigal spending from the public treasury there will be no loud protest from Wall Street—just the hushed sound of pitiful sobbing in the golden temples in the canyon. Nor will there be any great amount of sympathy expressed by the American people over their plight. With the beginning of the depression, when thousands of sound business institutions with a record of careful management and integrity were frantically seeking financial assistance to save them from destruction, Wall Street money lenders calmly turned a deaf ear to their entreaties and went to sea in a boat of their own construction. If the skipper grows a bit careless in his sailing, if the waves dash dangerously over the prow, you won't find them searching for any second mate to take the wheel. They're going to continue buying government securities for another year at least because they know Uncle Sam is the only one who can bring them back into the harbor of financial safety. And should the bewhiskered gentleman with the striped pants spank sharply to them on occasion there will be no moaning of the bar. They've learned their lesson.

Dictatorship is like a great beech tree—nice to look at, but nothing ever grows under it.—Stanley Baldwin.

HEALTHY NEW YEAR

(By the Christmas Seal Doctor)

After the last few shouts of happy hail and farewell are over for New Year's Eve and 1935 begins to dawn not only in the eastern sky, but also in Man's consciousness, it's time for a little stock-taking.

Says the Christmas Seal Doctor:

"It's time for 'stock-taking' in Health and a time to begin keeping new resolutions for safe-guarding one's health all through the New Year."

One of the best of these resolutions should start your feet on periodical visits to your doctor and dentist, whether you think you need their attention at the time or not. Prevention is sixteen times better than cure according to an old proverb, and serious complications of many disease—like tuberculosis—may be prevented if they are discovered in time.—Michigan Tuberculosis Association.

Money is like manure, of very little use except it be spread.—Francis Bacon.

PAMPERED YOUTH

Former President Theodore Roosevelt pointed to an alarming increase in mollycoddled youth. The pampered boy is the one who quickly surrenders to a faint whistle in the dark. The pampered girl is the "clinging vine" who so enjoys ill health that she tells everybody about it. Not overtaxed, not broken by being overburdened, but given more and more responsibility, the youth is strengthened and fitted to manage later obligations.

SEEK CONSOLIDATION STATE WELFARE WORK

Fitzgerald Would Change System and Appoint Dillman Head

Consolidation of welfare relief work in one department under the jurisdiction of former Highway Commissioner Grover C. Dillman, will be proposed to the 1935 legislature, Gov.-Elect Frank D. Fitzgerald said Wednesday.

At the present time emergency welfare relief is handled by a separate commission which has employed Dr. William Haber as its director. The regular welfare department has been directed by Miss Evelyn S. Mershon.

Fitzgerald said that his plans for consolidation are not complete but that, in general, he intends to ask the legislature to place the emergency welfare work inside the state welfare department with Dillman exercising important authority in consolidation.

The state emergency welfare commission is now under the control of the Democratic national administration and many observers are of the opinion that Fitzgerald will have a difficult time assuming control of it, especially in view of the fact that federal financial contributions are much larger than the amount expended by the state administration. In addition the new governor would have to secure passage of amendments to the present state law.

Here's Slip That Fits the Figure

PATTERN 1807

You will like this slip when you make it, when you wear it—and when you tub and iron it. What more could you ask of any bit of lingerie? It is a wrap-around model that crosses in the back and is both shadow-proof and adjustable. It takes next to no time to make, as you will find to your joy, and irons flat like the proverbial handkerchief. Lovely in wash satin, crepe or unshrinkable rayon.

Pattern 1807 is available in sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 36 takes 3½ yards 39 inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins and stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.

TRUE DETECTIVE STORY

by Vance Wynn

© Public Ledger

The Gentleman From Paris

It all came about from engaging a caretaker without looking into his antecedents.

Dr. and Mrs. Jerome Dedrul—the last named being an Italian countess—had a winter home in Minneapolis.

They were in the habit of going south for winter, and left the Western home in charge of a venerable servant.

One year when they returned to Minneapolis they discovered that the servant had disappeared, and with him many of the precious possessions of the family.

These included a rare watch that had once been the property of Cardinal Richelieu, and a grape cluster design in pearls, diamonds and platinum, the work of the peerless artist, Benvenuto Cellini.

It was felt instinctively that the stolen goods had been taken to New York, so Doctor Dedrul called upon George R. Dougherty, a clever detective of that city, who had made a reputation by solving more than one perplexing case.

His first inquiry concerned the venerable caretaker.

The victims were sure that he was all right; they feared, in fact, that he might have met with foul play.

As a proof of the man's good name, they exhibited a sheaf of letters of recommendation he had brought with him when he applied for the job. Dougherty investigated and found that all the letters had been forged.

This satisfied him that the man was a crook, and, from the character of the robbery, he was convinced that the caretaker worked with confederates.

His first move was to make a tour of the pawnshops of New York.

After that he visited many of the dealers in antiques.

On the second day of the search he was fortunate enough to come across the famous Richelieu watch in a shop on Sixth avenue.

The dealer pretended to be very much shocked when he was told that he had purchased stolen goods, and, in reparation, said he was willing to do all in his power to bring the thief to justice.

He stated that the man had told him his name was "Mr. Coates," and that he had picked up this antique and others in the Rue Madame, that street of famous antique shops in the French capital.

It had been "picked up" truly enough, but not in the manner nor in the place suggested by the clever crook.

The dealer was able to give a very good description of the man who had sold him the watch.

He said that he was of medium build, smooth shaven, of an olive complexion and with dark eyes.

The rogues' gallery was consulted and the detective found several men by the name of Coates, but none of them answered the description of the gentleman who seemed to be so familiar with the Rue Madame.

Dougherty now turned his attention to the second-hand stores, and, by great good luck, he located a dealer who had purchased the grape cluster design made by Benvenuto Cellini.

This man was able to give him a clue regarding the whereabouts of the elusive "Mr. Coates."

He said he had gone West, and thought he was living in Wisconsin.

It did not take Dougherty long to get to Milwaukee, and there, with the aid of the police, he located the man for whom he had been searching so long.

He was existing in a hall bedroom, and, having spent all of his money, was on the lookout for a fresh job.

The detective, in short, had struck him at the psychological moment.

Dougherty played his part cautiously. He might have arrested him on suspicion, but he did not propose to do anything like that.

What he wanted was real evidence. At their second meeting he began to talk about antiques and said that he had a customer who was anxious to get some rare Seventeenth century works of art, that he was willing to pay a big price for the right kind of articles.

The so-called "Mr. Coates" swallowed the bait line, hook and sinker and offered to take the detective to a place in New York where he could get the watch once owned by the great French cardinal.

The rest of it was detail. It was proved that the fellow was the confederate of the caretaker who had robbed the Western home of Doctor Dedrul, and after the usual formalities, he was placed on trial and promptly convicted.

He was given a long sentence, during which it is to be presumed that he had ample opportunity for improving his knowledge of the French language and French antiques.

The Straits of Magellan are more than 300 miles long, measured by the ship channel, which must be followed. Penguins are seen in great numbers along the route; seals and whales are plentiful and the albatross is sometimes encountered. Mt. EGYPT'S ATTRACTIONS

The tomb of King Tut Ankh-Amen is now visited by nearly all Mediterranean cruisers, as are the temple of Karnak and the other great relics of ancient Egypt. The huge columns and still mighty ruins of the temple are subtly pleasing to tourists. One of Egypt's strong queens, Hatshepsut, played a leading part in directing the building of this temple.

When her brother succeeded her he jealously had all her inscriptions chiseled away and covered her great obelisks with a wall of masonry. With the centuries the masonry has crumbled away and Hatshepsut's obelisk was disclosed, unchanged despite the vindictiveness of kings.

ARRANGE LOANS NOW USE CASH AS NEEDED

Production Credit Assns. Ready to Finance Farm Operations

Forehanded Michigan farmers who will want to borrow money from their local production credit association can make applications now and save any chance of delay next spring, according to Commissioner S. M. Garwood, Washington.

Some loans are being made now but the rush of applications begins just before the crop season. Most farmers know whether they will need additional credit facilities next spring and can make their applications now. Money on approved loans will be advanced when wanted and interest charges begin only when the money is advanced.

The production credit associations are permanent additions to the credit facilities of agriculture. They are conducted by local people and make loans only on a business basis of ample security for the money loaned.

Commissioner Garwood points out that the two common mistakes made in borrowing money are to borrow too early and pay unnecessary interest charges or to borrow too late and be unable to get cash discounts on materials purchased. Managers of production credit associations are expected to assist their clients in avoiding both of these mistakes.

Borrowers do not have to draw the full amount of a loan at once. The money can be taken up at the production credit association as it is needed, and the interest charges are made only on the portions which have been withdrawn. If application has been made for more than is needed, the balance can be left at the association and no interest charge is made.

SUNDAY DINNER SUGGESTIONS

By Ann Page

The Sunday dinner between Christmas and New Year's will probably be a modest one in most homes. Lamb, veal, and pork are somewhat cheaper than they have been and any one of them offers good value. Beef remains rather high. Green vegetables are much higher so that potatoes, other root vegetables and salad greens are good choices.

Oranges, Navel oranges, grapefruit, apples and bananas are plentiful and relatively cheap. Use them for desserts, salads and fruit cocktails as well as breakfast fruits.

Oysters, salt and smoked fish make moderately priced fish dinners.

Here are three menus, including a New Year's dinner, made up from seasonable foods:

Low Cost Dinner

Roast Shoulder of Pork
Mashed Potatoes Creamed Turnip
Bread and Butter
Apple Betty
Tea or Coffee Milk

Medium Cost Dinner

Roast Lamb Browned Potatoes
Carrots and Peas
Bread and Butter
Jellied Apple Sauce
Tea or Coffee Milk

New Year's Dinner

Fruit Cup or Clear Soup
Celery Carrot Sticks
Roast Fresh Ham Glazed Apples
Mashed Potatoes Yellow Turnips
Spinach Vinaigrette
Rolls and Butter
Frozen Fruit Pudding Wafers

KIPMEN LOSE TWO GAMES LAST WEEK

DEFEATED BY UNION HIGH AND PETOSKEY

Downed by Grand Rapids Outfit 26 to 16 and Dropped 18 to 12 Decision to Petoskey

Appearing twice on the home hardwood last week, Charlevoix basketeers absorbed as many defeats. Last Thursday night they lost 26 to 16 to Grand Rapids Union, and Saturday night Petoskey's Northmen evened the season's count between the two schools by scoring an 18 to 12 victory.

The difference between Charlevoix and Union was Grams, a center towering 6 feet, 7 inches. With Grams taken from the line-up, the visitors would have been cut down to an even match with the Kipmen who battled on the losing side four hectic periods.

While Grams scored only 1 points for Union, his presence in the line-up was Charlevoix's undoing. Grams controlled the tip from center, on defense grabbed everything that came near the bankboard and otherwise demoralized the local squad. He also demoralized the fans, who cheered lustily when the giant was withdrawn in the third period and booed unceremoniously when he was sent back in a few minutes later.

The invading Unionites led 5 to 2 at the quarter, 15 to 4 at the half and 21 to 8 at the third-intermission. Charlevoix out-scored them 8 points to 5 in the final quarter.

For the visitors, Gataska with 9, and Simons with 8, led the scoring. Charlevoix's points were evenly divided.

Petoskey Evened Count

Saturday night a Petoskey team Charlevoix had beaten on their own court showed the Kipmen a clean pair of heels on the local floor.

It was an accurate shooting, smooth-working combination on offense and defense that led the Kipmen from the opening to the final whistle. The Northmen outscored Charlevoix in all but the final period which was even. They led 5 to 1 at the quarter, 8 to 3 at the half and 11 to 6 at the third intermission.

Trailing from the start, Charlevoix never got down to team play, hurrying their advance of the ball into Petoskey's territory and also their numerous shots. A few of the long-range attempts tallied, otherwise all except their fighting spirit fell short.

Dombroski, Petoskey captain, and Foster, Charlevoix captain, led their teams with 6 points each.

Charlevoix Freshman College copped the Charlevoix-Union prelim from Petoskey by a 29 to 21 count, and Charlevoix reserves defeated the Petoskey reserves Saturday night by a decisive 27 to 14 margin.

The Kipmen open their conference schedule Friday night at Boyne City and the week following journey to Harbor Springs for a second conference engagement. They will appear at home against Traverse City on January 18th.

DIVORCE UPSET CUPID ACTIVITY

MORE MARRIAGES, BUT MORE DIVORCES, TOO

Marriage, Divorce, Death and Birth Records Revealed by County and City Clerks

Dan Cupid was more active in Charlevoix county during 1934 than in 1933, but divorces during the same period more than off-set the difference. These facts were revealed today from statistics furnished by County Clerk Fenton R. Bulow.

According to the county records, 137 marriage licenses were issued during 1934, as compared to 135 during 1933. On the other hand, 17 divorces were started and 13 granted during 1933, while in 1934 there were 31 started and 22 granted, an increase of 9.

The records also furnish a comparison of law and chancery cases the past two years. Law cases listed during 1934 numbered 29, while in 1933 there were 31, a decrease of two. In the chancery division, cases increased from 19 in 1933 to 24 in 1934.

Births Less in 1934

From the office of the city clerk figures on the number of births and deaths during the past two years were obtained.

During 1933 the number of deaths recorded totaled 42 as compared to 44 the following year. The number of births dropped during the same period, the records showing 67 in 1933, while during 1934 there were 54, a decrease of 13.

Deceased, son of Mr. and Mrs. Horatio Babcock of Wolverine, was a truck driver for Michigan Bakeries, Inc., and resided with his brother on Mason street since early this winter.

The body was taken to Wolverine, where funeral services were conducted at 10 o'clock today.

CHANGE WELFARE SETUP FEBRUARY 1

STATES MUST CARE FOR OWN CHRONIC DEPENDENTS

Federal Cash Will Go Only to Those Able to Work—Give Proper Credit on Allotments

The Federal Emergency Relief Administration has cleared the way for a broad work-relief program in 1935.

Administrator Harry L. Hopkins ordered individual states, counties and municipalities to raise and spend their own money to care for all "chronic dependents" persons unable to work because of old age, mental disabilities or physical handicaps.

The terse order, effective February 1st, will result in clearing federal relief rolls of almost 4,000,000 aged, crippled, insane individuals who must receive doles to live. It will leave around 15,000,000 firm-bodied, clear-minded unemployed able to earn wages on government projects.

The order was interpreted in official circles as being the administration's first move to base the new year's relief program on work, despite recent big business sentiment for the cheaper "hand-out" system be substituted.

Hopkins' order came as he announced states, counties and cities already had shouldered an increasingly large relief burden.

He said the three groups of political subdivision had spent $323,890,560 of their own funds for relief during the first 10 months of 1934, an increase of $71,514,677 over the $252,375,883 in the same period the year before.

Results of Hopkins' new orders probably will be three fold. First, relief costs are expected to mount slightly although relief rolls will be decreased; second, those remaining on relief probably will receive more than the $25 to $30 they now average each month; third, state, county and local taxpayers may be called upon to pay new levies.

Hopkins estimated work relief is 15 per cent more expensive than direct relief, with the additional money needed for purchasing materials.

Based on the $136,791,268 alloted the states to care for all needy in January, federal work-relief costs will reach about $157,300,000 a month during the winter.

Hopkins pointed out that, if states should use their relief funds strictly for "employables," counties and municipalities would be forced to care for their own "chronic dependents."

The result would be increased real estate taxes in many communities. State participation in caring for "unemployables" could be financed through higher income levies, sales taxes and other assessments.

Wherever possible, he added, the amounts that states spend in caring for "chronic dependents" will be credited toward their contributions to federal relief.

NEW YEAR'S EVE QUIETLY OBSERVED IN CHARLEVOIX

New Year's Eve was celebrated quietly in Charlevoix Monday evening. Several churches conducted "watch night" services and similar affairs were observed in many homes. Dancing parties locally and in nearby cities called out many revelers.

A check-up Tuesday morning revealed a complete absence of any trouble which sometimes accompanies celebration of the New Year.

FEDERAL CHECK TAX REMOVED JANUARY 1

Discontinuance of Nuisance Tax Is Hailed by Bankers

A happy new year, in at least one sense awaits the nation's bankers and writers of some 2,250,000,000 checks annually—for on January 1st the two-cent bank check tax automatically died.

The bank check tax was one of about two dozen so-called nuisance taxes imposed in the revenue bill of 1932. It was supposed to last only a year but was continued with the proviso that it would automatically lapse on January 1, 1935.

FISHING LICENSE EXPIREO DEC. 31

ANGLERS MUST HAVE 1935 LICENSE TO FISH

Resident and Wife Charged 50c for License. Good a Year—Winter Fishing Rules Listed

Anglers wishing to enjoy their favorite sport after Monday must have a new 1935 fishing license, whether they use hook and line or spear.

The distribution of nearly 750,000 fishing licenses, good until December 31st, has started by the license division of the department of conservation. Fifteen hundred license agents had the new licenses for sale by New Year's day. The department expects to issue 600,000 resident, 40,000 non-resident; 60,000 non-resident special 10-day and 35,000 non-resident "wife" licenses, or a total of 735,000 during the next year. The resident license also includes the wife of the holder.

For the benefit of the ice fisherman, some of the rulings are listed as follows:

It is lawful to use at one time, two lines under immediate control, having four or less hooks on all lines. May use any number of hooks on one line for taking smelt in smelt waters. Hooks may be single, double, or treble.

Not more than five single ice lines may be used with one hook to each line for taking fish during their respective open seasons. Lines must be attended every two hours.

Spearing through the ice on inland waters is legal during the months of January and February except on trout streams and waters not otherwise closed to spearing. Artificial lights are illegal.

On the Great Lakes all species of fish except large and small mouth black bass, warmouth, calico or strawberry bass, crappies, bluegills, sunfish, brook or speckled trout, rainbow and steelhead trout, brown and lake leven trout, muskellunge, grayling or sturgeon may be taken with spears at any time not otherwise closed to spearing except that lake trout may not be taken during the closed seasons provided by the commercial fishing laws.

WELFARE PLEOGE DEAOLINE MONOAY

MATTER GOES BEFORE BOARD OF SUPERVISORS

Work Relief Payrolls Decrease as Projects Are Held Up Awaiting Action by County

Unofficially, Monday, January 7th, will be the deadline for Charlevoix county's compliance with the state welfare administration's request of a $40,000 pledge to finance a one-third portion of welfare work relief during 1935.

After several weeks of effort centered largely upon officials of the county's governmental division, pledges fall short of the required amount. Therefore, next Monday when the board of supervisors go into January session, the matter will be thrown into their laps for settlement. Failure to meet the request means positive discontinuance of work relief, and possible withdrawal of all federal and state welfare aid to Charlevoix county.

As a result of the ruling requesting county participation in the financing of work relief, no new projects have been started in Charlevoix county since November 1st. Only those projects upon which a payroll had already been established were continued and the work has gradually decreased as projects under way reached completion.

A review of the situation made possible through statistics furnished by D. T. McHugh, director of work relief, reveals that Charlevoix county has had 93 projects approved since April 1st, 42 of which have been completed and one cancelled, leaving 50 active projects. Of the 50 projects, 18 have not been started due to the November 1st order directing no new work be started until the county pledged its share of work relief finances. In addition there have been 38 projects submitted to Lansing which are being held up for the same reason.

From the financial standpoint, work relief payrolls decreased approximately $2,500 in November and approximately $3,000 during December over preceding months. Ultimately work relief payrolls would stop entirely, while on the other hand direct relief has increased proportionately during the two months previously mentioned. It means that the direct dole is absorbing the decrease in work relief, from which the county has benefited by civic, highway and numerous other improvements.

It is anticipated the board of supervisors will find means next Monday of financing the county's share in order that work relief may be continued.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS
By B. C. Mellencamp

At the request of parents in Charlevoix county, we are glad to announce that Mrs. Lydia Ann Lynde has been scheduled to give a series of discussions on "Meeting Your Child's Problems." Two meetings have been arranged for Wednesday, January 9th. The first will be held in the Boyne Falls community rooms at 2:00 p. m. The second will be held the same day in the Charlevoix high school assembly room at 7:30 p. m. under auspices of the P. T. A. Mrs. Lynde will come to each place three times to help parents solve the many little problems of every day life. These meetings are planned for all the parents in the county, (fathers included) and for teachers, nurses and other persons interested in children. There is no fee involved since this course is a part of the regular extension program from the college.

At the first meeting on January 9th Mrs. Lynde will discuss, "Behavior and Its Causes." Probably one of the greatest worries that parents have today is, "Does your child always do as you wish?" In the past children were taught to obey, but modern children are inclined to ask why, and then use their own judgment. Modern life is so different that we can hardly expect to rear our children as we were reared. Mrs. Lynde in the first lecture will give to parents some of the new knowledge that the scientific world is giving us regarding children—how they grow, develop, feel and behave. It is quite impossible to go further in detail. Why not attend this meeting and enjoy the splendid discussion? Mrs. Lynde will be very glad to discuss with anyone, personal problems, before or after the discussion. Remember next week Wednesday afternoon at Boyne Falls community rooms, and at night, the Charlevoix high school assembly room.

Machinery School for Charlevoix County Farmers

Michigan winter sunshine can be used to cure hay, but it is the best kind of weather for curing some of the troubles which are sure to occur during the next harvest season if the haying equipment is not repaired and adjusted before the rush of farm work starts.

The meeting has been arranged at which a specialist in agricultural engineering from Michigan State college will show farmers how to repair and adjust a mowing machine so that it will be in first class shape for next summer's hay crop. Ways of adjusting and repairing other farm machinery will also be discussed.

This meeting will be held in the East Jordan Co-operative warehouse on Tuesday, January 8th, beginning at 10:00 o'clock. The mowing machine will be torn down in the forenoon and assembled during the afternoon. It is suggested that if you cannot be present all day, come at 1:30 in the afternoon at which time a discussion on tools and equipment needed for repairs, of construction adjustment and repairs, actual replacement of parts and adjustment of the machine for repairing will take place.

Last year the agricultural engineering department of the college held 35 of these machinery repair meetings and worked on 39 mowing machines, whose average age was 21.8 years. The cost of getting these machines into good, serviceable condition was only $4.63 each.

Michigan farmers have about $10,000,000 invested in mowing machines and the average life of this equipment is 12 years. The operating principles of the mowing machine have not been materially changed in the past 20 years, so any adjustment repairs which lengthens the life of the mower are a big saving in money.

Very few Charlevoix county farmers have enough acres of hay to cut year after year so that a machine is actually worn out. Neglect in making minor adjustments or repairs usually reduces the efficiency of the machine until the owner becomes disgusted and buys a new machine rather than work on the old one.

An old mower owned by a Charlevoix county farmer will be brought to the meeting and all the needed repairs and adjustments will be made, and the reasons for making them will be discussed. Those who attend the demonstration should be able to go over their own machines afterward and decide what new parts and what adjustments will be needed on their own machines.

Most of the mowers will need only small repairs such as section bars, guards, or ledger plates, and adjustments to take up wear in gears and bearings. Cutter bars out of line increase the draft of the machine and decrease its efficiency in cutting. Failure to register the knives exactly may cause the machine to cut unevenly, choke up and clog, and to leave uncut hay. All of these troubles can be cured by a few minutes' effort.

These adjustments will be shown at the Charlevoix county meeting. Everyone interested in farm machinery is invited to attend this meeting.

Only 15 Minutes Now Needed to Stop Cough

If you have tried "everything" and your cough or sore throat still hangs on, do not think you can't get relief. What you need is Thoxine—real prescription medicine. It does two essential things: First, it relieves throat irritation and your cough stops. Second, it attacks the internal cause of trouble, drives cold and fever out of the system.

This two-way action makes Thoxine quicker and surer—and explains its truly phenomenal success. All you do is take a big swallow and in 15 minutes you feel relief or get your money back. Safe, pleasant. No harmful drugs. Only 35c.

TRUE DETECTIVE STORY

by Vanca Wynn © Public Ledger

The Flaw in a Perfect Case

WHEN William Harrison, of Gloucestershire, England, disappeared and no knowledge could be obtained of his whereabouts, everybody in that part of the country came to the conclusion that he had met with foul play.

He had gone away on a rent collecting tour, and it was known that he was sure to have a large sum of money in his possession.

A month went by and still there was no trace of the missing man.

The sole topic of discussion in those parts revolved around the query:

What has become of William Harrison?

It was during one of these discussions that John Perry came to the front and amazed the authorities with a remarkable story.

He said that his brother, Richard Perry, had murdered Harrison for his money, and that the result of the crime was his enrichment to the extent of £130.

John and Richard Perry lived with their mother in a little house on the outskirts of the village.

John was not mentally strong; indeed, there were some who regarded him as half-witted.

Richard was physically and mentally strong, but his reputation for integrity was not good.

He had been caught in some questionable transactions, and it was hinted that he would not hesitate at murder for the sake of money.

The magistrate of the district sent for John Perry, and the fellow repeated his story.

He was examined at length, but stuck to his original statement. The only addition he made to it was that he and his mother were present when Richard had assaulted and robbed Richard Harrison.

He was unable to say what had become of the body because he had run away while the robbery was in progress.

The two men and the woman were placed on trial and were inadequately defended.

They were given the impression that if they pleaded guilty to robbery their lives would be spared.

But at the next term of court, Sir Robert Tyde placed them on trial for murder.

They were at a terrible disadvantage because by confessing to robbery they had admitted that they were potential murderers.

In addition to this there was a mass of circumstantial evidence against John.

There was only one flaw in what might be regarded as an otherwise perfect case, and that was the failure of the authorities to find the body.

Sir Charles Turner, who presided at the first trial, had refused to accept the indictment for murder because of this very flaw, and it was that which had caused a change in the indictment to robbery.

But the second judge was not so jealous of the old English law.

He took the ground that Harrison's nonappearance after six months was proof positive that he had been killed.

So the family was convicted and executed.

Soon after the execution one of the residents of Gloucestershire received an anonymous letter hinting that William Harrison was still alive.

Then came another story that he was in Turkey. All of these rumors were treated as mere gossip until three years later when the door of the local inn was opened and William Harrison entered the room.

He said that after he had collected the rents, as usual, he was beset by a gang of thieves, and the cash taken from him.

But the toughs did not stop at mere robbery.

They took him to a wayside inn and invited him to take a drink upon the success of their enterprise.

He took it and in a little while became unconscious.

They had given him drugged liquor.

After this a gang had carried him aboard a vessel.

When he recovered consciousness he found that he was on his way to Turkey.

He had lived there for two years.

When he was asked why he had not communicated with his friends, he said that he feared that they would not believe his story, and as he was unable to make good the money that had been stolen from him he had delayed his return as long as possible.

Since that day—over two centuries ago—no man has been tried for murder in England without first proving the murder.

Saxby's Gale

Saxby's Gale is the name given to a violent storm, which occurred on October 4, 1869, on the coast of New Brunswick, Maine and Nova Scotia. It was accompanied by a tide of extraordinary height. The storm, which apparently came up from the West Indies and caused heavy rains in eastern United States, was called Saxby's Gale because a Lieutenant Saxby of the British navy had announced a year previously that a great storm and high tide would occur on October 5. The prediction had been based on the supposed influence of the moon, but it was entirely indefinite as to the place where the storm would occur.

CAP AND BELLS

IGNORANCE IS BLISS

At one golf course there had been some talk of standardizing tips to caddies, and one day the secretary explained his ideas to a group of members.

"We feel," he said, "that a caddie should not receive a tip of more than one shilling and sixpence per round. You'll agree that's reasonable."

They did agree, all except one Aberlonian, who, looking up with an expression of innocence, said, "Excuse me, Mr. Secretary, but what is a tip?"—Tid-Bits.

"Come on, the skating's fine!"

Daddy's Cranium

The young hopeful of a suburban family objected strenuously to having his hair washed. He argued it was unnecessary and a great nuisance to his mother as well as himself. It was pointed out by his elders that grown-ups as well as children were subjected to the inconvenience.

"Daddy isn't," was the quick retort. "He has no hair, only head."—New York Sun.

Value Received

"Politics causes a great deal of debate," said the plain citizen.

"Of course," answered Senator Sorghum. "There has to be a certain amount of brilliant oratory so as to make the campaign contributors feel that they're getting something for their money."

Important Item

Chauffeur—Why, ma'am, the axel is sprung, the mud guards bent, and your husband's neck is broke!

Woman—(a bit interested)—And how about those brand-new lamps?

Ouch!

Pompous Man—They told me that if I didn't quit reading dime novels I wouldn't amount to anything.

Cheerful Punctürer—Well, why didn't you quit?

Going to Extremes

"Our cook is terribly temperamental."

"So's ours. We never know whether it'll be angel cake or devil's food."

War Signal

Usher at wedding, to cold, dignified lady—Are you a friend of the groom?

The Lady—Indeed, no, I am the bride's mother.

Consideration

"Has your horse a good disposition?"

"Yep," answered Farmer Corntossel. "But he wouldn't have if I worried him as much as he does me."

Hasn't Paid Yet

Neighbor—How is that new incubator doing which you bought?

Mrs. Newlyrhle—I suppose it's all right, but I'm a little worried about it. It hasn't laid a single egg yet.

Continued Story

"What did your wife say when you bayed out late the other night?"

"She hasn't finished telling it all to me yet."

So Sorry

Traffic Officer—What's the matter with you?

Driver—I'm well, thanks; but my engine's dead.

TWO CHIC APRONS IN ONE PATTERN

Pattern 9171

The young housewife who is tired of her stock of aprons will certainly perk up at the sight of the novel aprons sketched here. See the cunning halter neck which ties in the back. It's certainly a new and becoming idea in aprons. Or if you feel a little more conservative, choose the well-tailored model below. Both come in the one pattern, have bodices coming down to a flattering point below the nicely molded waistline, and chic triangular skirts, with conveniently large patch pockets. Both will give ample protection to your pretty house frocks.

Pattern 9171 may be ordered only in sizes small, medium and large. Apron A, small size, requires 1¾ yards 36 inch fabric; apron B, small size, requires 1⅝ yards 36 inch fabric.

Complete, dingrammed sew chart included.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, the STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

HOMESICK

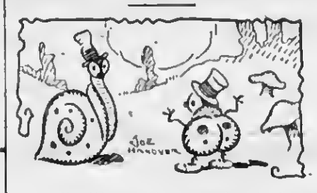
"Shut that door! Where were you brought up—in a barn?"

The man addressed complied meekly and silently. The first speaker observed that he was in tears, and going over to the man, he apologized.

"Oh, come," he said, soothingly, 'you shouldn't take it to heart because I asked if you were raised in a barn."

"That's it, that's it," sobbed the other. "I was brought up in a barn, and it makes me homesick every time I hear an ass bray."—Tit-Bits.

SARCASTIC



Snail—We snails are going to have a race for a distance of one foot.

Bug—You'll all die of old age before you finish!

Considerate Hospitality

"Is it considerate for a lady who has sent out invitations to remain absent from her own reception?"

"Perfectly proper," answered Miss Cayenne. "It prevents any embarrassment if the guests feel like criticizing the furniture and the housekeeping."

From Theory to Practice

"Weren't you once what they called a parlor socialist?"

"Yes," answered Miss Cayenne, "but food expense has driven socialists out of the parlor. They are now discussing the kitchen, and even the bath room."

THE CRIMINAL LAWYER

"If John Milton's lofty poetic mission was to 'justifie the wayes of God to men,' then the high function of the criminal lawyer is to justify the way of thieves and murders to men," says Leonard Rowe of the Cincinnati, Ohio, bar association.

"The law strives to protect the state from the criminal; the lawyer strives to protect the criminal from the state. The criminal plunders society, risking his precious neck in the process; a modicum of sportsmanship thus colors his exploits. The lawyer, lacking the criminal's boldness and enterprise, ravages society by the indirect and safer means of sharing his client's booty; in more polite parlance, charging him a fee—a fee as large as the traffic will bear.

"The business of both the criminal and his legal champion is equally anti-social and predatory. But whereas the criminal has at least sufficient honesty and humor to look realistically and with disenchanted eyes upon his vocation, the lawyer obscenely affects ethical postures and professional dignities about his. And he would be shocked if he were told that his prostituted zeal in behalf of swindlers, cut-throats and blackguards is at variance with his lofty pretentions. Even then, he would find volumes of legalistic casuistry and juristic dialectics to justify his foul traffic with society's despoilers.

"The criminal lawyer exemplifies an extreme instance of high talents perverted to base uses. His counterpart in civilized society would be an engineer who blows up his country's bridges, or a physician who inoculates whole communities with the plague."

ENCOURAGE THE TEACHER

It still remains true, as Cardinal Henry Newman said many years ago, "Many an excellent man is tempted to forget that the best offering he can make his children is himself." But it is equally true that, with the child spending the best part of his or her waking hours in the classroom, far-seeing parents will not overlook the importance of keeping the teacher inspirited by some form of recognition for her good work. Let it not be forgotten that her own morale in these days often is subjected not only to the usual worries of leading youth down the thorny path of learning, but the cross-strain of added responsibilties and senled-down salaries.—Rotarian.

COUNTERFEIT BILLS PASSED AT ONAWAY

Local Merchants Warned to Be On Lookout for Notes

Local law enforcement officers have been notified that counterfeit five-dollar bills are being passed by a party of two men working through Michigan.

Reports coming from Onaway stated that several of the bills had been passed there last week. The gang apparently are foreigners working their way north and west. Charlevoix merchants are warned to be on the lookout for the bills. They bear serial numbers D95—297993, dated 1928.

SUNDAY DINNER SUGGESTIONS
By Ann Page

This week brings another sharp rise in the prices of practically all meats, butter and eggs. The high price of eggs is probably temporary due to the heavy holiday demand. The effects of the Florida freeze will carry over for several weeks until new crops of vegetables can mature. The mid-season orange crop was badly injured so that juice oranges will not be so cheap as they were for a few weeks. Navel oranges are more plentiful. Potatoes and winter cabbage are two of the most economical vegetables available, though bulk carrots, turnips, parsnips and onions are comparatively cheap.

A variety of inexpensive salad greens is obtainable to supplement these root vegetables.

Low Cost Dinner
Pot Roast of Beef
Potatoes Carrots Onions
Bread and Butter
Chocolate Pudding
Tea or Coffee Milk

Medium Cost Dinner
Roast Pork Baked Sweet Potatoes
Buttered Onions
Bread and Butter
Fruit Salad
Tea or Coffee Milk

Very Special Dinner

Baked Ham Mashed Potatoes
Cauliflower with Parsley Butter
Grapefruit Salad French Dressing

THIS TOWN LOST ITS RAILROAD THROUGH LACK OF SUPPORT

We saw a town the other day that had lost its railroad. It had one paved highway through it. Grass was growing in the other streets. Its vacant lots were growing up in weeds. Three-fourths of its dwellings were already dilapidated. Part of its business houses had sold out to the insurance companies. The rest of them were in an uninviting condition. The people of that town had lost hope. The section around it had likewise taken on the same feeling and spirit.

This town is only ten miles from a main line of railroad and the people said they didn't need that little short line. They said they could build their town on bus and truck transportation. They are failing utterly. No town has yet built itself up with bus and truck transportation. It is inadequate and expensive.

The section traversed by the Tallulah Falls railroad must support the railway with business. Every wholesaler and every retailer who doesn't do so is striking a blow at the growth of this section. The people who have homes along the line, and the farmers who live in this territory should demand that business men and everybody within reach give their business to the Tallulah Falls railroad.

Unless this is done, this railroad will ultimately be abandoned, and this great section of Georgia literally ruined.—By not supporting and giving business to this railroad, the people will commit business and industrial suicide.—From the Clayton (Ga.) Tribune.

AT THE MOVIES

"We Live Again" Coming to Palace

"We live again," with Anna Sten and Frederic March in its leading roles, will bring to the Palace Theater screen Saturday and Sunday the first directorial effort of Rouben Mamoulian since he completed "Queen Christina" with Greta Garbo last year. Mamoulian directed the picturization of the Tolstoy novel under its new title for Samuel Goldwyn.

In its writing and in its technical production, "We Live Again" offers as much that is new and provocative as the great novel on which it is based did to the world forty years ago. Mamoulian believes that the real story of "Resurrection" has never been told in films. The riot, protest and rebellion of Tolstoy, had never found its way to the screen. Picture-goers had never seen the bright color, the vivid pageantry of its religion, the superb grandeur of the Russian countryside, the grayness and the horror of Tolstoy's prison camps, nor had they ever seen the paradise of mind and spirit and body to which he directed his weary wanderers. And that, for the first time, is what Mamoulian tried to bring to the screen.

"We Live Again" is Miss Sten's second picture in America; it follows the "Nana" in which she made her debut last year. Her co-stardom with Frederic March marks the third of a trio of pictures with the latter star to be shown throughout the country almost simultaneously. March's game part in "The Affairs of Cellini" is first, then with Norma Shearer and Charles Laughton in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," and third, "We live again" as his final work of the season.

Preston Sturges, Maxwell Anderson and Leonard Praskins write the screen play of "We Live Again" and Serge Soudeikin created the scenic backgrounds and settings. The film is released through United Artists.

BELIEVES TAX LIMIT HELPS FOREST OWNERS

Assessment Reduction Aids Private Owners to Develop Wild Lands

Michigan's 15-mill tax rate limitation has aided owners of wild land to hold it for development to the best advantage, according to the forestry department at Michigan State College.

Studies made by the college department show that the burden of taxes on forest or cutover lands has been reduced 50 per cent in some cases since the passage of the tax limitation amendment. The high taxes formerly imposed resulted in the owners permitting the lands to revert to the state through non-payment of taxes.

This reversion removed the lands from private ownership and from private development for recreational or forest purposes. In some cases, the lands were incorporated in parks or hunting areas by the state but the amount of such reverted lands was so great that the public would, in many cases, be benefited more if the property remained in the hands of the original owners.

Professor P. A. Herbert, head of the forestry department, says, "Present trends indicate that a larger share of the total national income will be absorbed by government in the future, and it is certainly beyond the realm of possibility that we will return to the horse and buggy days. There are many additional services to be rendered which will increase governmental costs.

"The only solution to the land tax problem is to improve our property tax administration to remove discrimination against forest property, to increase governmental efficiency by a reorganization of our local and state government, to broaden the tax base to reach incomes and intangibles, and to increase inheritance and luxury sales taxes."

RAMBLER ON ISLAND ROUTE FOR MAROLD II

Bud Hammond to Start Airplane When Navigation Closes

The freighter Rambler, operated by Miller & Allers, has taken over the Charlevoix-Beaver Island mail run since the Marold II discontinued service and went into winter quarters here.

The Rambler took a large cargo of freight, mail and passengers to St. James on Sunday after being held in port several days by heavy weather.

The boat will continue on the run as long as conditions permit, it is understood, after which Bud Hammond, recently awarded a contract for airplane service to the island during the winter, will take over the route until spring.

1935 WHEAT CROP TO BE LESS THAN IN 1933

The U. S. Department of Agriculture estimates the Michigan winter wheat acreage sown this fall for harvest in 1935 aggregates 808,000 acres or a decrease of two per cent from 1933. The condition of the crop is indicated 89 per cent normal. Rye acreage is estimated up 20 per cent, or 265,000 acres sown this fall. The department reported the 1934 pig crop for Michigan at 714,000 head or a decrease of nearly one-third from 1933.

Hemp Is No Longer Chief of Rope-Making Materials

Product of Philippines Is Now Mainly Used.

Washington.—Important adjuncts of the day-to-day round of modern civilization are the various fibers of the world used in making rope, according to the National Geographic society.

"Whether you are a schoolgirl, skipping rope, a cowboy, lassoing cattle, a painter, standing on a scaffolding, a motorist, whose car is being towed, a housewife, hanging a clothesline, or a yachtsman, resting a mainsail, you are dependent on rope for the accomplishment of some daily task.

"Once 'rope' and 'hemp' were synonymous, but today very little rope is made of hemp. Abaca, a fiber grown in the Philippines, has all but shouldered hemp out of the rope industry. But because of old traditions in rope making, and an early error, abaca is spoken of in the cordage trade as 'Manila hemp.'

First Used in China.

"If the thread of the story of rope—and first hemp—is traced back far enough, it will lead to the court of Shen Nung, emperor of China 2,700 years before Christ. He taught his subjects to grow 'ma' (hemp), a plant of both male and female forms, used for making hempen cloth. In the Eighth century India knew the hemp plant principally as a source of drugs. Neither the Hebrews nor the Egyptians were familiar with it; but during medieval times it was found in northern Africa. Migrant civilizations introduced hemp into Europe about 1500 B. C., but no commercial importance was attached to the European plants until the French imported Chinese hemp centuries later. Italy turned its attention to hemp growing, and today the highest-priced hemp in the markets of either Europe or America is grown there. South America received its first plants from Spain.

"New England and Virginia cultivated hemp in early Colonial days. The southern crop flourished and, in 1802, the blue grass region of Kentucky supported two extensive ropewalks (factories for making rope). During the Nineteenth century, Kentucky led the United States in the production of hemp.

"By 1850 England was selling a better rope for marine purposes than could be made in the United States. American manufacturers began to take greater interest in the 'hemp of Manila' used by the British. That Philippine product abaca, it was found, is derived from a plant of the banana family. It was grown a considerable distance from Manila, but was taken there for export. American cordage makers were adaptable enough to begin importing the new fiber, and soon American made abaca rope took its place among the best rope in the world. True hemp—the kind that had been grown in Kentucky—then found its greatest level of usefulness in commercial twines.

Jute Also Ousts Hemp.

"Although the rugged, salt-water-resisting abaca fiber proved to be the best for making rope, it was not the most serious competitor of true hemp. Jute, India's contribution to the world's fibers has completely ousted hemp from many of its former uses. It is the cheapest and most easily spun of any of the soft fibers and is woven into sacks for coffee, sugar and grain, and covering for cotton bales and packages of merchandise in transit. Weaker and less durable than any of the important textile fibers, it is less satisfactory than hemp for twine, carpet warp, or furniture webbing.

"Cotton, as well as jute, has elbowed hemp products from the market. As in the case of jute, however, cotton is neither so strong nor so durable as hemp twine. Nevertheless, twine-making by cotton mills is an important secondary industry, the value of which is written in millions of dollars each year.

"Any geographic consideration of rope must not overlook sisal and henequin. They are obtained from the leaves of two closely related but distinct plant species originating in the Yucatan peninsula, over a half-million acres in Mexico, and other countries of the peninsula, are planted with henequin, but sisal is cultivated there today only to a limited extent. The great sisal-producing regions are Netherland India and British East Africa. Henequin and sisal are used in the manufacture of binder twine, other hard fiber twines, and ropes of small diameter."

Smartly Veiled Midwinter Brides

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

AS FAR as being smartly, charmingly and distinctively veiled, the outlook for midwinter brides to-be was never more propitious. And why? Because more and more designers are specializing in wedding veil-craft. Wherefore it is the good fortune of the modern bride to have had made available to her an array of wedding veils and bridal party finery the likes of which never could have been evolved by other than master artists.

The reaction to this spectacular gesture on the part of designers to create necessary ensembles for bride and bridesmaids which omit no detail of beauty and finesse is that the custom is growing among those who are planning a wedding cortege which shall be a "perfect picture" to patronize specialty shops that carry these lovely ensembles rather than to rely on the services of the novice or the kindly endeavors of home talent.

An outstanding choice among fashionable brides this season is the little closefitting cap made either of exquisite lace or all of tulle which features the new and extremely becoming Joan Crawford eyebrow line. See the bride seated to the left in the picture. She is wearing a charming cap of this description. In this instance the cap is made entirely of tulle with wee ruches of self-tulle for trimming. The absence of lace on the headpiece makes the beauty of the lace sleeve all the more apparent, which is a stroke of absolute genius on the part of the designer.

The stately bride centered in the picture is also wearing one of the voguish eyebrow-line caps. This one is fashioned of a treasured bit of lace instead of tulle. Look close and you will see medallions of the lace scattered here and there on the long veil. The particular thing to call attention to is that the longer part of this veil is detachable. This is for the convenience of the bride when she mingles with her friends after the ceremony. After the long trailing veil is removed, the shorter veil is thrown back from the face, forming a popular cape fashion enveloping the shoulders. The gown is of lusterless heavy white satin.

For the youthful bride could anything be lovelier than a quaint little Dutch bonnet effect as shown to the right in the group? The veil is lace-bordered in harmony with the picturesque lace flanges which fold back on the bonnet away from the face. Her girlish frock is of tree-bark white crepe.

In this story of wedding veils for the midwinter bride we have saved the biggest thrill to the last—a vision of ice-blue tulle over satin in the same blue. The veil is finger-tip length falling from a cunning bonnetlike headpiece which has a flaring cuff brim. The entire ensemble is elaborated with wee rose plaitings of the tulle making it very flattery and pretty, but here's the big sensation—the announcer at the style showing tells the spellbound audience that this ensemble is designed for the young divorcee who is to wed again. Thus does fashion indeed go modern! The same lovely ensemble follows in the procession repeated in blush pink for the young widow who re-weds. We might add that the designer tells us that in Mexico the short veil for a second plunge into matrimony has been in vogue for some time.

SCARS LEFT BY COMET

In a joint paper Dr. F. A. Mellon and Dr. William Schriever of the University of Oklahoma, reported to to the American Association for the Advancement of Science in convention at Atlantic City their discovery that a giant comet apparently hit the earth in what is now South Carolina a million years or more ago.

Scars of this meeting between the earth and a comet about 400 miles in diameter were first observed on an airplane mosaic map made by Doctor Mellon in 1930. The two scientists have since recorded more than 1,500 of these scars, which are elliptical craters, formed in the earth in that portion of South Carolina forming the coastal plain bounded on the south by the Savannah river and on the north by Cape Lookout.

While some of the craters are two miles long, they all average more than half a mile. The Oklahomans claim they were unmistakably made by meteors, a whole flock of meteors such as only a comet's head could carry.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Secret Service Asks for Additional Men

Growth of Counterfeiting Is Swamping Department.

Washington.—Increase in the United States secret service force to combat a wave of counterfeiting may be sought in the next session of congress.

The present force of only 172 secret service men, whose principal duty is to curb counterfeiting, has found it difficult to cope with the rising flood of spurious coins and bills. The fake money is being pushed into circulation by criminals finding other avenues of crime closing.

Congress has recently ignored treasury requests for a larger secret service, but is expected to be more receptive this year in view of secret service figures showing the counterfeiting rise.

Counterfeiting has not reached alarming proportions, but treasury officials are anxious to hold it down to the smallest possible figure. In the peak year of counterfeiting ending June 30, 1933, less than a million dollars in spurious money was picked up.

Year ending June 30	Counterfeits seized	Arrests made
1930	$509,828	686
1931	891,958	978
1932	840,638	1,583
1933	921,499	2,569

The figures indicated both increased activity by the secret service and increased counterfeiting. Most arrests have resulted in convictions. More than half of the counterfeit money is seized before it gets to the public.

Secret service agents claim prohibition repeal has increased manufacture of spurious money. Many bootleggers have turned to this business.

Concentration of counterfeiting activities in small coins has been noted recently.

Thousands of spurious nickels were picked up recently in New York. Counterfeit quarters and half dollars have appeared in several eastern cities.

One curious development has been seizure of spurious half dollars actually worth more in silver than the real coins. Sterling silver, cheap and a better grade than used in coins, has been used for these counterfeits.

Triplets and Two Sets of Twins in One Family

Monroeville, Ohio.—As a mother, Mrs. Edith Stewart, thirty-nine, believes she is entitled to some sort of national honors. She has been the mother of twins, triplets and a second set of twins in succession. All are living. Besides the multiple children, she has four others.

The "duplicates" are: Floeta, Forest Leo and Faybelle, triplets, now three; the first set of twins—Allene and Eugene, five; and the second set of twins—Lauis James and Lois May, just one year old.

An Initialed Turtle Is Found After 74 Years

Pittsburgh.—Seventy-four years ago Alex McNall, then ten, was helping his brother Joseph cut wheat on the farm near McDonna, Washington county.

While working the two boys came upon a turtle. Alex picked it up and carved his initials in the hard shell with his jackknife.

Recently Alex, now eighty-four, came upon the turtle as he walked about his home. The turtle was the same one he found in his boyhood. The initials still are discernible.

Expert Says Canadian Minerals Are Untouched

Edmonton, Alta.—Development of Canada's mineral resources in the Far North is just beginning, in the opinion of John A. McDougall, official administrator for the Northwest territories, retired after twenty-seven years.

McDougall said two important gold discoveries—one at Athabasca and the other on Yellowknife river, near Great Slave lake—should bring hundreds more prospectors next year.

Flies Homemade Plane on Tiny Supply of Gas

Philadelphia.—A miniature plane that carries one and one-third ounces of gasoline in its tiny tank was built and flown successfully here by Paul Kurnow, eighteen years old, during his spare time.

The plane has a 6-foot 4-inch wing spread and is powered by a motor generating one-fifth horse power.

Madras Candidates Leave Fate to Gods

Madras.—To avoid the trouble and expense of a local municipal council election, candidates at Kumbakonam let their gods select who should serve. They gathered at the temple and cast lots before the deities. As a result, twenty-one of thirty-two members were returned unopposed.

Other voters wished to choose candidates by ballot, but could do nothing as the temple procedure was declared to be a "clear expression of the divine will."

Devotion of Man and Dog Ruled Superior to Law

New York.—The age-old devotion existing between man and dog was placed higher than law in a Supreme court decision uniting a faithful wolfhound with his master.

A receiver sought to collect $30,219 from George de Mazuroff, art dealer, to satisfy a judgment. "Ozzy," the wolfhound, was listed for seizure with numerous paintings, antiques and objects of art.

De Mazuroff appealed to the court.

"I am a bachelor, living alone," he said. "The dog has been my constant companion for nine years and has shared my prosperity and adversity with me. An attempt is made to take my faithful pet away from me."

Justice Edward J. McGoldrick said the receiver would take possession of all De Mazuroff's belongings except the dog.

"The old dog has no value in the market," the justice ruled. "It is an Alan, and that breed is known as a one-man dog. There are many well-authenticated stories of their voluntary starvation on the master's grave."

Uses Alarm Clock to Save Fines for Parking

Boston.—Boston has a new "no-fix" parking law. Under it the motorist who misparks his car automatically pays a $3 fine. But Saul Curtis has found a way to beat the law. Here's how:

Outside his radio school a car may be legally parked for one hour at a time. When his car has been parked 50 minutes an alarm clock rings and Sam moves the machine to a new location nearby, where it may legally remain for another hour.

Indians Prove Selves Champion Potato Pickers

Augusta, Maine.—Although the Indians are reputed to have sold their birthright for jugs of "firewater," and ended up by playing "pro" football, there is still one job at which the red man can take on all comers. Members of the Tobique tribe from Canada are the pick of the Aroostook potato pickers. The record for fast picking, held by one of the Indians, is 168 barrels a day. The picker received $3.40, plus meals.

GOLD JEWELRY

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Yes, indeed, we agree with you the twisted gold chain necklace and bracelets which ride stylishly belted young woman is wearing, is perfectly stunning—enough to excite to envy. It is quite the proper thing to wear massive gold jewelry this season and the shops are showing the most fascinating array of clips and bracelets and pins and necklaces and novel ornaments in gold that fancy can picture. It is a master stroke to wear this gold costume jewelry with classically simple frocks. The sophisticated and severe black cloaky dress here pictured is all that it should be to wear with gold jewelry.

Blouses for Morning

For morning wear ruffles appear in blouses of brightly colored wool generally no longer than the hip-bones. Burnt orange tunics are worn with brown tweed suits and green with gray.

RAGE FOR METAL IS SPREADING RAPIDLY

Girls as well as skyscrapers are chromium trimmed this season, and the rage for metal is growing by leaps and bounds.

It's true that a glint of shining metal cloth dresses up any costume no end, and so we see neckerchiefs and collars and cuffs presented in sparkling gold and silver lames and, for more formal occasion, even in sequins.

A gold cloth turban with a matching scarf, for instance, makes the most striking complement to one of the slithery new black dinner gowns, adding festivity to the picture.

Or you may wear a bandanna of striped or checked silver lame with your most severe suit, and enjoy the touch of gay frivolity.

There are Peter Pan collars and cuffs in shining metal fabrics and brocades, jabots of silver and gold ribbon, belts of seemingly precious metals, all of which brighten up the winter scene.

Popularity of Feathers for Coiffures Spreading

For years feathers have adorned the heads of women when they were presented at the Court of St. James. This season feathers are being tucked into the coiffures of social leaders at other than court affairs.

At a recent formal function three fashionably attired guests wore green feathers. One attracted admiring glances as she held the center of an animated group. Her white gown of deceptive simplicity was accompanied by green satin shoulder length gloves, emerald green slippers and then, for contrast, her jeweled cigarette holder was a brilliant lacquer red.

New Handbag

There is a new handbag which is shaped like a case for field-glasses. It has a shorter strap than the field-glass case, but this permits it to be carried more easily in the hand.

THERE IS NO MAGIC WAND

A friend from a small Michigan city tells us of the disillusionment that awaits a number of elderly people in the town who really expect soon to be getting $200 a month from the Townsend plan which promises that amount of money each month, on condition that it be spent at once.

In spite of all that people can tell them, some of these men and women are really counting on getting that pension.

How tragic this all is! How cruel it is!

There is going to be no miracle in getting us out of the dark days in which we have been living. Much as we need social security for old age, it is going to be very slow in coming. Come it will, through the good judgmen of our leaders, but not through any such visionary schemes as the Townsend plan of California.—Northville Record.

RURAL REHABILITATION

As the result of the rural rehabilitation movement started by President Roosevelt last March, administration of relief to the needy in rural sections has assumed an entirely different form from that in which it appeared a few months back. In spite of its long and cumbersome name this new method of relief is simple and does away with the chief evils attending the direct relief dole. Instead of undermining the morale of the destitute and reducing them to a permanently unproductive class, as is often the case with the dole, this system puts them back in the class with the producers, and gives them the self-reliance that comes only with self-sufficiency. Since the rehabilitation program started 80,000 families have been taken from the relief rolls and indications are that the next six months will see that number doubled.

There is so much difference between this rehabilitation and direct relief that there is no basis for comparison except that they both serve the same immediate end. Direct contributions of money serve to feed and clothe those who would otherwise starve, but after this money is used both the donor and the donee are back in the same place from which they started. The recipient of the aid is no more able to support himself and his family than he was in the beginning—in fact, he is less able. Under the rehabilitation plan, however, the relief funds not only provide the needy with the necessary food and clothing but stimulate their lagging initiative and put them in a position where they can lift part or all of the burden of their support from the shoulders of the government.

Relief administrators say that it is not only the most effective, but also the cheapest form of relief yet tried. When families are selected for rehabilitation they are set up on small pieces of ground sufficient in size and fertility to furnish them with the necessities of life, provided they are willing to work. In addition to the necessary food, clothing and shelter the FERA provides them with those tools and farming implements necessary for the work they will have to do. They are given a horse, a cow and perhaps some chickens. Their first year's seed is furnished and the entire cost is considered a loan and can be paid back either in cash or by working on relief projects. It doesn't take the people so aided long to regain confidence in their ability to live by their own work.—Pathfinder.

THE FARM CENSUS

The most complete farm census ever to be undertaken by the national government, will be conducted between the second and 31st of January, 1935, when every farm and ranch in the United States will be visited by one of the 25,000 enumerators. Each farmer will be asked 100 questions and upon the accuracy of the answers to these questions will depend the value of the census to the government and the benefits the farming population will ultimately derive from it. Some reluctance may be displayed in replying to questioners, but should be remembered it is not the intention of the government to pry into private affairs, simply seeking factual information that will be invaluable in the work of adjusting the farm situation. Their purpose is not to seek information about any one person or family but about the agricultural population as a whole. It is suggested that farmers obtain sample copies of the questions before the enumeration begins so they will be better prepared to answer accurately and promptly. For a copy write the Census Bureau at Washington.

CHARITY TOWARDS CHARITY

These times are much like the war days. In times of war, the first objective is to win. Economy comes later.

Relief is a question of necessity. If people need food, fuel or clothing, they need it immediately. Later might be too late.

Acting under the lash of necessity, many an error is made. Many who need help do not get all that they need. Others get more than their share. The nature of charity is such that error is the rule rather than the exception.

The method in which charity is handled is subject to the greatest criticisms. So is human judgment where it must display itself in making close and uncertain decisions. No one can foretell the aftermath.

In the meantime it is real charity to give those who dispense charity the benefit of the doubt.—Grand Rapids (Minn.) Herald.

BOOKS HELP REDUCE LOSSES OF DAIRYMEN

Fits Rations to Production and Helps Detect Boarder Cows

Michigan dairymen have found that herd record books have helped them to cut their losses by reducing the rations of low profit cows, by hastening the detection and sale of low producers, and by furnishing sales arguments to help the sales of bulls from the herds, according to the dairy department at Michigan State College.

Members of herd improvement associations sold 215 boarder cows out of herds totaling 10,000 animals in the last month for which records are available. This is a faster rate of culling than has been customary in the past and has been caused by the relatively high price of feeds. Members also sold 18 bulls during the month. These animals go out as herd sires and are either mature animals whose value has been proved or calves from high producing dams.

Increasing feed costs raised the expense of producing 100 pounds of milk 30 cents during the month. Many farmers were already losing money on their herds, and, now, only the best cows are showing a profit on production.

Ninety per cent of the herds for which records are available were being fed grain and 70 per cent received silage or its equivalent in beet tops. Legume hay was included in the roughage of 67 per cent of the herds but the other 27 per cent were being carried on corn fodder or corn stover.

The owners of these herds are wide awake dairymen who are using every effort to maintain their herds through this period in the hope that shifting price ratios will make their business more profitable in the future.

Among the Bible citations is this passage (John 1:1,3): "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. All things were made by him; and without him was not anything made that was made."

Correlative passages to be read from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, include the following (p. 275): "The starting-point of divine Science is that God, Spirit, is All-in-all, and that there is no other might nor Mind,—that God is Love, and therefore He is divine Principle. To grasp the reality and order of being in its Science, you must begin by reckoning God as the divine Principle of all that really is."

The choir rendered musical numbers of old-time melodies.

Readings by Mrs. Dowd, Mrs. Minar, Rose Dodd and Ellen Copeland were received enthusiastically.

An unusual feature of the evening was the preparing and serving of refreshments by the men of the church. This came as a happy surprise to the ladies.

A very helpful devotional meeting closed the services for the year of 1934. As a token of appreciation for the blessings received the past year, a free-will offering was made to the church.

We are indeed grateful as a church for the blessings of the year, both financial and spiritual. We desire to be of greater service to our city and community during the year of 1935.

FITZGERALD BECOMES GOVERNOR

INAUGURATED WITH OTHER OFFICERS TUESDAY

Recount Fuss Still Wide Open With Atwood and Wilson Claiming Secretary's Office

Under the menacing threat of the armed forces of the state police, Orville E. Atwood, the Republican from Fremont, holds possession of the office of secretary of state.

He took the oath of office Tuesday despite the fact that a Democratic operated legislature, with only hours to go before its tenure of office expired, had agreed to seat Major General Guy M. Wilson, of Flint, Democrat, as the successful candidate.

The legislative action was taken after the report of the special investigation committee had indicated that Wilson was elected due to fraud and error committed in the count of November election ballots.

Although Atwood was sworn into office with the remainder of the officers elected last fall, Democrats made a strenuous effort to keep their candidate in the running.

While Atwood held possession of the "front office" of the department, Wilson adherents confiscated a desk and set it up in the basement of the Capitol, claiming that it was the office of the duly elected secretary of state.

Elsewhere all was calm with the exception of the spirit of pageantry with which the Republicans enter into their return to power.

The inauguration of Fitzgerald was the excuse for more fanfare than the Capitol has experienced since Governor Wilbur M. Brucker was inducted into office 4 years ago.

Tuesday's ceremony was heralded with a parade in which friends of the governor and high state officials marched through Lansing and up to the Capitol. There, in a veritable flower garden, the new governor took the oath of office before an assembly which taxed to capacity the seating space of the house of representatives.

At his side was Orville E. Atwood, storm center of a bitter battle over the office of secretary of state; Prosecutor Harry S. Toy of Wayne county whose election as attorney general had also been challenge, and State Treasurer Theodore I. Fry.

Fitzgerald promised in his inaugural address that he would seek the united support of the Democrat and Republican blocs in the house of representatives, and the Democratic majority in the state administrative board.

"If we are to do our duty to the people of the state of Michigan," he said, "we must consider the matters of state which are before us in a thorough-going manner and eliminate petty party bickering."

The state's fifty-eighth legislature convened in Lansing Wednesday afternoon with the selection of a speaker of the house of representatives and the remainder of the chamber's personnel in doubt.

The house convenes with only 47 Republican members, one of whom will be absent because of illness, while the Democrats will have 49 members, probably all present in their seats.

Before the night it was thought probable that several seats now claimed by the Republicans but contested by Democrats will be turned into the Democratic house by the Democrats. The constitution provides that each house shall be the sole judge of its own membership and with a Democratic majority no Republican victories are to be anticipated.

Apparently confident that he will remain in office as secretary of state, Atwood announced the appointment of Lee C. Richardson as manager of his Detroit office and Fred Ehrmann as head of the motor vehicle division.

One of the first pronouncements of Governor Fitzgerald as the state's chief executive was that of the appointment of former Representative Joseph C. Armstrong, of Detroit, as commissioner of pardons and paroles.

IS YOUR CHILD BIG ENOUGH FOR HIS AGE?

Checking Up on Health May Uncover Fault in Time to Correct

Only by keeping watch over his physical and mental abilities can one know that a child is big enough and strong enough for his age.

Through medical examinations by your family physician and at clinics, facts that should be obvious but frequently are not, come out as results of checking up on the preschool child's condition. Thus, this close check-up will enable us to curb the incidence of disease and defects in the younger age groups and correct defects early in life.

Throat, 122; teeth, 94; glands, 70; nutrition, 51; ears, 33; eyes, 21; skin and scalp, 19; posture, 12; heart, 10; orthopedic, 10; lungs, 10; nasal passages, 9; nervous symptoms, 9; speech, 7; thyroid, 5. Total: 481.

From the above figures, we can readily see where periodic examinations act as a safeguard against future trouble and as a guide in the child's daily management. Evidence may show that he is getting too much or too little food, that his elimination is not what it should be, or that he needs more of these things, particularly necessary to the healthy child, such as orange juice or cod liver oil.

Increase in weight is not all there is to good nutrition. Quality of tissue is of more importance than quantity. From 2 to 5 years the child is growing rapidly. He is gaining about five pounds a year in weight and about 1½ inches in height. The growing child should receive sufficient amounts of milk, eggs, cereals, vegetables and fruits, for these meet his food requirements. Since the foods supply him with material for growth and also for maintenance to keep him warm in order to give him energy for activity and proper functioning of his body, the feeding and diet of a young child is a serious business.

Among the numerous defects observed in preschool children is that of crossed eyes. The child should be taken to a competent physician and treatment for cross eye should be begun as soon as it is recognized. Cross eye does not improve of itself as the child grows older, the tendency is for the condition to become worse. In many cases, the eye may be straightened later, but its power of sight is gravely impaired.

Another defect less frequent found but one so vitally important to human life is the heart. The most important type of heart disease in children, because it is by far the most common and crippling kind, is rheumatic heart disease, which follows rheumatic fever, St. Vitus dance and sometimes tonsilitis, or other less definite rheumatic infections. Proper care and rest are necessary in remedying this serious defect.

Therefore, the preschool child is greatly benefited by his medical examination in which is revealed the true picture of his physical make-up, which should be the basis for advice as to what to do to assure a better chance for health and well being. If you have any question or wish any advice as to the health of your child, your county nurse, Miss Winnifred Golley, will be glad to aid you or you may bring him to the preschool clinic conducted nearest your community for a check-up.

FUNDS APPROPRIATED FOR HIGHWAY UPKEEP

Nearly Five Million Authorized for the Coming Year

The state administrative board Friday authorized expenditure of $1,819,161 for the maintenance of trunk line highways during 1935. The board also allocated $58,928 for the operation of bridges on state roads and $56,072 for their maintenance.

It was reported at the meeting that the state will salvage properties at the Chelsea cement plant aggregating $80,000 in the next few weeks. The board previously turned down bids of $40,000 for the plant and decided to conduct its own dismantling operations.

The board allowed claims of $2,028 as part of the state's $7,000 emergency appropriation for aid of Kerns Hotel victims who were members of the state legislature.

THE NEW FORD V-8 FOR 1935

The New Ford V-8 for 1935 is the biggest and roomiest Ford car ever built. It is a strikingly handsome car, with modern lines and new, luxurious appointments.

But most important of all it is especially designed to give you smooth, easy riding over all kinds of roads—"a front-seat ride for back-seat riders."

This ease of riding is achieved by the use of three basic principles never before combined in a low-price car.

1. Correct distribution of car weight by moving engine and body forward eight and a half inches.

2. New location of seats by which the rear seat is moved forward, toward the center of the car—away from the rear axle and away from the bumps.

3. New spring suspension which permits the use of longer, more flexible springs and increases the springbase to 123 inches.

The result is Center-Poise—which not only gives you a new riding comfort but adds to the stability of the car and its ease of handling. You can take curves with greater safety.

There are many new features in the Ford V-8 for 1935 which make the car still easier to drive. New brakes give more power for stopping quickly with far less foot pressure on the pedal.

A new type of easy-pressure clutch employs centrifugal force to increase efficiency at higher speeds. New steering mechanism makes the car still easier to handle. New, wider, roomier seats.

The New Ford V-8 for 1935 retains the V-8 engine which has demonstrated its dependability and economy in the service of more than a million owners. There are refinements, but no change in basic design. You buy premium performance when you buy this Ford V-8—full 85 horsepower and capable of 80 miles an hour. All Ford V-8 cars for 1935 come equipped with Safety Glass throughout at no additional cost.

NEW 1935 FORD V-8 TRUCKS AND COMMERCIAL CARS ARE NOW ON DISPLAY

NEW FORDS SHOWN IN CHARLEVOIX SATURDAY

1935 Models Have New Body Designs and Other Improvements

The first showing of the new 1935 Ford car was made Saturday in Charlevoix by the local branch of the Northern Auto Company.

Most striking feature of the new car is body lines which are distinctively modern and a definite departure from any previous Ford design.

The new car also embodies a combination of major engineering developments aimed at increasing riding comfort—which has been called the "center-poise" ride.

Numerous improvements in chassis design to provide increased ease of control also are included. Two important improvements have been made in the Ford V-8 engine.

In addition Ford has developed a new type of body—the touring sedan, with unusually sleek lines and embodying a fitted rear trunk compartment integral with the body.

Safety glass is standard equipment not only in windshields, but also in all doors and windows in all body types.

The new car marks the present culmination of developments begun by Ford three years ago at the time of the announcement of the V-8 engine. In the three years intervening, Ford has been engaged in the development of a combination of engineering improvements aimed at providing a degree of riding comfort and ease of control comparable with the performance of the engine itself. The new body designs are a further evidence of the progress of Ford engineering.

FITZGERALD REVEALS PROGRAM

SEEKS SWEEPING LEGISLATIVE CHANGES

Comprehensive Message to Legislature Outlines Many Reforms in State Government

A program of wide-sweeping revision of Michigan's governmental structure aimed to centralize the responsibility for state administration in the hands of the chief executive was presented to the legislature last Wednesday by Gov. Frank D. Fitzgerald.

Although he avoided specific request for a wholesale grant of such new powers the individual points of his program lend toward that result; the present method of administering state affairs is a hodge-podge of antiquity, he said.

He asked for legislation abolishing the state administrative board which he said cannot justify its existence despite the fact it has assumed powers properly belonging to the legislature and the governor.

He recommended that the constitution be amended to limit the election of state officers to the governor and lieutenant governor, all department heads, with the possible exception of the auditor general, being appointed by and responsible to the governor.

"The people should elect the fewest possible officials," he said, "clothe them with sufficient authority and hold them to the strictest accountability."

He recommended that the office of state highway commissioner, an elective one, be abolished and that the department be placed in control of a seven-man commission named by the governor to "staggered" terms of office.

He said that present methods of handling finances should be completely overhauled and that the state should keep its books so that not only state officials, but the people themselves can understand them.

The program he offered was one of the most comprehensive any legislature has been asked to consider, but Fitzgerald said that it should be carried to completion within three months.

"A cloud of uncertainty hangs over the heads of our people as long as a legislative body remalas in session whether it be the legislature or congress," he warned.

He said that no new sources of revenue should he tapped to operate the state and that, on the other hand, the sales tax act should be amended to exempt foodstuffs; economies and present revenues, he added, should make it possible for the state to contribute $11,000,000 more toward the support of primary schools than it did last year.

The entire system of prison management and the granting of pardons and paroles should be revamped to protect the public interests and those of the first offender, the governor advised.

He said that the old age pension should be continued, but that necessary financing should come from other sources than the $2 head tax which he asked be repealed. The subject of unemployment insurance should be given consideration, he added.

The weight of Fitzgerald's criticism of the present gavernmental set-up was levelled at the state administrative board which remains in Democratic control despite the Re-

KIPMEN WIN FIRST CONFERENCE GAME

DEFEAT BOYNE CITY BY 20 TO 9 COUNT

Completely Out-Class 1934 Champs; Play at Harbor Springs Friday; Here Following Week

Charlevoix made an impressive entry into Tip of Michigan conference basketball competition last Saturday night. They scored a decisive 20 to 9 victory over Boyne City, last year's conference, district and regional champs, and runners-up for the state class C crown.

The Kipmen, meeting their first conference opponent of the season, buried the Brotherton clan in the first half, scoring 17 points to 4 for the losers. Boyne never registered a goal during the first two periods, tallying their four points from the foul line.

Charlevoix was out-scored 5 points to 3 as they coasted along protecting their early lead in the last half. Boyne connected with one goal and registered three times on free throws to complete their scoring.

The local reserves opened the successful evening for Charlevoix by copping the preliminary from the Boyne seconds by a 20 to 19 count in a close and interesting eantest which provided the best entertainment of the double bill.

The Kipmen play away from home again this week, engaging in their second conference tilt at Harbor Springs. A return game with Traverse City's class B Trojans will provide the next home contest on Friday evening, January 18th. Charlevoix has scored one win over the Trojans, who share the Big Six conference lead with Petoskey at the present time.

POSTOFFICE BUSINESS ON INCREASE

1934 GROSS RECEIPTS GREATER THAN IN 1933

Increase Indication of Big Improvement in Business of This City During Past Year

Charlevoix's postoffice, which is this, as well as aay other city's best indicator of business pulse, showed a gain in gross business during 1934 over the previous year.

This increase, in keeping with the general upturn in business, is shown by data made availnble hy Postmaster Clarence B. Meggison, who reports gross receipts of $17,254.11 during 1934 as compared with $15,217.38 in 1933, a gain of $2,036.73.

Gross receipts as taken in a postoffice are only the sales of stamps, postal cards, envelopes, paper wrappers and box rents. In the money order department, which is separate from the postal business, 20,725 orders amounting to $202,386.88 were issued with fees for such service totaling $1,968.31. The registering of letters during the past year also showed a substantial increase over 1933.

It will be of interest to the public to know that the city delivery is handled by three postmen who cover about 40 miles per day, making 1,400 stops. The three rural carriers operating from the Charlevoix postoffice cover 113 miles each day and make 450 stops. The city delivery service is augmented hy additional men during the busy summer months.

It is interesting to note that an approximate average of 5,000 pieces of mail of all classes is distributed daily through the local postoffice.

RAILROAD RECEIVERSHIP IS CONCLUDED

Bid of Boyne City Men Is Accepted in Circuit Court

The Boyne City, Gaylord & Alpena Railway Co. receivership was settled in circuit court here last Saturday by Judge Parm C. Gilbert.

The $100 bid of Earl Strangstead and Henry Lee, Boyne City, was accepted. Higher bids were received, but the successful bidders guaranteed outstanding obligations of approximately $1,502,000, including bonds, interest, taxes and other indebtedness. It is understood bonds of $721,000 will be bought in at 2½ per cent.

The B. C. G. & A., now operating between Boyne City and Boyne Falls, formerly extended across upper Michigan to Alpena. It was built by the W. H White interests to serve their lumber mills at Boyne City. Early plans called for track to Charlevoix, but this section was never completed.

Reports of the receiver showed the present short spur, connecting with the Pennsylvania at Boyne Falls, is being operated at a profit.

The yuletide season with its programs in the churches has passed by for nnother year. And we now enter into the new year with brighter prospects nnd hopes. But the return of prosperity, we believe, is dependent upon the return to a deep spiritual life on the part of Americn. That is the spirit with which we work at South Barnnrd. Our program for the year 1935 is based upon that.

What a beautiful day last Sunday turned out to be. The evidence of good weather was also seen in the nttendance at the "Little White Church on the Hill." A large number of young and old came out to worship, but the attendance would have been still larger had the roads been plowed out, so that cars could have gotten through. We trust that the highway department will attend to that matter the rest of the winter.

SUNDAY DINNER SUGGESTIONS
By Ann Page

Prices on butter, eggs and meat have continued to rise with no prospect of lowering with the probable exception of eggs, which should be plentiful within two to three weeks.

Many vegetables are cheap or moderately priced, particularly white potatoes and other underground vegetables. Several varieties of cabbage, cauliflower, broccoli, iceberg, Boston and romaine lettuce, celery and various greens help to cover up the scarcity and high prices of string benns and spinach.

Grapefruit are plentiful and cheap having largely escaped cold damage. Large size eating apples predominate at present. Banana prices change little from month to month and they together with the citrous fruits and apples are the chief winter standbys.

Here are three menus made up from seasonahle foods at different price levels:

Low Cost Dinner
Beef Liver and Bacon
Mushed Potatoes Sweet-sour Beets
Bread and Butter
Baked Cereal Custard
Tea or Coffee Milk

Medium Cost Dinner

Unemployment Insurance Much Debated Question

By WILLIAM C. UTLEY

WHAT to do with the man who wants to work, who is able to work, who needs money for himself and his family, but who simply can't find a job, is one of the most important issues facing the country today. It's no new problem. There are, even in normal times, some 2,000,000 or 3,000,000 workers who have no work; but now, with the world still in the throes of the depression, that figure has probably multiplied five times or more.

It would hardly be possible to secure employment for everyone without changing the industrial structure and the country's whole system of production. But while we are trying to alleviate the condition to the greatest possible degree, we have got to do something to relieve not the lack of work itself, but the lack of life's necessities to the families of the unemployed. "Relief," "work relief" and "made work" have been doing the job so far and have drained enormous sums from governmental treasuries.

To lighten this drain, to administer aid to the unemployed more efficiently and to make for what might be a more unified, permanent method of administration, prominent factions, led by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and Frances Perkins, secretary of labor, favor a nationally-unified system of compulsory unemployment insurance.

The plan approved by the President's economic security advisory committee recently is based upon contributions by employers through a 3-per cent pay roll tax. The employer would bear the full expense of the plan. The federal government would rebate state insurance plans, which it had approved, by paying grants to the state funds from this tax.

If this plan should be accepted by the country, jobless workers would be paid 50 per cent of their former salaries, but not less than $15, each week for 25 weeks in the year. The tax fund would pay for the first 15 weeks and as many more weeks as any particular state saw fit. Three old age pension plans were also considered.

Tried in Europe.

While new to any great extent in the United States, unemployment insurance has been tried extensively throughout Europe, with questionable success. Voluntary unemployment insurance through trade unions has been tried by Belgium, Czechoslowakia, Denmark, France, the Netherlands, Norway, Spain, Switzerland, Yugoslavia and Finland, and all but the latter still have it to some degree. Austria, Bulgaria, Germany, Great Britain, the Irish Free State, Italy, Luxemburg, Northern Ireland, Poland, Russia and Switzerland, as well as New Zealand and Queensland, Australia, have compulsory unemployment insurance.

Berne, Switzerland, started the first communal unemployment insurance fund in 1893, and in the years following, many other Swiss towns and cantons followed suit. But the real cradle of unemployment insurance was Belgium, where the City of Ghent began a voluntary plan in 1902. This plan spread rapidly throughout Belgium and adjacent territories in Europe. It was a failure, for the workers didn't seem to want it, and by 1931 less than 30 per cent of them were insured. The system was costing the government huge sums of money, about the only success within its claims being attributable to government subsidies.

Much the same situation existed with other countries who tried voluntary insurance against unemployment suffering. Czechoslovakia, with only 31 per cent of its workers insured, drained its national treasury to such an extent in aiding the relief programs that the plan, while still in use, is generally recognized as inadequate. France has some 300 voluntary systems, with only about 300,000 workers so insured; the associations, playing a minor role in relief, have constantly been in difficulties. France has another system, based upon local municipal funds assisted by federal grants; these grants have had to be increased year after year until finally they were more than double in proportion; and the lion's share of the moneys for local distribution was coming from taxpayers throughout the nation.

Found It Expensive.

The Netherlands' trade unions insured only about one-third of the workers, yet during the first half of 1932, the last period for which figures are available, the benefits cost the taxpayers 64,000,000 florins, or more than $25,000,000 at par. Norway's trade unions succeeded in insuring only 8 per cent of the total number of workers. In Switzerland, Yugoslavia and Spain, government subsidies were constantly growing in the last few years. In Finland, the voluntary insurance plan, in fact, all unemployment insurance, was abolished because of accusations of Communistic tendencies in the trade union groups.

While the chief objections that have been thrown at voluntary unemployment insurance through the trade unions are that they have not insured enough of the workers and have required governmental subsidies out of proportion to the amount of good they have accomplished, only the latter criticism has applied to compulsory insurance, economically speaking. Compulsory insurance simply hasn't been able to meet emergency situations.

Great Britain, with its Unemployment Insurance act of 1911, became the first great experimenter with compulsory unemployment insurance. At first it was limited only to a few trades, insuring only 2,250,000 workers. It required equal contributions to the fund from the employee, employer and government. To stabilize employment, employers were granted refunds as bonuses for providing steady employment. Refunds were offered to employers who had paid for long periods. Both of these amendments were soon withdrawn as having little effect and being difficult of administration.

The plan was in a few years extended to include virtually all types of workers, the only ones left out being agricultural workers and domestic servants. It worked satisfactorily in normal times, but soon came the great war. By 1916 there were 1,250,000 additional workers engaged in the manufacture of munitions. The government extended the benefits of the insurance fund to these workers, as well as to thousands of others in allied industries.

Then Came the Dole.

Two years later, with the end of the war in sight, the government was required to make some provisions for the return of several million men and women engaged on the battlefronts, making the world safe for democracy. They had to have jobs or an income when they returned home. The government, operating through the labor exchanges of the insurance system, began making "out of work" donations—the beginning of the oft-lamented "dole."

So many were still out of jobs by 1920 that unemployment insurance benefits had to be extended to more people, including agricultural and domestic workers. Continued unemployment required extensions of the time limit in the benefit payments. In March, 1921, the insurance fund was permitted to borrow up to 10,000,000 pounds from the exchequer. Although intended to be temporary, the extended benefits have been allowed ever since. And, until 1931, the insurance fund was allowed to continue its borrowing from the government. By the time a stop had finally been put to the flow of money from the treasury, the debt of the insurance fund had reached $575,000,000. In addition, local relief authorities spend about $125,00,000 a year caring for the unemployed.

Criticisms were hurled at the British government that the dole and the system of extended benefits were producing a great share of the unemployed population which preferred to remain unemployed, because it could get money without working, anyway. More than half those on the benefit rolls were single men without dependents, married men with wives working or widows without dependents. The attitude of the employer—and even of the taxpayer—in most cases is "What would we have done without it?" Meanwhile the unemployment insurance fund was the subject of so much legislation this way and that, that it had both legislators and onlookers dizzy.

Germany, after much experimenting with methods of handling unemployment relief, investigated Great Britain's unemployment insurance system and, in 1927, decided to give an experiment similar to that one a try. Benefits, derived from contributions of a similar source to those of Great Britain's scheme, were applied to virtually all types of workers, including the agricultural. But the system, like so many others, was not comprehensive enough to care for extraordinary conditions and, like so many others, became simply a matter of relief and did little or nothing to ease its own burden by creating jobs or by allowing its

The 700,000 workers out of work when the 1927 act was passed became more than 8,000,000 by February, 1932. It simply returned the heavier work of caring for the unemployed to the national and local governments. By the middle of 1929 it owed the government $65,000,000. Before another year had passed the figure had risen to $148,000,000 and all hope of payment vanished. At the end of 1930 federal subsidies and loans to the insurance fund stood at $273,800,000, which had to be taken from the pockets of the taxpayers, many of whom also paid their contributions to the insurance fund.

Worse and Worse.

Despite all these grants, there were at the end of 1931, only 1,642,000 out of 5,638,000 unemployed who were deriving regular benefits. A total of 1,911,000 were receiving no aid at all. While undoubtedly no more inopportune time for the institution of a German unemployment system could have been selected, it is certainly obvious that the plan has been a complete failure, and no better off, financially, than the British system.

Bulgaria and Austria have been more successful with compulsory unemployment insurance, although the Austrian government was forced to cancel a debt of approximately $20,000,000 owed it by the insurance fund. Italy and the Irish Free State have been the outstanding examples of the financial success of social insurance. However, Italy's insurance covers only 4,500,000 workers out of 19,000,000. For the classifications for which it is intended, it may be said that it has paid out benefits which total only 41.4 per cent of the contributions. The Irish have consistently kept contributions ahead of disbursements.

American business leaders refuse to consider that unemployment insurance is emergency legislation, and through the voice of their conference at Warm Springs, Ga., in December, they have asked that legislation on the subject be deferred until such time that they may make a comprehensive study of social insurance and determine whether or not a feasible plan may be worked out. The conference has asked that the business leaders and capital be given a chance for a year at least to see what they can do to restore normal business conditions, creating better markets and more jobs. The chairman of the Warm Springs conference, Mr. C. B. Ames, was named to head the committee to study unemployment insurance.

Married Prince Probably Like Rest of "Hubbies"

"Oh to be in her shoes for just a little while—I'd give half my life for it! To be marrying the son of the king of England! To be the sister-in-law of the prince of Wales. To have all the crowned heads of Europe at your wedding and for the rest of your life call them 'cousin.' To be 'one of the family' in little old Buckingham palace, to eat breakfast with them, and see them in negligee.

"But most important is the husband she's getting—a prince right out of a fairy tale. Young, tall and handsome enough to take your breath away, with the bluest blood in the world written all over him in manliness and charm. Just look at his picture and imagine the life-long thrill and romance of having him for a husband. What it must be like!"

Commenting on the foregoing, from a very human standpoint, a widely read contributor to these columns reflects as follows: "A young girl said that to me on the day of the marriage of the Greek Princess Marina to the duke of Kent. And doubtless thousands of other girls were saying it to themselves. Perhaps, too, a few married women who looked at the picture of the bridegroom—and felt sorry for themselves.

"What it must be like to be married to him!

"Well, with the gilded coaches back in the stables and the last royal guests gone home to ward off their own revolutions, with the bins of gold and silver wedding gifts locked up in the storeroom—in short with all the shouting over—it's probably like being married to any other man.

"By now the princess will be busy getting used to her new relations—only she'll have to pay more attention than most to her mother-in-law. It's about time, too, for her to getting down to the serious business of housekeeping—and some one said twenty servants can be twenty times the worry of one.

"But it's her man in whom we are interested—and how it must feel to be married to him, her fairy-tale prince.

"Come to think of it, most women married fairy-tale princes—and came back to earth by pretty much the same route. There's that gradual dissolving of the spell, and getting used to the particular quirks and whims of a flesh-and-blood man.

"Probably the king's son will react no differently than any well-bred young man to getting his bacon burnt or having his wife keep him waiting. Being a British prince he will doubtless restrain himself, but she will know how he feels about it, just the same.

"They'll have to talk about bills—oh, yes, fifty thousand a year is not very different from five when there are problems about the children, and why can't they go to the Mediterranean instead of the cold and wind of Scotland. Again, being a Britisher, he'll probably spare her bad temper and the scenes she might experience with the bluest blood of a country further south on the map. But there's a way of freezing that has driven more women to drink or its equivalent than the most violent rages of violent men. She's very pretty, and he'll be jealous, and, of course, women will always adore him. Uh, we don't know what form this bride's trouble will take, but they'll come along—for there is no Santa Claus for a grown-up wife, even when she marries a fairy-tale prince.

"Don't mistake our meaning. That prince looks like a darling, all right—but just how romantic it will be to be married to him depends on precisely the same breaks that fall to the lot of any girl—that is, on how much of a darling he really is; not on the fact that he is rich, tall and handsome and the brother of the prince of Wales."

Chew for Beauty, Models Advised

Rhythmic chewing, combined with exercises of the head and neck, was revealed recently at New York to 2,000 models, members of the Models' Guild, as the newest beauty formula. The advice came from a well-known specialist in response to a request from the guild for information regarding the system.

A dozen exercises are included in the complete routine. The instructions for the one illustrated: "Start with chewing gum—one or two sticks. After a few seconds, begin the exercise by tossing the head from side to side. Then open your mouth as wide as you can. Close it gradually, and all the while endeavor to chew your gum."

This exercise is designed to tone the muscles of the chin and lower jaw. Others promote a fine neckline and beautiful cheeks.

Chinese Good Wishes Conveyed by Symbols

From the earliest times, fish have played an important part in Chinese life and art, and in the Book of Odes we find constant references to them. The homonym of fish is "abundance," and it is a symbol of power and rank. They are among the charms given to keep away demons and evil spirits.

The homonym of eagle is "heroic," so that the picture of an eagle on a rock is a symbol of heroism and of dense and vigorous life. The wild goose and the duck are symbols of conjugal fidelity, and mutual assistance, so pairs of earthenware or porcelain ducks are favorite wedding presents.

A white or golden pheasant on a scroll is an allusion to a council hall in the Han Lin academy, and thus the symbol expresses the wish that the recipient may have happiness, longevity and official preferment. The crane is a bird of good augury, and only surpassed by the phoenix. It is the aerial steed of the immortals, for it was a crane which carried Emperor Wang to the celestial world, so the gift of a crane scroll signifies a wish of permanent health.

FORGOTTEN!

During every campaign since the depression began the enthusiasm of the candidate for a revised small loan law is at fever heat, but strange to say, by the time he takes his seat in legislative halls much of his former concern for his fellowman in distress seems to have evaporated. The Legislative Council made an exhaustive study of this matter, and though a partial eclipse due to executive disapproval, should be asked to lay their findings before the lawmakers.

A PRACTICAL WAY

Removing the sales tax from food, clothing and other necessities of life will lower state revenues by 10 or 12 million dollars, tax experts claim. There is also the matter of unemployment insurance, partly financed through state aid, as well as old age pension without support from the head tax. Tax exemption on homes of $3,500 and under is also proposed. It is folly to expect economy in state government to offset these differences and still maintain a balanced budget. The legislature should pave the way for a graduated income tax on all incomes in excess of $600. Starting at that figure the small wage earner is not penalized, while all others pay according to their ability to pay. No fairer tax was ever devised.

THE NEW VISION

From nature the people of the United States inherited a wealth of natural resources. Many of these we have spent recklessly because of the very immensity of them. They seemed beyond the possibility of exhaustion. The forests are one of our natural resources that we have spent with a free hand. We have not protected our inheritance, but let it fritter away before the assault of fire and waste. We are really only beginning to attain a mature vision of what this resource means to us. We are just beginning to check up the accounts of our forest inheritance and to find that we have cut seriously into our capital. You cannot always draw from a bank unless you put something in now and then. Man must give back to nature part of what he takes. He cannot reap without sowing. We must see to it that the foundation upon which Uncle Sam has builded and is building is made sure, lest the very greatness which is now the marvel of the world become his undoing.

TAX CONSCIOUS

The public has become tax conscious. (And no wonder!) Everywhere you hear demands, not only for reduction of taxes, but for measures to control the taxing machinery and to provide for a readjustment of tax burdens. The interest in tax matters now evinced by many citizens is highly commendable if it does not lead to adoption of a program or plan that has been but poorly digested and may or may not provide the needed remedy of existing evils.

The problem of taxation is an exceedingly complex one, so complex, indeed, that the average citizen has of necessity left its study and application severely alone, while he has contented himself with grumbling. Here the politician has stepped into the picture and out of the storehouse of his wisdom and his surpassing skill in spending public funds has come a system of taxation applied with amazing inequality. Stringent times and the increasing burdens on one class of property have caused the taxpayer to stop grumbling long enough to see what really is the matter—faulty distribution of the burden. He sees it but dimly as yet, but soon he will be ready to give his blessing to some plan or program which gives promise of lifting his tax load and putting it on a basis consistent with his "ability to pay."

DOWN TO WORK.

Governor Frank D. Fitzgerald's inaugural speech was easy to understand and difficult of misconstruction. It contained no ambiguous statements, no attempted flights of oratory to deceive the people, but a simple, straightforward analysis of what he hopes to accomplish during the next two years at Lansing. Hard work, plus a determination to fulfill pre-election promises, was its keynote throughout. Every working day will find him engaged in that task. And he is going to demand the same sort of service from all state employees.

Through constant application to the job in hand, maintenance of strictest economy in the administration of state affairs, is his hope of bringing relief to the overburdened taxpayers of Michigan. The governor evidenced in his initial statement a desire to go along with other servants of the public in accomplishing these desired ends. He is willing to conciliate on matters of policy whenever there is promise of producing results, but at the same time he has made it plain that "he who attempts to maneuver to obtain personal or private gain in the consideration of this program will soon find himself politically dead in the eyes of the people." Michigan voters will long applaud such a declaration of high-minded principles and ambitions.

RED WINDMILLS

We see where the boys and girls at the University of Michigan have been getting the stolid burghers of the hinterlands all hot and bothered again. We know there is a certain amount of communist and socialist propaganda floating about the campus, but we doubt if it gives promise of reaching alarming proportions. The youngsters need some vent for releasing their pent-up ideas of world reformation and perhaps this is just as good a method as any.

We noticed that when the Michigan Journalist, a publication sponsored for a number of years by the daily press of Michigan, became too socialistic in its discussion of state and national affairs it didn't take long for somebody in authority to locate for it a suitable burial spot. And it is safe to say the current discussion will end in some similar manner. We should not make the error of taking our young people too seriously. As long as the old folks back home are working feverishly to provide them with the means for human existence they are inclined to assume a worldly pose entirely foreign to their natures. But with college days behind; faced with the problem of making their way unaided in the world, they are not long in reaching the sensible decision that if they hope to share to the fullest all the benefits which a superior education has fitted them to achieve, they'd better get busy and chuck a lot of that "Citizen Trotsky" stuff into the fireplace.

A NEW YARDSTICK

The democratic administration at Washington, which has been engaged in the subtle pastime of waving aloft a national yardstick as the correct solution of our social and economic problems, indulged in much violent flapping of the donkey's ears when news of the appointment of Grover C. Dillman as state welfare director for Michigan was announced.

The first repercussion brought an excited exchange of telegrams between the boys down on the Potomac and the then governor-elect at Grand Ledge; they wanted to know to what extent their complete control of welfare relief matters in Michigan was being challenged. Washington has nothing for alarm. Mr. Fitzgerald, looking into the future, sees a not distant day when all public relief for the unfortunates will again become the duty of the individual states. He wants to be prepared for that emergency when it arrives.

Nor need any welfare recipient need have any fear of Governor Fitzgerald's control of our state welfare relief program. He has been a poor man his entire life-time, has had sympathetic touch with his friends and neighbors, which coupled with a great understanding heart assures every stricken citizen in Michigan that they will not be allowed to needlessly suffer. Also he is aware that no government can indefinitely continue a wasteful program of relief for its people. There must be ultimate retrenchment all along the line, and the first move in that direction is to see to it that every dollar of tax money appropriated for that purpose is administered with a minimum of expense. He also knows that under the personal supervision of Grover Dillman every needless item of expense, favoritism, political patronage, unnecessary administration units, will disappear. If Washington is in search of a dependable yardstick for measuring the relief burden of the nation during the next two years they can find it right here in Michigan.

The gossip is the individual who puts the "and" in scandal.

A pioneer is a fellow who can remember back when an open-face silver watch was a sign of dependability.

Resolve during 1935 not to be unduly critical of state and national leaders. When the structure of the Republic is on fire it is far better to take your place at the pumps, than to start quarreling who can best handle the hose.

JANUARY MEETING SUPERVISORS ADJOURNED

Concluded Session Tuesday Without Solving Welfare Problem

The board of supervisors concluded their January session late Tuesday afternoon and adjourned.

Officer bonds were approved, the Charlevoix County State Bank and East Jordan State Bank were approved as county depositories, and claims aggregating approximately $75 were allowed.

The welfare work relief problem, resulting from the state welfare administration's request for county participation in financing to the extent of $40,000 for 1935, remains unsolved. Officials of cities of the county were called into joint session with the board Tuesday afternoon, but nothing resulted from this meeting.

The matter now rests in the hands of a committee of three—Supervisors Stephens, Sanderson and Parker—who will attempt to find ways and means of raising the balance of the pledge requested, an amount aggregating approximately $25,500. Together with the county, the various governmental units are being depended upon to pledge all they are able.

TRUE DETECTIVE STORY

by Vance Wynn © Public Ledger

All on Account of a Bunch of Keys

WHEN the list of the victims of the Lake Shore railroad wreck, near Ashtabula, Ohio, on December 31, 1876, was published the name of John Weyler was near the head of the list.

Many of the bodies were so charred and mutilated that it was impossible to recognize them, and the identification was made through articles of clothing and jewelry found near the dead men and women.

Weyler was an old soldier who had been unable to work for some time because of physical infirmities.

His family was poor and the fact that he was unable to help them depressed him very much.

He mourned over the fact that he was a hindrance rather than a help and more than once expressed the wish that his wife and children might be rid of such a burden.

It was known that he intended going on this particular train, although his family were unaware of his destination.

A reputable Rochester physician testified that he had met Weyler on the train that morning.

In addition to this a bunch of keys belonging to the man was found at the scene of the wreck. Mrs. Weyler identified them as having belonged to her husband.

If further proof were needed it was furnished when it was found that one of the keys fitted the front door of his house, another opened a chest in his room and the third one proved to be the key with which he was in the habit of winding the kitchen clock every night.

Naturally a suit for damages was instituted against the railroad.

The funds to do this were furnished by kind friends of the family who felt that the poor woman deserved damages of some kind.

Naturally, also, there was some question regarding the identification of the body.

This, however, gave promise of being a long-drawn-out controversy, and officials of the corporation offered to settle the claim of the widow for $1,000.

Her lawyers advised her to stick out for $5,000 on the ground that the amount was small enough for the loss of a husband.

She followed their advice and this caused the railroad officials to make a second and more thorough investigation.

There was nothing new to be gleaned from the scene of the wreck, so the detectives who were put on the case began to interview anyone who might have been acquainted with Mr. Weyler.

One of these was General Martindale, under whom the old soldier had served during the war.

The officer said that he had not seen Weyler for more than a year, but that the last time he met him the old man had expressed a wish to go into a soldiers' home, where he would no longer be a care upon the members of his family, who were having a hard struggle to exist.

Thereupon General Martindale had given him a letter authorizing his admission into a soldiers' home in Wisconsin.

There was no time limit to the order.

With this as a clew the investigators went to Wisconsin.

They located the home and found therein the old man who answered the description of John Weyler.

He was in a sort of dazed condition, but it was found from the records that he had arrived there on the last day of the year—the very day of the train wreck—and had been admitted into the institution.

When questioned he said he had a wife and children in Rochester.

The man was John Weyler.

The mystery of the keys that fitted the front door, the chest and the clock, were easily explained.

Weyler said he had lost his keys in the street only a few days before, and they must have been picked up by the man who was killed on the train.

He said that he had boarded the train himself, but had left it at Buffalo, and had made the rest of his journey the best he knew how.

Thus was a great mystery cleared up, and in its clearing it was brought out that the wife and the other witnesses had testified in the best of good faith.

They honestly believed that he had been killed in the wreck, and the truth might never have been disclosed if it had not been for the interview with General Martindale and his recollection of the fact that he had given the letter to John Weyler.

Arts and Sciences

According to Jevons, a science teaches us to know and an art to do. Astronomy, for instance, is the foundation of the art of navigation; chemistry is the basis of many useful arts. The arts are distinguished as fine arts and useful arts, the former including painting, sculpturing, music, poetry, architecture; the latter (useful arts) including the trades. The sciences have been variously classified. The principal ones are physics, chemistry, astronomy, meteorology, mathematics, geography, geology, ethnology, anthropology, archeology, biology and medicine.

"What's that?"

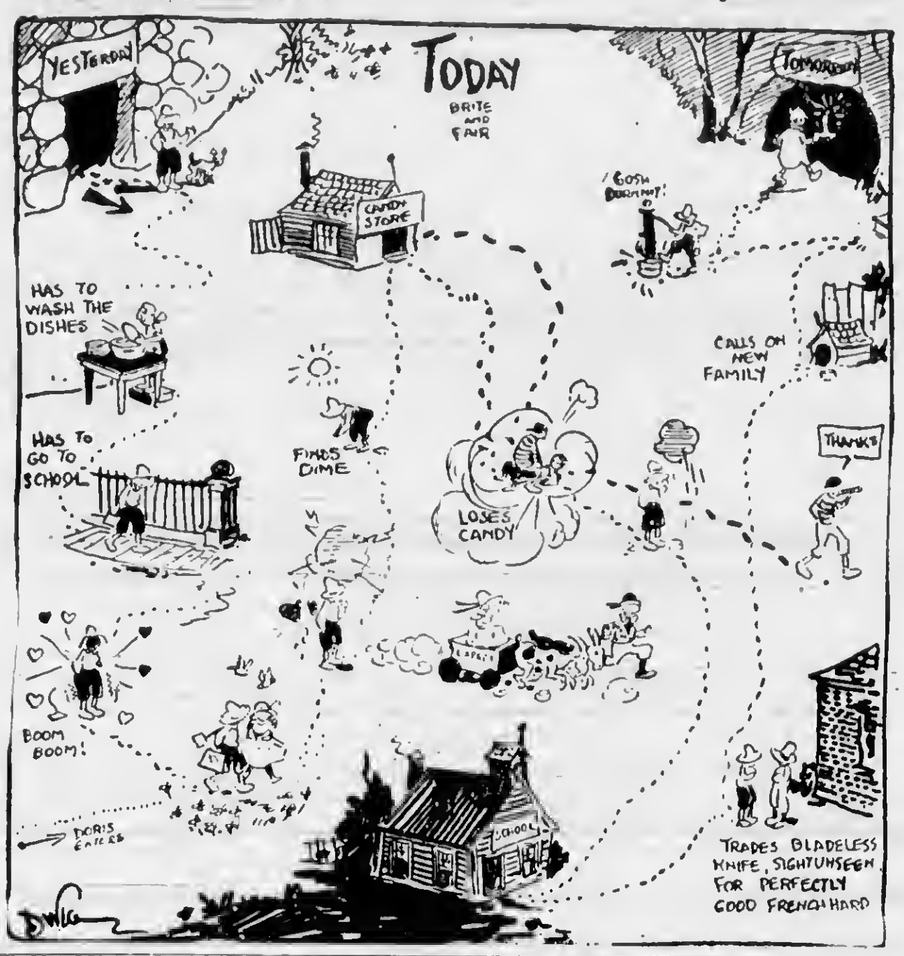
SCHOOL DAYS — By DWIG



OF INTEREST TO FARMERS
By B. C. Mellencamp

4-H Club Leaders Will Have Training Meeting

Club leaders, teachers and club officers are looking forward to the second training meeting to be held Friday, January 11th, at the Advance school with the banquet at 6:30 p. m. This is the first time this event has been held in a rural school. Each person attending this conference is asked to bring sandwiches, silverware and a cup. The balance of the meal has been arranged for by the Advance school community. The price per plate will not exceed 20c, and in all probability will be 15c per person.

A. G. Kettunen, state club leader, will conduct the recreation hour which will include music, games and stunts. At the conclusion of this enjoyable hour, Mr. Kettunen will talk to the boys, and Miss Wixon will discuss club work with the girls. At the present time there are 23 clubs in the county, many of whom have their organization perfected, and who are busily engaged in carrying on their club activities.

With this new setup, it is hoped that a fine attendance of club leaders will be present to enjoy the discussion involving 4-H club work in the county. It is suggested that folks from the Charlevoix area come by way of the ferry road, as Advance is about three miles west of Boyne City, and it will save time and distance. The school is located just a few rods east of the Advance store, and on the south side of the road. Kindly be present at 6:00 o'clock, so that the meal can be prepared promptly at 6:30. Teachers meet, the social hour, and the discussions are asked to invite the local club leaders and club officers.

Extension Ladies to Hold Meetings Thursday and Friday

The next meeting for the extension ladies in the county in the clothing project is scheduled for Thursday and Friday, January 10th and 11th. The Charlevoix division will meet at the same place as last and at the usual time, 10:00 o'clock. The Boyne City group will meet the next day, and likewise, at their same meeting place and time.

It is highly gratifying to note that approximately 250 ladies in Charlevoix county have enrolled in this project, which is a greater number than any previous year. Unless unforeseen circumstances prevent, it is fully expected over 200 ladies will finish their extension project. There are 36 leaders, representing 18 local groups, actively carrying on this project. Sometime when it is convenient, why not visit one of these extension groups and see for yourself the splendid work that is being carried on throughout the county.

Among the Bible citations is this passage (Matt. 26: 20, 26): 'Now when the even was come, he sat down with the twelve. And as they were eating, Jesus took bread, and blessed it, and brake it, and gave it to the disciples, and said, Take, eat; this is my body."

Correlative passages to be read from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, include the following (p. 32,33): "Jesus prayed; he withdrew from the material senses to refresh his heart with brighter, with spiritual views. . . His followers, sorrowful and silent, anticipating the hour of their Master's betrayal, partook of the heavenly manna, which of old had fed in the wilderness the persecuted followers of Truth. Their bread indeed came down from heaven."

facts rather than opinions." He pointed out that last year the state provided $23,426,822 and said that he believes this amount should be advanced to $34,000,000.

"An equalization feature should be written into the school law which will make the education of a child cost the same in all parts of the state," he said.

In contrast to his view that "every child of this state has a right to a primary school education for the good of the state and child" Governor Fitzgerald warned that the state is overdoing its attention on behalf of colleges and universities. He pointed to the fact that Michigan spends $6,117,000 a year to support these higher institutions—seven of them, including the normal schools—and said:

"It is an economic and educational fallacy to say that everyone should have a free college education. All do not want it; some lack the capacity to absorb it, and few can afford to lose the earnings of four years of adult life.

"It seems most just and fair to all that institutions of higher learning should be self-supporting in the course of time, but proper provision for scholarship loans should be made for exceptional promising minds whose talents might otherwise be undeveloped.

"With an economic and mental check on higher education, there is little reason other than local pride, for operating seven state colleges."

The governor bitterly assailed the present method of prison management and the granting of pardons and paroles. He said that the broad problem of handling crime and criminals should be centered in a department of corrections; that the prison commission and the office of commissioner of pardons and paroles should be abolished.

He advocated longer parole periods and greater use of probation for first offenders.

"The system of granting paroles must be radically changed," he said. "There must be full publicity before the parole is granted in order to afford everyone an opportunity to learn about applications in advance of the parole. There should be a public hearing before the commission, notice of which should be served upon local authorities."

The governor dealt at length with the matter of consolidations of present governmental agencies. He said that a bureau of revenue should be created to absorb the state board of tax administration which collects the sales tax only; the state tax commission; and the duties of the secretary of state in collecting the weight and gasoline taxes.

He advocated creation of a "corporation and securities commission" and a "public service commission" to take over the work of the public utilities commission, "the securities commission" part of the duties of the secretary of state," the public trust commission and the state bondholders committee.

He said that at present the functions and authority of these groups are conflicting and interlocking and that economy and efficiency would be accomplished by these consolidations.

Turning to the highway department, Governor Fitzgerald pointed out that Michigan is the only remaining state to elect its road chief. He said that the state's second largest industry, that of the tourist business depends upon highways and conservation.

"The state highway department should be conducted on a basis of business efficiency with the least possible influence entering into its activities," he said.

In addition to expressing belief that the present session should not last more than 90 days, the governor recommended that a constitutional amendment be submitted to the voters which would cut the senate membership from 32 to 16 and that of the house from 100 to 50. Such a smaller legislative body, he said, would work with increased efficiency.

Touching briefly on the liquor problem, Governor Fitzgerald said that the legislature should prohibit the sale of beer or liquor to those under 21 years of age, and that the liquor control commission should adopt regulations outlawing the "low type" of beer gardens.

He asked that a constitutional amendment be submitted which would give the state board of canvassers power to conduct recounts of the vote for state officers and prevent special sessions such as closed Monday.

His other major recommendations were:

Creation of county "delinquent tax adjustment boards" to work out an equitable solution of this problem.

No change in the gasoline tax; continuation of the two-payment plan for license plates and reduction in the cost of plates for non-commercial trucks.

Abolition of the legislative council.

publican victory at the polls in November.

"This board should be abolished and its powers returned to the legislature and to the duly elected constitutional officers of the state," he said. "I have been a member of the administrative board for four years and I cannot recall a single accomplishment that would justify its existence."

The governor said interlocking board and commissions with conflicting authority make it impossible for the chief executive to keep necessary contact with financial affairs. He recommended, however, continuation of the emergency administrative board which includes besides the state officers members of the legislature.

"A department of finance under the direction of the governor should handle all of the financial and much of the administrative control that the governor now has in theory only," he said.

"All purchasing powers should be vested in the department of finance. The matter of keeping expenditures is one of controlling requisitions for payrolls, purchases and other commitments."

Governor Fitzgerald told the legislature that he had not had time to prepare a detailed budget for consideration, but he offered a skeleton outline for a $117,318,000 budget which, he said, would effect a savings of about $6,000,000 despite the fact he proposes no new taxes and yet would, exempt food from the sales tax and would give the schools an additional $11,000,000 which is included in the suggested budget.

Removal of the tax on food would mean a loss annually of more than $10,000,000.

"The present sales tax law, as it is imposed upon food, places too heavy a burden upon those least able to pay," he said, "and does not in any way measure the benefits received from government with the ability of individual to contribute to its support.

"The state property tax should be entirely eliminated, leaving the 15 mills (constitutional limit) in its entirety for local units of government."

In estimating that state aid for primary schools should be increased $11,000,000 over last year Fitzgerald warned that the ultimate figure "should be based upon judgment of

LOCAL CHURCH HOLDS ITS ANNUAL MEETING

Congregational Society Reports Close Successful Year

The annual meeting of the Charlevoix Congregational church was held Tuesday evening at the church.

The reports showed a very successful year in every way, and closed the year with a balance and all bills paid with a possible exception of a very few small outstanding accounts.

The Sunday school, under the direction of Mrs. Saltonstall, showed much activity. Its attendance and enrollment have increased by a large per cent. Besides caring for its own expenses, turned over to the church $65.00 for benevolences. The primary department, under the direction of Mrs. Clare Webster, has done its share in the successful year.

The Missionary Society and Ladies' Aid Society also reported a successful year. The Ladies' Aid Society receives a large per cent of its help from the Circles. It was not reported, but at the direction of the Prudential Committee the different societies have dropped from their methods of finance baked goods sales except during the resort season.

The pastor reported a very busy year. He made over 144 addresses during 1934. He officiated at two less funerals than 1933 but his weddings showed an increase over last year of over 35 per cent. Besides the above addresses he has led the Hi-Y, is president of the P. T. A., chairman of under-privileged child committee of Kiwanis club, taught a Sunday school class, led three young people's groups weekly, and taught a leadership training class of ten weeks.

A budget was adopted that is slightly larger than last year.

Next Sunday final plans will be announced for the four weekly church suppers, and something more definite concerning the religious education topics that will be discussed around the tables. Some meetings will be conducted as a "question drawer," and members of the church may begin at once to think of the questions that have bothered them, perhaps, in church doctrine, theological interpretation. Protestant and Catholic differences, what are "fundamental," etc. The plan is to include special tables for certain Sunday school classes. To this date, everyone consulted has been strongly in favor, but further decisions next Sunday.

ADVERTISING BACK-BONE CONTINENTAL SALES PROMOTION

Newspaper advertising will again form the backbone of Continental Oil Company's 1935 sales promotion program, the largest in the history of the company, it was announced by Wesley I. Nunn, advertising manager, who stated that the Charlevoix Courier has been selected to carry Conoco advertising.

"Proof of the value of newspaper advertising, back by quality products and outstanding service," said Nunn, "is seen in the fact that our company during 1934 showed a gain of 65 per cent in the sale of Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil as compared to the previous year.

"As a matter of fact, Conoco's gross sales in 1934 were better than for any year since 1929—a fact that leads us to believe that general business conditions are definitely on the upgrade. Of course, Continental Oil Company hasn't just marked time but has gone out after business, backed by a larger advertising program year after year.

"This year marks the sixtieth anniversary of Continental Oil Company, and we expect 1935 to be the best in our history."

"PEACE" TOPIC AT W. C. T. U. MEETING

Membership Drive Inaugurated at January Session last Friday

Mrs. Robert Withers was hostess to the Women's Christian Temperance Union for the January meeting which was held last Friday afternoon at her home on Antrim street.

Mrs. Palmer presided. Mrs. Kolderhouse led in the song service and flag salute. Mrs. Minor had charge of the devotionals.

A membership drive was inaugurated to end March 8th; the four groups to campaign for new members and the one with the best results to be entertained by the other three at supper.

Silver medal contests were planned for February 17th, the Union to furnish medals for the schools that wish to undertake contest programs on that date.

Mrs. Cassie Hart presented the topic "Peace" and made many statements pointing to the fact that "war" is "thought" first, before it is manifested. How necessary then that the world cease thinking war thoughts. Each person in the whole world is responsible, in a degree, for world conflicts, for when we allow hatred, greed, suspicion, selfishness or unkindness to rule our thoughts in the home, in society, in world affairs, just so long we will be adding fuel to the flames of war. Nations are made up of people and each one is responsible for war or peace, good or evil, in proportion as he throws his weight or thought into the scale of right thinking, or wrong thinking. On which side are we sending the scale? In recent months we have had many proofs that the world thought is rising nearer to the goal of peace. War clouds have gathered so dark that the heart has felt faint, but men have turned to contemplate some means whereby war could be averted and clouds have disappeared and a calm has come over the world again which shows that righteous thinking is in the ascendency.

Announcement was made that a guest tea will be held at the Methodist church January 25th in charge of Group 3. Also that the next regular meeting will be held February 8th with Mrs. R. B. Armstrong.

New Oldsmobile Announced

Adding to the proven features on previous models, Oldsmobile in 1935 adds new engineering developments which contribute to the comfort and safety of the passengers, and the performance and economy of the car. Pictured above is a 1935 Oldsmobile Six Five-Passenger Coupe.

Roominess has been added to the new Oldsmobiles for 1935 by widening the seats, lengthening the wheelbase and moving the motor forward so as to permit the seats likewise to be moved ahead. The 1935 Oldsmobiles seat six persons comfortably. Above are shown six persons in the new Oldsmobile Six, a low-priced car.

On both Six and Eight, Oldsmobile has retained Knee-Action wheels, super-hydraulic brakes, side stabilizer, pendre-control steering, Synero-Mesh all-silent gear shifting, and Fisher No Draft Ventilation. On the 1935 models the solid-steel "turret-top" body by Fisher is added as are other engineering improvements to give increased economy at the same time that performance is being materially improved.

DAIRY FACTS

OUTLOOK NOT GOOD FOR DAIRY FARMER

Unprofitable Conditions in Deficit Feed Areas.

Prepared by the Dairy Crops Department of Agriculture—WNU Service.

Increased production of dairy products this fall and winter as a result of relatively large numbers of cows on farms, low prices of feed grains in relation to dairy products, increased fall freshening, and prospective increases in feed supplies is to be expected.

The bureau of agricultural economics says that unless the decrease in consumer incomes is checked, the ratio between prices of feed and prices of dairy products will probably be even less favorable for dairying in deficit feed areas than for the last two seasons. In surplus feed areas, however, the ratio, it is expected, will be more favorable. Prices of fluid milk have declined during the last year at about the same rate as have prices of manufactured dairy products, but the bureau points out that base prices for fluid milk are still relatively higher than wholesale prices of the manufactured products.

The number of milk cows on farms has continued to increase during the first half of 1934 at a more rapid rate than in the same months of 1933, but it is expected that the present rate of increase will not continue because the numbers of heifers being raised has begun to decline. Pasture shortages, local feed shortages, a heavy percentage of low-producing cows on herds, and a marked shift toward fall freshening are stated as reasons why total milk production the first half of 1934 was somewhat higher than for the same period for 1933, despite an increased number of cows.

Color Indicator Shows Abnormalities in Cows

Cows that have garget produce milk that is less acid than that from normal, healthy udders. Frequently it is possible to detect the presence of the disease by means of a color indicator. Tests at Ohio State university with bromthymol blue, sometimes called "Thybromol," have showed that abnormalities can be detected. When one cubic centimeter of this indicator solution is added to five cubic centimeters of normal fresh milk, the color obtained will be greenish-yellow or yellowish-green. When milk is ran acid, it becomes a distinct yellow; but if milk is too alkaline, as is usually the case in garget, the color will be intensely green, dark green or blue-green.—In making the test each quarter is tested separately. After the first four streams are milked into a strip cup or other container, five cubic centimeters of milk are drawn into a test tube and the indicator added directly to it. The color develops at once.

Milk from fresh cows or from cows nearly dry is not suitable for this test.—Prairie Farmer.

WILDERNESS PARK GREATLY IMPROVED

Dedicate Emmet Forest for Benefit of Nature Lovers

When the development work now being conducted by CCC crews is finished, Wilderness State park, Emmet county, will be dedicated to the use of nature lovers, who enjoy a jaant afoot or horseback through wild forest country.

According to the Parks Division, Department of Conservation, there will be only two miles of automobile road in the area and this road will lead merely to the tourist center. Nearly all of the 6,400 acres of the park will be kept as much as possible in its primitive wild state.

In order to make the remote portions of the park accessible to nature lovers, 40 miles of foot and bridle trails, three log cabins, and four over-night shelters are being constructed by CCC men.

CCC crews last fall completed work on a 60-foot timber observation tower which stands on an elevation over-looking the Straits of Mackinac, Lake Michigan, and the rolling forest country to the south. This tower will be available for sight-seeing use by visitors.

AT THE MOVIES

Fields Comedy at Its Funniest in "It's a Gift"

The new W. C. Fields picture, "It's a Gift," which opens at the Palace Theater Saturday and Sunday, presents Paramount's droll genius of comedy in a story that fits his peculiar talents better than anything we have seen to date.

Supported by Baby LeRoy, who has learned to talk and utters his first dialogue lines in this picture; Kathleen Howard, Jean Rouverol, Julian Madison and Tammany Young, Fields has incorporated the best of his hysterical gags, and some of the funniest zany routines in this film.

The story is a simple one. It concerns a shiftless, henpecked grocer who can neither shave, eat or sleep in peace in his own home. He finally inherits a sum of money, invests it in a California orange ranch and packs the family into a dilapidated car for a trans-continental trip to their new home.

Their adventures on the trip are replete with excruciatingly funny incidents, but when they finally arrive in the golden state they find that the orange ranch is a "lemon." It is then that Fields really puts his genius into high.

He enters into a series of transactions with a pair of shady individuals who are trying to "best" him and emerge with that orange ranch and money to boot. Which brings the film to a happy conclusion.

BAPTIST CHURCH

Service every Sunday at the regular hours: Morning worship, 10:30; Bible school, 11:45.

Tired mothers find that spanking takes less time than reasoning and penetrates sooner to the seat of memory.—Will Durant.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH

W. W. Hurd, Pastor

January 20th, sermon topic, "Spiking God's Claim." In the evening the young people will use "Typhoon Days in Japan"—a red-hot subject these days.

The following Sunday, January 27th, the sermon topic will be, "Could God Honestly Command Perfection?"

The Club meets this week Thursday with Mrs. Clarence Withers, on State street. The Aid Society meets next week Tuesday—a regular meeting—with Mrs. George Brown, on Antrim street.

What promises to be one of the most beautiful programs given here for a long time will be given at 7:30 Sunday, February 3rd, when, with colored lighting, costumes, tableaux and other dramatic effects, an "Evening of Old Songs" will be given under the auspices of the Missionary Society. The earlier, so called, "vesper house" cannot be used, because of the necessary lighting effects.

Every member! This week Friday! An all-church Fellowship Supper, at 6:15! The first of a series. Song and worship around the tables, then short religious education topic, which, this first night, will be—by request—why we say every Sunday we believe in the holy catholic church. No such date next week, because of the annual club banquet Thursday night. Then, the following week, Fellowship Supper Monday, January 28th. Supper is potluck, except the meat—roast beef and brown gravy furnished. Any friends of the church are more than welcome, just "bring something"! Also bring in questions, on scripture, theology, etc., for the "question and answer service." Meetings close at 7:45. Free.

CENTRAL LAKE METHODIST CIRCUIT

Rev. Earle M. Mumby, Pastor

Worship topic for Sunday, January 20th, "The Perfect Man."

Services at Central Lake at 10:30 a. m.; Barnard at 3:00 p. m.

We hope no one was deceived into coming to Norwood last week Friday evening, for it was necessary to postpone our community "Get-together" until this week Friday. Come with your families in sleighs or tracks over ice or through snow drifts. Be there at 6:30 p. m. or a little before with baskets containing one hot dish, sandwiches enough for your family, and enough cups, plates and "tools" to eat with. Do those chores up early. Devotional, songs, program, and games follow the supper. The Louiselle brothers will furnish some music.

DODGE WITH NEW SUSPENSION PROMISES A NEW KIND OF RIDE

Now that automobile designers have definitely established the theme of riding comfort in the forefront of the motorist's interest, automobile show visitors with a flair for mechanical improvements will want to ask questions regarding the various front wheel suspensions that will be seen this year.

A very interesting example of what engineers have accomplished in this respect is offered by the new Dodge models showing a suspension method totally different from last year's coil-spring system and also giving a totally different front wheel action to which the name "synchromatic" has been given.

The new springing of the Dodge incorporates a rigid front axle, multi-leaf springs of special softness, double-acting shock absorbers, and a rubber-cushioned mechanism called the Dodge ride "levelutor."

The effectiveness of the Dodge front suspension, according to the exhibitors, is further assured by the new equalized distribution of the car's spring-supported weight, on all four wheels, a process in which the power plant has been moved forward eight inches, while the rear seats are moved six inches ahead, so that the front seat as well as the rear seat passengers now ride cradled between the axles.

One of the several virtues claimed for the new Dodge suspension is that it permits the front and rear of the car to be cushioned to practically equal resiliency and that whatever affects the front wheel on one side, is leveled out on both sides.

At any rate, the promised net result is said to be the realization of an engineering ideal sought for some time, namely the truly soft-cushioned car whose chassis and body, in traveling over rough roads, or in rounding turns, remains level and undisturbed by roll or sway.

Section 2. That the Council has caused an estimate of the cost of constructing the foregoing to be made by the said Greeley & Hansen, Engineers, under the direction of the Council and does hereby determine that the total estimated cost of such improvement is the sum of $100,000.

Section 3. That to pay the cost of constructing such improvement it will require the issuance and sale of and there is hereby authorized to be issued and sold, pursuant to the provisions of Act 94, Public Acts of Michigan of 1933, revenue bonds in the aggregate principal sum of $79,000.00 being 79 bonds of $1,000 each, numbered 1 to 79 inclusive, dated January 1st, 1934 and payable serially on January 1st in years and amounts as follows: $2,000 on January 1st, 1936; $3,000 on January 1st of each year from 1937 to 1951 inclusive; $4,000 on January 1st of each year from 1952 to 1959 inclusive, with interest at 4% payable semi-annually on January 1st and July 1st in each year; both principal and interest to be payable in lawful money of the United States at the office of the City Treasurer of the City of Charlevoix, Michigan. Said bonds shall be signed by the Mayor and countersigned by the Clerk and the corporate seal of the City affixed thereto, and the interest coupons attached to said bonds shall be signed by the facsimile signatures of said Mayor and said Clerk and said officials by the execution of said bonds shall adopt as and for their own proper signatures their respective facsimile signatures on said coupons.

Section 4. Said bonds (herein called the "Bonds") shall not be a general obligation or indebtedness of the City of Charlevoix, but shall be payable solely from the revenue derived from the operation of said Sewage Disposal System, including all future additions and extensions thereto (herein collectively called the "System"), and to secure such payment there is hereby created a first lien upon the whole of the revenue of said System, to continue until the payment in full of the principal and interest of such bonds.

Section 5. The holder or holders of said Bonds or coupons representing in the aggregate not less than 20% of the entire issue then outstanding may, either at law or in equity, by suit, action, mandamus, or other proceedings, protect and enforce the statutory lien upon the revenue of said System, and may, by suit, action, mandamus, or other proceedings, enforce and compel performance of all duties of the officers of the City of Charlevoix, including the fixing of sufficient rates, the collection of revenues, the proper segregation of the revenues of the System, and the proper application thereof: Provided, however, that said statutory lien upon said revenue shall not be construed to give such holder or holders of any Bond or coupon authority to compel the sale of such System.

If there be any default in the payment of the principal of or interest upon any of said Bonds, any Court having jurisdiction in any proper action may appoint a receiver to administer and operate said System on behalf of the City of Charlevoix, and, under the direction of said Court and by and with the approval of said Court, to perform all of the duties of the officials of the City of Charlevoix, more particularly set forth herein and in Act 94, Public Acts of Michigan, 1933.

The holder or holders of any of such Bonds, or any coupon therefrom, shall have all other rights and remedies given by said Act No. 94, Public Acts of Michigan, 1933, for the collection and enforcement of said bonds and the security therefor.

Section 6. The construction, alteration, repair, operation and management of said System shall be under the immediate supervision and control of the Superintendent of the Electric Light and Water Plant of the City of Charlevoix, Michigan, subject to the order, rules and regulations of the Council.

Section 7. The rates for services furnished by said System shall be levied upon each lot or parcel of land, building or premises having any connection with said System, on the basis of the quantity of water used thereon or therein as the same is measured by the City of Charlevoix water meter there in use, and shall be collected at the same time and in the same manner as provided for the payment of water bills. The City of Charlevoix may classify the users of the System according to the quantity of water used, and charge such rates to users in each class as it may deem reasonable. Such classes and rates are hereby fixed as follows:

Charges per 1,000 gallons, payable quarterly $0.16
Minimum charge per quarter....$1.00

The City of Charlevoix shall pay out of the appropriate general funds of the City of Charlevoix the reasonable cost and value of the services rendered to the City of Charlevoix by such System on the basis of the foregoing schedule of rates and amounts of water used by the several departments of the City of Charlevoix. Charges shall constitute a lien on the property served by such connections, and if not paid within ninety days shall be collected in the same manner as general city taxes.

Section 8. The rates hereby fixed are estimated to be sufficient to provide for the payment of the interest upon and the principal of all such Bonds as and when the same become due and payable, to create a bond and interest redemption fund therefor, to provide for the payment of the expenses of administration and operation and such expenses for maintenance of said System as are necessary to preserve the same in good repair and working order, to build up a reasonable reserve for depreciation thereof and to build up a reserve for reasonable and proper improvements, betterments and extensions thereto other than those necessary to maintain the same in good repair and working order. Such rates shall be fixed and revised from time to time as may be necessary to produce these amounts, and it is hereby covenanted and agreed at all times to fix and maintain such rates for services furnished by said System as shall be sufficient to provide for the foregoing.

Section 9. The Council may make such rules and regulations governing the operation of said System and the collection of the service rates as it shall deem necessary. The Superintendent of the Electric Light and Water Plants may make such further by-laws, not inconsistent with the rules and regulations of the Council, as he may deem necessary for the management and protection of the System. Such rules, regulations and by-laws shall have the same force and effect as ordinances.

Section 10. The said System shall be operated on the basis of a fiscal year commencing on January 2nd and ending on January 1st.

Section 11. The gross revenues of said System, to the extent necessary, are hereby pledged and ordered to be set aside and distributed into separate funds, as follows:

(a) Operation and Maintenance Fund: There shall be first set aside out of the gross revenues and paid into an Operation and Maintenance Fund monthly or oftener amounts sufficient for the payment of the current reasonable and necessary expenses for operation, administration and maintenance of the System, including insurance.

(b) Bond and Interest Redemption Fund: There shall be next established and maintained a Bond and Interest Redemption Fund (hereinafter called the "Bond Fund"), which shall be used solely and only for the purpose of paying the principal of and interest upon the Bonds. On the last business day of each month there shall be paid into the Bond Fund an equal and proportionate monthly portion of the interest becoming due on the next succeeding interest payment date and the principal becoming due on the next succeeding Bond maturity date, and also, until there shall have been accumulated and unless there shall be held undiminished in the Bond Fund an amount equal to the aggregate interest and principal requirements on the Bonds for the next ensuing 24 months, an equal and proportionate monthly portion of a sum equal to 10 per cent of said interest becoming due on the next succeeding interest payment date and said principal becoming due on the next succeeding Bond maturity date, as a reserve for deficiences to be accumulated and used if necessary for the payment of any portion of the interest on or principal of the Bonds in the payment of which there would otherwise be default; provided, however, that no further payments need be made into the Bond Fund at any time when the amount held therein shall be equal to the aggregate principal amount of all Bonds then remaining outstanding together with interest thereon to maturity. If in any month the City of Charlevoix shall fail to pay into the Bond Fund the full amount hereinabove stipulated then the amount of any deficiency shall be added to the amounts required to be paid into the Bond Fund in the next ensuing month.

(c) Depreciation Fund: Out of the remaining revenues there shall be set aside and paid into a Depreciation Fund from time to time sums sufficient to build up a reasonable reserve for depreciation of the System.

(d) Contingent Fund: Out of the remaining revenues there shall be set aside and paid into a Contingent Fund from time to time sums sufficient to build up a reserve for reasonable and proper improvements, betterments and extensions to the System.

(e) Surplus. Any surplus accumulated in the Operation and Maintenance Fund which may be in excess of the cost of operating and maintaining the System during the remainder of the then present and the next ensuing fiscal year shall be transferred to the Bond Fund; any monies in the Depreciation Fund in excess of the amount necessary for probable replacements to be needed during the then present and the next ensuing fiscal year, as determined by the Council, shall be transferred to the Bond Fund; and any monies in the Contingent Fund in excess of the amount necessary for reasonable and proper betterments to the System during the then present and the next ensuing fiscal year shall be transferred to the Bond Fund or used to purchase outstanding Bonds, and, if used to purchase in the open market outstanding Bonds not yet due, such Bonds shall be purchased at not more than the fair market value thereof and shall thereupon be cancelled, provided, however, that any such transfers from the Operation and Maintenance Fund and/or Depreciation Fund and/or Contingent Fund to the Bond Fund shall not operate as an abatement of the Bond Fund requirements hereinbefore set forth.

Section 12. The gross revenues derived from the operation of the System shall be deposited in a bank which is duly qualified and doing business in the State of Michigan and which is a member of the Federal Reserve System and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, for the account of the separate funds hereinabove described, and each of said designated funds held therein shall be impressed with a trust for the benefit of those entitled thereto.

Section 13. Such Bonds shall be sold and the proceeds applied in accordance with the provisions of said Act No. 94, Public Acts of Michigan, 1933.

Section 14. The First National Bank of Petoskey, Michigan, is hereby designated as depositary of the proceeds of the sale of such Bonds and the revenues of said System and on the written acceptance of said trust and the giving of security therefor in accordance with law and to the satisfaction of the Council all such monies shall be deposited in said Bank for the account of the appropriate funds.

Section 15. The Bonds herein authorized shall be in substantially the following form:

MRS. PRIVATE CITIZEN INQUIRES "WHAT ABOUT XMAS SCENERY"

We publish herewith an inquiry which is self-explanatory. The writer signs herself "Mrs. Private Citizen" and the letter follows:

Charlevoix-the-Beautiful,
January 15, 1935.

Editor Courier:

Just as a humble private citizen who cast her lot in Charlevoix-the-Beautiful some 15 years ago and has gladly done her small part toward the use of that name as a suitable and appropriate appellation, I wish to inquire through the columns of your newspaper whether the city council intends to preserve the Bridge street Christmas season decorations for the coming resort season.

I have several times noticed that in the crowded and congested condition of the sidewalks, pedestrians—and even the dogs—experience some difficulty in getting by these enlarged lamp-posts, and it has occured to some of us that in the interests of business, economy and sanitation these holiday decorations might be stored in some place, like the city dumping ground, until they are needed in a proper season.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Private Citizen.

BROWN WANTS BRIDGE ACROSS THE STRAITS

Introduces Bill in Congress to Authorize Construction

Hon. Prentiss M. Brown, the industrious Congressman from this district, has introduced a bill in Congress to give the Mackinaw Straits Authority the legal powers to build, construct, maintain, repair and operate a bridge or bridges between the upper peninsula and the lower peninsula.

The bill was introduced last Friday.

The powers asked includes the full authority to construct a single bridge or a series of them and to operate same as a toll bridge.

According to the provisions of the bill, Congress is asked to grant the Authority powers to create either a direct bridge or an indirect one, thus leaving the way open for either plan—and a lot of political controversy that this newspaper sincerely hopes gets thoroughly submerged and that there be no obstacles in getting the structure ready for the tourist and the deer hunter. Anyway, there should be a more rapid transportation of vehicles than is the present state of affairs. The two "Michigans" should be united more closely.

OLDSMOBILE SALES HIT RECORD FIGURE

More Oldsmobiles have been sold at retail at the New York automobile show this year than during any other year in Oldsmobile history. More than twice as many have been sold than were sold at the 1934 show.

These figures were made public by D. E. Ralston, vice-president and general sales manager of Oldsmobile and were cited as the basis for increased optimism over general business conditions.

"There can be no question of public acceptance of the 1935 Oldsmobiles," said Mr. Ralston. "The policy of giving the public every proven feature certainly is paying dividends. From the time the doors were opened at the New York show, the oldsmobile booth was crowded with visitors.

"Many who had come merely to look at the show, had ordered a new Oldsmobile before they left.

"One important improvement which attracted a great deal of attention because of its safety is the solid-steel 'turret-top' body by Fisher. We find that motorists are more and more interested in the safety of their automobiles, and the solid-steel top, which contributes largely to a forty per cent increase in over-all strength, is regarded by show visitors as extremely important."

A discussion of plans for the coming year followed the election of officers and will be announced as details are worked out. The session closed with a luncheon.

LEGION ACTIVITIES

By F. V. Tyler

Membership for 1935 is to be stimulated by means of a contest between the members of Leslie T. Shapton Post, led by opposing captains who will "choose sides." Comrade Fenton R. Bulow is chairman of the membership committee and Comrades Charles Hamlin and Charles Martini are paired against each other as "captains," as they were in the famous battle of 1934, which resulted in 101 members being signed up for that year. The contest ends February 5th (Tuesday) and the losing side puts on a "feed" for the winners.

Meetings of the Charlevoix County Veterans' Council have been discontinued by unanimous consent until the first Thursday in April. This decision was arrived at after a consideration of the difficulties involved in transporting the delegates to and from meetings in inclement weather.

SUNDAY DINNER SUGGESTIONS
By Ann Page

Eggs are somewhat cheaper due to slightly increased production. Butter too, is a bit less expensive as the recent high prices greatly curtailed buying. Meats continue to rise in price, particularly pork and hindquarter cuts of beef and lamb. Veal is reasonable and forequarter cuts of beef and lamb also.

Ducklings are attractively priced and fowl, roasting and frying chickens have changed little in cost.

Grapefruit, navel oranges, and apples are the chief fresh fruits available and all are moderately priced. Potatoes, cabbage, kale, various greens and root vegetables are within the reach of modest budgets. Cuban grown tomatoes are in the bargain class.

Here are three menus at different price levels made up from seasonable foods:

Low Cost Dinner

Pot Roast of Beef
Potatoes Scalloped Tomatoes
Bread and Butter
Chocolate Pudding
Tea or Coffee Milk

Medium Cost Dinner

Roast Stuffed Shoulder of Veal
Baked Potatoes Creamed Carrots
Bread and Butter
Cottage Pudding Lemon Sauce
Tea or Coffee Milk

Very Special Dinner

Cream of Celery Soup
Roast Duckling
Apple and Prune Stuffing
Mashed Sweet Potatoes Spinach

PAYS TO LET COW FRESHEN IN FALL

Last Two Months of Year Best for Breeding.

On nearly every fluid milk market there is a surplus of milk in the spring and summer with a consequent low price; and a shortage in the fall and winter with prices in keeping with the short supply. It is easily within the power of the producer to regulate the seasonal supply of milk by timing the breeding of his cows so the majority of them will freshen when milk is scarce and the price good.

The months of November and December embrace the period when cows should be bred for fall freshening. Cows bred during these two months and the month following will drop calves in August, September and October. Some of the advantages of fall freshening are:

1. A better price is received. For example, in an increasing number of markets, dealers during the summer season permit producers to ship to them a certain number of gallons of milk at a certain price, this amount being equal to the average amount shipped during the fall shortage period. Any milk over this amount is paid for at a discount of several cents per gallon.

2. The cow that drops her calf in the fall really freshens twice in one year. When she calves, her flush season continues for several months. Then about the time there comes the natural tendency for her to begin to slump in her milk flow she is turned on spring pasture grass and this furnishes a new stimulus to the flow, very much like a second freshening. Milk records show that on an average the total yearly milk production of cows freshening in the fall is 15 to 25 per cent greater than that of cows of the same kind and capacity freshening in the spring.

3. There is more time to milk and work with the dairy herd in the winter, consequently the cows can be given better care. When the majority of the cows freshen in the fall the dairy work in the busy cropping season is reduced and the cows interfere less with work in the fields.—Southern Agriculturist.

NEED CALCIUM IN DRY-PERIOD FEED

Cows Should Be Fleshy in Parturition Time.

As they usually lose flesh for three or four weeks after calving, because they cannot consume sufficient feed to provide adequately for both the milk flow and maintenance of body weight, dairy cows should carry considerable flesh at the time of parturition.

It is a well-known fact that cows in good condition at calving time will start off the lactation period at a higher level of production than thin cows. This results in larger milk yields for the year.

The feed during the dry period should be high in minerals. This is especially true of calcium, since investigations at several agricultural experiment stations clearly show it to be the mineral most likely to be depleted. A supply of calcium may be insured by a good pasture in the summer and properly cured leguminous hay in the winter.

A good grain mixture to condition a dry cow is: 3 parts by weight of ground corn, 3 of ground oats, 3 of bran, and 1 of linseed meal. The quantity of feed supplied should be sufficient to bring the cow to a proper state of flesh at calving time. About two weeks before the cow freshens she should be fed a light laxative ration such as wheat bran, ground oats and linseed oil meal. The ration should not contain too much roughage as its bulk adds to the discomfort of the cow. As soon as the cow freshens it is a good practice to give her warm water to drink and follow with a warm bran mush.

Conditions Tending to Make Milk Unpalatable

Only clean, wholesome feed should be given cows producing milk for human consumption, S. V. Layson, writes, in Hoard's Dairyman. Spoiled feed has a detrimental effect upon the health of cows which will alter the composition of milk and possibly cause digestive disturbances in babies being fed on such milk. Feeding should be done after milking, especially any feeds of strong flavor or odor, as milk readily absorbs odors in the barn which may cause it to be unpalatable.

The cow barn should be located where it may be kept in reasonably good sanitary condition regardless of weather. Well-drained cow yards adjacent to the barn will aid materially in preventing soiled udders and flanks. Mud and filth picked up on udders and flanks contain germs which may be very harmful to the quality of milk if they get into it. A small amount of labor spent in grading the barnyard may save many hours of man labor that would otherwise be necessary to properly clean the cows before they are milked.

Manure attracts flies and offers a breeding place for them. It should therefore be so located and disposed of as to prevent these conditions. Frequent removal to the fields or, in case it must be stored near the barn, it should be so handled that cows will not be compelled to wade through it to get in and out of the barn.

Salt for Cows

Cows in their search for salt and minerals are likely to eat poisonous materials that will be fatal to them. A number of instances have been reported in the corn belt where cows ate partially oxided zinc storage batteries that had been thrown aside in woodlands and pastures and died from the effects. All such debris should be buried. Salt should be available for cows at all times; When rock salt is used loose salt should be given frequently because a cow cannot lick an ounce or more of salt from the rock each day without injury to her tongue. When cows get an ample supply of salt they are not so likely to eat foreign materials and be poisoned.—Prairie Farmer.

How It May Pay

On a recent farm tour in Skagit county, Washington, the value of testing was very clearly demonstrated. At the farm of Roosevelt Olson, we found a cow that Mr. Olson intended to sell to the butcher. Her test was 3.1 per cent. He decided to give her another chance and the first four months after freshening she has produced 231 pounds fat and $31.40 over feed costs. This cow will easily make $70 over feed costs for the year. Instead of what she would have brought for beef, $20, he will have $30 left or about what it cost to test the entire herd. Testing finds the good as well as the poor cows.—Hoard's Dairyman.

Feeds Rich in Protein

Protein is more efficient in one feed substance than it is in another, says the Farm Journal. For example, proteins of milk are 65 per cent efficient, those of cereal grains only 30 per cent efficient in feeding pigs. In dairy feeding, there has been a feeling that the ration with most protein in was the most efficient. Now experiments have shown that the source of the protein and the variety of protein are just as important, maybe more important, than the amount.

Canadian Animals Show Value of Proved Sire

A group of four two-year-old heifers owned by Charles Hodgson, Hudson Heights, Que., and all sired by Johanna Rag Apple Pabst, have under official test in the R. O. P. with two finishing in the 305-day division, closed their first lactation period with a production averaging 11,360 pounds milk containing 443 pounds butter. The leading producing heifer, Montvic Dutchbelle Rag Apple, in her year on twice-a-day-milking gave 12,635 pounds milk containing 518.75 pounds butter, her test averaging 3.92 per cent fat. Her stable mate, Montvic Rag Apple Mercedes, was a close runner-up with 11,480 pounds milk containing 576.25 pounds butter, her test averaging 4.02 per cent fat. The other two heifers in 305 days made 10,464 of milk testing 3.92 per cent fat and 10,863 of milk testing 3.93 of butterfat.—Montreal Family Herald.

Keeping Cow Records

Individual cow records are now available to every man maintaining a milk herd of cows. The dairy herd improvement associations, or cow testing associations, as they used to be called, all are familiar with. Twenty-five or 26 men in a community band together and hire a tester, who visits each herd one day a month, weighing and testing the milk from each cow. In this type of record work, it is necessary for a group of men in one community to be interested. They ordinarily have to start their herds at the same time. The cost is from $30 to $40 per year.

DAIRY HINTS

Grinding roughage for dairy cows has not proved profitable.

No seperator can work properly if the skimmilk bowl is not level or if it vibrates.

• • •

The too common practice of washing the separator only once daily not only increase the loss of butterfat, but also decreases the keeping qualities of the cream.

• • •

Drought will lessen the per cent of fat in milk and lightly turning in pasture will have effect on the fat content only when the pasture is in poor condition.

• • •

One can of poor cream may produce a whole churn full of low grade butter. This is especially trile where strict grading is not practiced.

The three things that tend to prevent milk fever are: Clean quarters, a special light, milky ration, and the judicious use of epsom salts.

Low grade cream results in low grade butter, and low grade butter depresses the general market of dairy products and tends to keep all prices down.

"Life" will be the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Christian Science churches throughout the world on Sunday, January 20th.

Among the Bible citations is this passage (Deut. 32:7,40): "Remember the days of old, consider the years of many generations; ask thy father, and he will show thee; thy elders, and they will tell thee. For I lift up my hand to heaven, and say, I live for ever."

Correlative passages to be read from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, include the following (p. 376): "The pallid invalid, whom you declare to be wasting away with consumption of the blood, should be told that blood never gave life and can never take it away—that life is Spirit, and that there is more life and immortality in one good motive and act, than in all the blood which ever flowed through mortal veins and simulated a corporeal sense of life."

The New-Value Dodge Sedan $735*

HERE IT IS—THE CAR THAT MADE 175 EXPERTS Guess Wrong!

"I KNOW GOOD LOOKS when I see them," says Russell Patterson, famous artist and illustrator, "so it's no wonder that I guessed the price of the new 1935 Dodge too high."

"DAZZLED BY BEAUTY," says Miss Doris Bishop, buyer and value expert. "I guessed the new 1935 Dodge to be worth hundreds of dollars above its actual price."

"I GUESSED this new 1935 Dodge to be priced much higher than it actually is," says Homer H. Bailey, former buyer for a mail order house. "Even though I'm wrong, I still think the car is worth it."

"THIS NEW 1935 DODGE looks like $1,000 model," says Karl P. Lueder, value expert. "Was I surprised to find it costs so much less! It's no wonder I figured wrong when it came to guessing the price."

So Much Luxury, Style and Value in the New 1935 DODGE, Experts Overguessed its Price... Couldn't Believe It Would Sell for So Little.

GERHART ARRESTED AS COUNTERFEITER

TAKEN BY FEDERAL OFFICERS IN DETROIT

Was Scheduled for Trial on Assault Charge Here at March Term of Circuit Court

Charlevoix county will be saved the trouble and expense of prosecutign "Slim" Gerhart and Fred Herrick at the March term of circuit court.

The former, owner of the popular Manitou Club near Harbor Springs, and Herrick, arrested last fall following implication in an incident at Ironton in which James Wilson, Eveline township farmer, was the target for several of Gerhart's bullets which missed their mark, were arrested Tuesday at Detroit by federal officers for passing counterfeit money. Gerhart was to have faced assault charges here.

The two men, whose trips into upper Michigan resulted in the distribution, it is claimed, of perhaps $25,000 in bogus $5 bills, visited this city last Saturday. Two of the counterfeit notes and perhaps others were passed here.

The following United Press story of their arrest is taken from the Petnskey Evening News:

Detroit, January 15—A shower of $5 bills—bogus ones—floating in the breeze from the window of a downtown hotel herabled the capture of a counterfeit gang that has flooded the state with bogus currency during the last four months, federal agents disclosed today.

Bert C. Brown, district chief of the U. S. secret service here, today told of the dramatic arrest of five persons who, he said, have distributed approximately $25,000 in the $5 notes.

Trailing the suspected distributor, Ethel Warner, night club entertainer, detectives arrested the five yesterday.

First arrested were Fred Herrick, Muskegon, and William Gerhart, Harbor Springs. They had just returned from a ten-day trip into Northern Michigan for a new supply when agents surprised them. As Gerhart attempted to block the way of the invading officers, Herrick threw a bundle of the currency through the window. Its fastening broke, and in the high wind, the bills floated for blocks. Detective Jimmy Maloney was on the ground trying to round it up from pedestrians who chased the "elusive dollar."

Arrest of Warner, Harold Dunning and his wife, Georgia Dunning, who passed the money locally, followed. These three were arraigned before U. S. Commissioner Frank Quinn and their bonds fixed at $7,500 today. Herrick and Gerhart, arraignol before U. S. Commissioner Stanley Hurd, also had bonds of $7,500 fixed.

The secret service recovered approximately $5,000 of the bills Herrick threw from the window, and a quantity of merchandise bought by the pair in passing the money.

The simultaneous raids on Miss Warner's home and the hotel were staged by George Bois, James Maloney and Godfrey Wilson, under Brown's direction.

Miss Warner refused to reveal the source of the money "in fear of her life," she told agents. The only information she revealed was that the bills came from new York.

"The bills were fine imitations," Brown said, "even passing the scrutiny of bank clerks. Every morning mail brought a half dozen or so from merchants and banks throughout the state. Herrick and Gerhart toured the state in a Ford v-8, zig-zagging from the highways to every village, passing the bogus currency. When they got rid of it they would return to Detroit and get a new supply from Miss Warner who sold them.

"We caught trail of the Dunnings first, 'tailed' them to the Warner woman's where we picked up Herrick and Gerhart," Brown said. "The latter two gave us the slip and made this last trip, even into the upper peninsula. We picked them up as soon as they returned. The raid followed."

205,250 DRIVERS FAIL TO GET NEW LICENSES

At least 205,250 motorists in Michigan have failed to renew their driver's licenses and as a result are placing themselves in jeopardy of the financial responsibility law. In most instances, according to Secretary of State Orville E. Atwood, the failure to secure new licenses is due to oversight and not to any desire to circumvent the law.

On January 1, 1932, there were 765,093 licenses issues while on January 1st this year year but 559,835 renewals have been issued.

SET FEBRUARY MICHIGAN EDUCATION MONTH

Programs Throughout State Planned In Observance

February is to be "Michigan Education Month."

At the request of the Michigan educational planning commission, the state superintendent of public instruction has designated February as "Michigan Education Month," for the purpose of bringing to the attention of the citizens of the state the values, importance, needs, and problems of education in Michigan.

In connection with the enterprise, boards of education throughout the state will be called upon to conduct "Townhall" meetings for open forum discussions of the subject.

All units of the various lay organizations represented on the planning commission, and other statewide civic groups, will be asked to cooperate in arranging programs centering on the general topic. School people will be urged to give attention to the occasion through school assemblies, classroom and extra-curricular activities.

Assistance in securing speakers for local programs will be provided by local school and civic leaders, as well as by the state department and the Michigan Education Association.

Materials for speakers and for general distribution for these occasions will be furnished by the Department of Public Instruction and the Michigan Education Association.

The period designated as "Michigan Education Month" will be comparable to National Education Week, as conducted by the National Education Association, except that it will concentrate on the problems pertaining to Michigan's public schools.

ANTRIM COUNTY TO HAVE STATE FOREST

Forty Thousand Acres Designated by Conservation Department

The Conservation Commission recently designated 40,000 acres of state lands for public leasing, dedicated a tract of land in Antrim county as the Jordan State Forest and turned down a proposal to remunerate hardware dealers for selling game licenses.

The proposals to pay license dealers five cents for game and 10 cents for deer permits was introduced by Commissioner Philip Schumaker, Ann Arbor. The commission, however, voted it down on the grounds it would take $25,000 a year from the game funds.

Lands which were opened for lease for "wildcat" oil drilling are located in Bay, Clare, Gladwin, Lake, Midland, Missaukee, Muskegon, Newwago, Osceola, Oceana, and Wexford counties.

HUNTING SEASON TO END NEXT THURSDAY

Rabbit Season Closing January 31, Ends Game Hunting

The last of the open hunting seasons of the current winter will come to close Thursday, January 31st, with the end of legal rabbit shooting in the upper and lower peninsulas.

Michigan small-game hunters have but one week left in which to enjoy their rabbit hunting.

The close of small-game hunting for the current winter, however, will not prevent the shooting of certain non-game animals on which there is no closed season.

Hunters who hold small-game licenses and gun permits may shoot the following at any time: Mink, coyotes, wolves, lynx; bobcats, fox, skunk, porcupine, woodchuck, house cats, ground squirrels, red squirrels, weasels, owls, crows, hawks, starlings and blackbirds.

ALPENA IS OBSERVING MICHIGAN CENTENNIAL

Historical Winter Carnival There January 24, 25, 26 and 27

Alpena is the first city in Michigan to stage a celebration in the Michigan Centennial. January 24, 25, 26 and 27 it will have a historical winter carnival, featuring all the winter sports of 100 years ago and bringing them down to the present time. The program consists of racing, fancy skating and all ice and snow sports.

The Centennial will officially open with a meeting and dinner of the Michigan State Historical Society at Grand Rapids, January 26th.

The centennial celebration officially begins January 26, 1935, and will end January 26, 1937.

Approximately 100 cities and villages have now reported to the Michigan Historical Commission that they have their committees organized for celebrations during the two-year period.

PART PAYMENTS FOR CAR PLATES

SENATE PASSES ITS FIRST BILL WITHOUT DEBATE

Installment Payment Plan of Last Two Years Presented to House for Approval

Legislation permitting Michigan motorists to continue to buy their auto license plates on the installment plan is before the house with prospects that it will be the first measure the present session will see written into law.

The bill was passed by the senate Monday night without a dissenting vote. It must rest with the house for five days before that chamber can act, because of constitutional requirements.

The two payment plan was originated two years ago, but was only to have been effective during 1933 and 1934. The present measure continuing the plan was offered by Sen. John Reid of Highland Park.

The secretary of state Monday announced that use of 1934 license plates will be permitted until February 28th, pending legislative action.

In the senate session, the senate was presented with the legislation which will create a public service commission, which body would take over the duties of the public utilities commission, state bondholders committee, public trust commission and part of those of the present securities commission. Another administration bill abolishing the stream control commission was offered.

CHARLEVOIX BEREFT RESPECTED PIONEER

William Heise Succumbed Wednesday Morning to Heart Attack

William Heise, highly respected pioneer of Charlevoix and Norwood township, died Wednesday morning, the victim of heart attack while cleaning paths in front of his State street residence.

Mr. Heise was a native of Germany. He was born in 1854 at Leitzerfeld, and, with his wife, whom he married April 20, 1879, came to America in 1881. The couple resided two years at St. Joseph, moved to Charlevoix and later to a farm in Norwood township which was their home until about 15 years ago when they took up their residence in this city.

Surviving besides the widow are five sons, Paul, Edward, William Jr., Charles and Clarence, and a daughter, Mrs. George Moe, all of this city. Two other children preceded their father in death.

KIPMAN NIP TRAVERSE SECOND TIME

SCORED 31 TO 19 VICTORY LAST FRIDAY NIGHT

Team Gave Outstanding Performance to Trim Trojans—Play at Mancelona This Week

Charlevoix scored a second victory over the Traverse City Trojans on the local court last Friday night, winning by 31 to 19.

The contest, for three periods the most evenly fought seen on the Charlevoix court this year, displayed the Kipmen in their best form. Team play stood out prominently as the margin of difference between the two squads. Charlevoix's offense clicked like clockwork. Their fast breaking, tricky plays caught the visiting Trojans flat-footed on many occasion and their close guarding gave Traverse few unhurried shots.

Charlevoix was matched almost point for point for three periods. The score at the quarter was knotted 5-all and the second period, which ended with the Kipmen leading 12 to 10, once saw Traverse out in front by an 8 to 7 margin. The score was twice knotted in the third session, once 12 to 12 and again 14 to 14. From that point Charlevoix pulled away to a 20 to 16 margin at the third intermission and in the final quarter scored 11 points to 3 for the visitors.

Schwab, with 8, and Carey and Foster with 6 each, were high for Charlevoix. Earle and Pearl scored 5 each. Ginther led the Traverse City attack with 8 points.

Tubraham of Cadillac, refereed very satisfactorily.

Charlevoix plays away from home again this week. The team goes to Mancelona for a class C tilt Friday night, and for their next home appearance take on Boyne City the following week.

ALL MAY UNITE IN PRESIDENT'S PARTY

Western Union Opens Way In Congratulate the President

Miss Olive Allen, manager of Western Union, has announced a plan whereby any person can send a birthday greeting to President Roosevelt for 25 cents. The Western Union donates its services and the 25 cents goes into the fund to fight infantile paralysis. All of the money thus collected goes into the hands of the national committee and 70 per cent is returned to the city in which it originates.

SNOW BLOCKS AIR MAIL DELIVERIES

AWAIT SKI EQUIPMENT FOR MAIL PLANE

Fish Boat Pressed Into Service to Make Delivery—Freighter Rambler Ice-Bound at Beavers

Airmail service to Beaver Island has been temporarily suspended because of heavy snow on both the Charlevoix and island landing fields.

The last delivery was made last Thursday by plane. Difficulty was experienced taking off from both the local and island fields. Pilot Bud Hammond will resume service as soon as ski equipment is installed on the plane.

In the meantime mail was taken over Tuesday by boat by Joe Hissell, cleaning up the accumulation in the local postoffice. Earlier in the week a consignment of lumber was taken to the island by Capt. Ernest Smith on the fish tug Bonnie, which later continued to Frankfort for winter operation. Both boats landed their cargoes onto the ice at Iron Ore Bay, from which point they were transfered to St. James.

The freighter Rambler, ice-bound in St. James harbor for a week, was released Tuesday and returned to this port the same evening. Drift ice from the straits blockaded the harbor entrance for several days and it was necessary to saw a channel to open water from Lighthouse Point, where the craft had been landed when ice in the inner harbor prevented entrance.

It is also reported the steam tug Venus, ice-bound together with the Rambler, will be brought here by its owners for boiler repairs.

SMALL PART PENSION MONEY TO APPLICANT

Dillman Fires 100 Head Tax Investigators from Payroll

State Welfare Director Grover C. Dillman who assumed office this month with Governor Fitzgerald, has announced dismissal of 100 head tax investigators as an economy measure. He said that there will be 75 on the state payroll.

They are appointed locally to check upon payments of the head tax which was supposed to have financed an old age pension. Their salaries are paid by the state.

Dillman reported that head tax collections so far have been only $340,618 while the division has expended $391,092. Only $103,000 has been paid out in pensions, the remainder going for administration expense. The department has on file 130,000 applications for the pension, but only 3,500 aged indigents are receiving aid at the rate of about $10 a month.

George Higman to Supervise Activities Sanctioned by Association of Commerce and Council

Supervised by George Higman, director of outdoor recreational activities, and sponsored by the Association of Commerce and city council, Charlevoix will stage a one-day program of winter sports on Saturday, February 2nd.

Plans now being arranged call for activity throughout the day. Skating races are being outlined for all ages. In case the entry list is too large for completion of all divisions in the afternoon, elimination races will be conducted in the forenoon and the finals in all classes in the afternoon.

Other features will include skiing and tobogganing contests at Mt. Mc-Sauba, a dog race providing sufficient entries are obtainable, fancy skating exhibition in the evening and possibly a dancing party to complete the day's entertainment. Full details of the program will be published as soon as completed. Prizes for winners and runners-up in all events will be provided.

Interest in winter sports in Charlevoix has increased considerably during the present winter and this event will provide entertainment for all who care to participate. Boyne City, Grayling, Alpena and Traverse City are this year sponsoring programs, while the annual winter carnival at Petoskey, set for February 8 to 17, promises to set a new mark for that event which has increased in popularity each year.

NEAR CLOSE FIRST SEMESTER WORK

FRESHMAN COLLEGE HALF-WAY MARK FEBRUARY 8

New Enrollments Will Be Received at That Time—One Change In Faculty Is Announced

The first semester of the Charlevoix Freshman College will close February 8th after 17 weeks of intensive college work. The present semester has demonstrated clearly that courses of college grade can be given in the small communities in a thorough and comprehensive manner. Those students of the local Freshman College who have earned recommendable grades will be able to continue their advanced study at the University of Michigan or any other school exactly as well as though they had had their beginning at the larger school.

Of the 36 students who originally enrolled at the Freshman College, 23 are carrying a full college load. Most of these expect to continue their preparation elsewhere after completing their year of college work at home.

In announcing the opening of the second semester, Arthur T. Stoughton, director of the Charlevoix Freshman College, states that new enrollments of properly qualified students will be received, although new classes will not be started unless there is a sufficient enrollment to make the organization of new classes possible. Should as many as five or six persons wish a special subject, an attempt will be made to offer it. However, one new course will be added to the curriculn and new students may enter History 12 without having completed History 11. The new course will be Political Science 1. National Government and Administration. It will meet four times each week at hours and on days to be announced later. History 12, History of Modern Europe, Political and Cultural, also will meet four days a week.

The same faculty will be in charge of the Freshman College next semester as during the first, with the exception of Ilex Supernaw, local man, who has resigned to accept a position elsewhere.

A feature of Tuesday evening's meeting was a mock trial with members portraying the various roles. The trial provided no small amount of amusement.

ODD FELLOWS WIN BUT STILL TRAIL MASONS

Third Cribbage Contest Ends With Masons Leading by 13 Points

The Odd Fellows out-scored the Masons Monday night at cribbage for the second consecutive week, but still lack enough points to overcome the Masonic lead piled up in the first series contest three weeks ago.

Team scores of the third session gave the Odd Fellows 13,697 to 13,579 for the Masons, a margin of 118. Taken from the Masonic lead of 131 points following the second contest a week ago, leaves the Odd Fellows trailing by 13. High scorers were Ray Ashdon with 955 for the Masons and Floyd Mkens with 948 for the Odd Fellows.

The series will be resumed next Monday evening, January 28th, at the I. O. O. F. hall.

Indications of similarity in primitive religious cults have been discovered in every continent, and it is now accepted that what is called the New World contains some of the world's most ancient relics of dead civilizations. A recent archeological find is reported from Canada. A museum curator was on a canoe trip with a friend in the Whitesheet forest preserve 100 miles east of Winnipeg, when they stumbled on a sacred area, which they compare with Stonehenge. They found a number of large upright stones and monuments in weird formation, covering an area of several acres, which are thought to have been erected by members of a snake cult of Cree or Chipewayan Indians many centuries ago.—London Tit-Bits.

Paris Acclaims the Beauty of Lace

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

For sheer loveliness whenever, wherever, if ever has eye beheld a more entrancing army of lace evening gowns than those which are now gracing the midwinter social scene! When we say sheer loveliness we mean just that—sheer and lovely as the smart new laces and nets, chiffons and marquisettes can make the party frocks and evening formals now so voguish.

The importance of lace and net and various beauteous sheers of similar character cannot be over emphasized. Reports pour in from Paris in regard to the enthusiasm shown for gowns that are that thin and flattery and diaphanous they needs must be made over foundational slips of silk, or satin, crepe or lame.

In describing the group of distinguished lace fashions pictured, we are so enthusiastic about the superbly lovely lace frock to the right in the trio we are going to tell about it first. It is a wedding gown which is real style news, gives it an added touch of glamor and romance, too. More and more brides are intrigued with the idea of lace for the all-important nuptial event. One of the reasons, perhaps, is that lace is so luxurious and beautiful in itself, it needs no furbelows and intricate cutting to enhance it. Silver lace is particularly sumptuous and it makes a really thrilling wedding gown. Arikause of Paris, whose creations are ever strikingly original, creates this exquisite bridal costume of this silver lace. It has a square court train which may be draped as a wrap, as here shown, which makes it practical for the bride to wear as an evening gown later. A white satin godet is inserted at the side-front. The same satin borders the train, also the long sleeves.

In the charming black lace dress centered in the picture, Paton has very ingeniously contrived to combine youthful little peplum to circle the hips and go ruffling down the back. From the picture one might easily fancy that net of large open mesh fashioned this dress instead of lace. However, it is really a rather heavy lace, smartly patterned in a conventional design which is younger looking than the more formal and ornate orals. There is just enough sophistication about this dainty frock to appeal to the bud "just out" in society who aspires to poise and dignity.

Speaking of the new net frocks, likewise the now-so-voguish marquisettes, they are going in for color for all they are worth, unusual tones such as raspberry, violet (said to be the coming big color), Marina blue, rust and dark red.

In regard to the gown illustrated to the left in the group, color adds to the enchantment of the lace which fashions it. For this gown of classic simplicity Callot uses a gorgeous copper-colored lame lace, posing it over a white crepy silk slip. The collar of white cog feathers is a grand climax.

A word should be spoken in regard to the tendency this season to employ laces of a filmy texture both in colors and black. The newer black lace dresses hold one almost spellbound in their fragile beauty. Then, too, among recent showings are stunning lace models which display a riot of fine knife pleatings which form wide ruffles and "bertha off-shoulder decollettes and shoulder capes and other captivating details.

AZTEC MONARCH PIONEER IN THE ART OF GLIDING

Constantly they are discovering new things about the ancient Aztecs. Just the other day it was learned by student research that the early inhabitants of Mexico had invented a very modernized form of football; but even later comes, via Madrid, news of the Aztecs some five hundred years ago.

Discovery of this extraordinary fact was made by a Polish archeologist while delving into ancient records of the Franciscan missionaries. The Pole, Tenenbaum by name, had spent nine years in research in Mexico and, among the monkish documents there, found a description of what might be called an aviation school conducted five centuries ago by King Netza. Bird worship existed in Mexico as well as in Guatemala and also in the Mayan regions of Yucatan. An interest in flight quite naturally followed and flight, in the native thoughts, connoted feathered wings.

Unable to create power artificially, King Netza and his assistants fell back upon wind power in combination with gravitation. According to the Franciscan manuscripts, Netza insisted that his people should become more like their feathered gods so he began equipping them, and himself, with widespreading wings fabricated from storks' feathers. And the monarch, personally showing the way, "used to glide from the heights of the mountains into the deep valleys."

An engraved stone, said to have been discovered by Professor Tenenbaum himself, shows the gliders in action and, most striking fact of all, the Aztec aviators are seen wearing goggles "not greatly unlike those worn today." Professor Tenenbaum recently exhibited his proofs to a scientific body in Madrid, but no doubt further research will follow this opening lead.—New Orleans Times-Picayune.

Soviet Bees Scorn Cold

Bees are humming in the hotbeds and hothouses of three state farms, situated north of the Polar circle, reports a recent issue of the Moscow News. Oblivious of the sub-Arctic temperature, the bees gathered 16 kilograms of honey per hive in six days, and at the same time, through their activity, eliminated the need of hand pollination of cucumbers. The yield of cucumbers was consequently increased by 50 per cent in the hothouses and 200 per cent in the hotbeds. The successful introduction of bee culture to the Far North came on the initiative of Dembienko, director of the beekeeping station of Timiryazef Agricultural academy, who spent three years working on the problem.

Time

Most of us think of Time as the fleeting present, plus the days and years that are to come. This is the reason we lose out. Time is now. It makes little difference what we are going to do some time, but it does matter what we are doing now. —Grit.

CONTRAST SLEEVES

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

The idea of sleeves contrasting the rest of the dress is holding good in midseason styling. Advance spring fashions and resort modes also emphasize this feature. Not only are sleeves in direct contrast but the matter of cutting sleeves and yoke in one is important, according to reports in regard to advance fashions. The dinner dress pictured is of dull black velvet with cut-in-one sleeves and yoke of sheer ribbed velvet which makes this dress practical for bye-into-the-spring wear. A delicate rhinestone necklace, just the right length for the neckline, adds formality. The wide rhinestone bracelet also sounds the glittering note which fashion demands for evening. In reality this dress is part of a suit, having a simple, fitted thigh-length jacket fastened at the small turnover collar with two handsome silver fox tails.

Feathers on Gowns

NEW WRINKLES IN SPRING SHOWINGS

Peplums and pleats are the new wrinkles in advance style showings for spring, and in last-word touches for mid-winter costumes.

Pleats are cropping out all over the place—in evening gowns and daytime frocks, used to give skirt fullness in back or front, or to add character to a peplum flare.

They are showing up even in hat-brims and in scarfs, in bustle effects on evening gowns and in whole skirts for formal costumes of the naughty nineties school.

The tiered cups in starched net gains distinction if the net is pleated.

Sheer evening gowns are knockouts with voluminous skirts knife-pleated from waist to floor, with an additional pleated peplum flare on the fitted waist-length jacket.

Wide Belts and Princess Lines Are Now Emphasized

Two fashion specifications—wide belts and princess lines—are emphasized to a degree that makes it seem certain that there's to be no fooling about women keeping their waistlines well corseted and smooth.

In either case, it must be carefully and thoroughly digested that it is not a pulled-in or nipped waistline. Wide belts are now shaped so that they have a curved profile to coincide with the natural waistline, and thus putting a stop once and for all to the abrupt cut at top and bottom that has been the big drawback in wide belts in the past.

Turtle Neck Collar

The turtle neck collar is a feature of many sweaters and a novelty is the posing of this collar in a dark color on a light sweater, such as wine red on a creamy off-white.

Tucked Gloves

This season gloves entirely streaked with parallel lines of pin tucking will be worn by the Parisiennes with her pin-tucked kidskin shoes.

THOSE WHO PAY

Governor Frank D. Fitzgerald has repeatedly expressed his desire for lower cost in state government. He is now engaged in the task of attempting to lower those costs through administration economies. At the best this can only be a partial solution to our tax problems. Should the present legislature remove the sales tax from food, clothing and other necessities; enact an old age pension law to be financed by the state; provide some form of unemployment or job insurance; add several million for public school relief, we are at a loss to understand how any appreciable amount of relief to the taxpayer can be accomplished. It has been shown that 25 billion dollars in wealth in this country escapes taxation through tax exempt securities. A graduated income tax reaching all incomes in excess of $600 would reach this small minority who have been content to let the majority bear the full burden of our tax ills. We would not be surprised to find Governor Fitzgerald turning himself in that direction before the end of the legislative session.

THE WAR ON CRIME

Michigan is shortly to become the nation's leading battleground in the war against crime, with Attorney General Harry S. Toy leading the militant forces of law, order and decency. We trust that Mr. Toy's present enthusiasm is sincere, and not for the purpose of drawing favorable newspaper publicity in his direction. It seems a strange thing, but whenever the battle lines against crime begin forming some bright boy in the audience arises and suggests the appointment of a commission to study crime conditions, when everybody knows they've been rotten for years. It's just a lazy man's way of passing the buck. We don't need any new agencies or any new laws to fight crime in this state. What we do need is a whole lot of HE-man action. Mr. Toy happens to be a leading law enforcement officer in Michigan. He has the state police at his command. If he means business he'll call in Oscar Olander and tell him to get busy pronto. Those boys know where the slot machines and gambling dens have their places of abode. Just a few days of old-fashioned crab work and the picture will look a whole lot cleaner. After that they can perform some major operations. Don't start in trying to kid the yokels, Mr. Toy. Just get down to brass tacks and show us some results.

SPLENDID STATE SERVICE

Editor William H. Berkey, of Cassopolis, has announced that he will be a candidate for a second term as member of the state board of agriculture. He should encounter no difficulty in securing both a renomination and election, for no man elected as a member of this important board in recent years has been better fitted by business training and experience than the Cass county publisher. His has been a record of six years of fine state service, fulfilling every prediction made by his friends when he allowed his name to be presented as a candidate for that position.

The board of agriculture as the governing body of Michigan State College needs men of Mr. Berkey's type. During the term he has served much of the work of straightening out the inner dificulties of that institution has been due to his business acumen and diplomatic capacity. The petty bickerings of recent years have been brought to a happy conclusion. Service of that nature should have its reward. Michigan needs men of his caliber in public places. Observing and thoughtful citizens of Michigan will see to it that he he is retained for another term.

RENEWAL OF FAITH

As we commence to emerge from the world's greatest economic storm, let us not forget that many of our troubles are of our own making, and that our failure to adhere to the fundamentals in government and life has increased our trouble and turmoil. It is only by renewing our faith in eternal principals that progress can be made. Depression and dronth, pestilence and famine, flood and devastation may sweep the nation, but if the morals, the patriotism and the ideals of the people remain high, that nation will be rebuilt and its prosperity restored. On the other hand, when people lose their sense of direction and moral values, chaos and disintegration alone await. The foundation of recovery can be found in a return of some of the simpler, the more homely, the fundamental essentials of life. It is not necessary that we shall discover new scientific truths or invent new or greater ma-

THE SOLID ROCK

We have always considered that life insurance was one of the safest of all forms of investment, but we had not fully realized how thoroughly life insurance has come to be identified with the interests of the average citizen of small means until we read a recent statement by Herbert K. Lindsley, President of the American Life Convention, and the head of a strong western company. President Lindsley said:

"Some persons undoubtedly do not comprehend the significance of life insurance in modern life. They are inclined to guage insurance as any other business enterprise, not realizing that the real owners of the life insurance companies are more than 60,000,000 policyholders scattered throughout the United States. The average life insurance policy is only $1,670. Policyholders are the plain everyday citizens of the country, carrying modest sums of insurance for the protection of their wives and children. They are banded together for their mutual protection, to guard against the unexpected in life. Insurance gives them the proper safeguard if they live too long and protects their loved ones should they die too soon. This protection not only safe-guards the policyholder and his dependents, but the community in which he lives, his state and the entire country."

The institution of life insurance unquestionably belongs to us. Its growth reflects the growth of security for the wives and children of the average citizen.

LET 'EM THUMB

A bill has been introduced in the House at Lansing to make hitchhiking a misdemeanor. It would also penalize the motorist unless he is able to prove a previous acquaintance with the road thumber. This looks like another case of attempting to regulate the lives and actions of the people through legislation. Everybody knows that an "anti-thumb" law would be violated thousands of times every day. That brand of legislation breeds contempt for all legislation. You hear of but few incidents where motorists have invited the wrong kind of people to occupy a seat in their car. The past has learned them to pick their free passengers with care.

We do not believe Michigan can afford to enact a law making it a misdemeanor for a college boy or girl to thumb their way back to the old homestead to spend the week-end with the home folks; to put in jail the heart hungry and homesick boy or girl on the highways who are seeking to rejoin their loved ones; to penalize the honest traveler who has not the financial means to journey otherwise. Such a law would be an insult to our intelligence. It is time we quit interfering in things that do not concern us. Not only should this measure meet a speedy demise, but the lawmakers should go still farther by wiping off the statute books the five-day wait marriage law. If you complain that your life is being circumscribed by legislation it is your own fault. Let your protests be emphatically heard and there will be an end to all this silly stuff.

TRAGIC INTERFERENCE

A few days ago the Hamilton Woolen Mill at Southbridge, Mass., ceased operations forever. For years it had been a flourishing industry and when its stockholders voted overwhelmingly for liquidation more than one thousand workers joined the ranks of the unemployed. The tragedy of its closing is but one of the many penalities we are paying for living in what they are trying to tell us is a smart age of social justice—an age that witnesses bureaucratic influences from Washington creeping into American industry, leaving havoc and ruin in its wake.

The mill had been instrumental in building up the community and gave employment to about one-fifth of its workers. They were happy and contented until outside union agitators invaded the peaceful scene causing three strikes within a period of four months. The business of the company, built up over a long period of years, was destroyed. Company executives wept unashamed when forced to tell their people that the end had come.

Before this happened a federal mediator was called in at the behest of the workers. It was not long before he joined forces with the trouble-makers and a bad matter became worse. Although denial is emphatic there is daily increasing evidence that bureaucratic hands are reaching out of Washington seeking to control the industrial institutions of the nation. Perhaps that is one of the reasons why unemployment continues to grow at an alarming rate—the builders of the nation have become fearful of the future. We might just as well face the fact that unless paid organizers and bureaucrats keep their hands off American business, these conditions will continue. And there is no ghost in American life as ghastly as the crumbling walls of an abandoned factory.

JUSTICE POTTER

Justice W. W. Potter, of the Michigan Supreme Court will be up for re-election again this year. He has made an outstanding record in that office. About the highest compliment that can be paid to him is the fact that back here in Barry county, his home community where he has been known as a citizen and neighbor for years, people have had an ever-increasing amount of respect and admiration for him. This is a test which few persons can meet. Michigan is fortunate that a man of Justice Potter's type prefers to serve in public office rather than entering the more lucrative field of private practice.—Richard Cook in the Hastings Banner.

A HAPPY APPOINTMENT

The appointment of Mrs. Frederick M. Alger to membership on the State Liquor Control Commission was a most fortunate selection.

Mrs. Alger and her husband, the late Col. Alger, were leaders in the fight for prohibition repeal and temperance. This work was with them a matter of conscience and good citizenship.

Since repeal, Mrs. Alger has not ceased insisting that the action of the Country was only a beginning of reform and that much hard work lies ahead. To this work she has devoted herself. She will start her service on the liquor commission helped by a practical knowledge of conditions and much experience and by a sense of public responsibility.—Detroit Free Press.

HOMES AND AUTOS

The degree of recovery attained in 1935 will probably depend more directly on the volume of output of automobiles, and on the amount of new residence construction, than on any other factors in the field of industry. These were the two most important elements in our recovery from the depression of 1921, and they played a most important part in creating the subsequent prosperity period, and indeed in contributing to the speculative excesses which developed during it. These industries are more intimately related to our scale of living than almost any others.

Revival of Railroad Purchases is Necessary to National Recovery

The railroads are not only sellers of transportation; they are billion-dollar buyers of equipment and supplies. In 1929, their purchases meant jobs for 2,000,000 workers.

Today the railroads are not buying. Their revenues have been so curtailed by unfair, unregulated competition that their buying power is sharply restricted.

The railroads want to buy. They will buy when and if their purchasing power is restored.

To increase railway purchases railway earnings must be increased.

Legislative fair play for the railways will mean railway recovery.

Railway recovery will mean increased railway buying and jobs, again, for millions.

Our State Legislature and National Congress, now convened, should eliminate the unfairness in the competition between the railways and other agencies of transportation.

Substitute for Oranges

If you want to make a delicious marmalade but find that oranges are too expensive, substitute carrots. Grate the carrots and use the pulp the same as the orange pulp. Any good marmalade recipe can be used. There is only one thing to remember: If a large proportion of carrots is used, use a little less sugar.

Value of Kindergarten Shown in After Years

Education is a lifelong process. The better the beginning, the better the life. Elmer Ellsworth Brown, chancellor emeritus of New York university, once said: "From the kindergarten to manhood is so long a span that it is hard for many people to realize the full significance of kindergarten training for the adult life of our people. But there are certain ways—not altogether obvious though long recognized by the friends of the kindergarten—in which this foster-parent of our child-citizenship is vitally related to our citizen-life in its entirety." And Prof. W. H. Lancelot of Iowa State college writes: "Our great mistake in the past has been to throw away in many cases the years in which the life and character of the child are most easily shaped. We now know that habit formation is at its height in the pre-school years and that this is one of the most critical stages of child-life."

The child who goes to a good kindergarten usually enjoys his later school days, and whatever his adult occupation may be he still continues interested in the world about him and in the accomplishments of his fellow men, just as long as he lives. Be sure there is a class, conducted by a properly trained kindergartner, for the boys and girls of your community. If you need help write to the National Kindergarten association, 8 West Fortieth street, New York city. There is no charge for any service rendered.

Tuning His Motors for Record Try

Although there is no indication that a Hirmsworth challenger is in the offing, Gar Wood, peer of all speedboat drivers, will not be found unprepared should one bob up. Wood is increasing the power in his huge Miss America X motors, and intends to try for a new world record in Florida some time this winter. The photograph shows Wood looking over the superchargers of his motors. He has increased the speed of these units to provide 300 horse power more to each of the four big motors, making a total horse power of 7,600 for the craft, the most powerful power plant ever attempted in a boat.

TRUE DETECTIVE STORY

by Vance Wynn

Tale of the Poisoned Dagger

THIRTY years ago a number of men and women were murdered in the suburbs near Shanghai.

It was discovered that most of the victims had been killed by means of a poisoned dagger.

At the same time chapels and churches belonging to the foreign missionary societies were destroyed.

Demands for satisfaction came from state departments in all parts of the world, and as a consequence the Chinese government endeavored to ascertain the culprits and to punish them.

The official placed in charge of the investigation was Foo Wang, who at the time enjoyed the reputation of being the Sherlock Holmes of China.

He was patient, he was resourceful, and he never went after "his man" without getting him.

One of the things he found near the scene of the crimes was a bit of calico stamped with a number of Chinese characters.

He knew that it was a certificate of membership in a famous secret society known as the Ko Lao Hui.

This society was originally formed to battle with Chinese officials who practiced extortion upon the natives—and they were as numerous as the autumn leaves in Vallambrosa—but later its objects became anti-foreign and anti-missionary.

Foo Wang went to his home and got out his great pipe and sat down and thought.

And he finally came to the conclusion that the particular bit of calico that he had picked up belonged to Chen-kia-Lung, who was one of the most conspicuous of the Ko Lao Hui leaders.

China is a pretty big place, but Foo Wang had plenty of assistants to rely upon, and he sent them to the four corners of the Celestial empire with instructions to locate the supposed leader.

Eventually he discovered that the man he wanted was at an inn near Pekin, and that with him were about twenty of his followers.

Foo Wang decided that it was about time for a round-up and he gathered his men together for that purpose.

He found the leader in one of the rooms of the place giving an entertainment to his supporters.

The Chinese detective was nothing if not original.

He posted himself upon the veranda of the inn and then sent one of his men in to tell Chen-kia-Lung that he was wanted outside on important business.

The unsuspecting leader excused himself to his friends with true celestial gravity and stepped out on the veranda.

As he did so a great bag was thrown over his head, two men seized him and he was carried, kicking and gesticulating, to a nearby wharf and placed on a vessel.

There, bound and gagged, he was taken in the direction of Shanghai.

Just before the boat reached its destination the detectives brought the suspect into the cabin and put him through the third degree—which means something in China.

But while Chen-kia-Lung might have been down he was far from being out.

He smiled his inscrutable smile—and said nothing.

They literally put the screws upon him but failed to elicit the slightest information.

His clothing and effects were now brought to the detective and given a careful examination.

In the flowing sleeves of one of his kimonos was found a dagger with a poisoned blade.

It had the appearance of being the weapon with which the Shanghai murders had been committed.

Also the investigators found a number of letters and communications addressed to the prisoner.

In each of them he was addressed as the "Eighth Great Prince."

This was proof positive that he was at the head of the secret society and that he undoubtedly aimed at securing the control of the country.

Among the other things found were a number of the calico certificates indicating membership in the Ko Lao Hui.

Koo Wang now had more than enough evidence to send his distinguished prisoner to the block.

But he wanted to get the names of others and he besought the prisoner to make a clean breast of the whole conspiracy.

But Chen-kia-Lung was a wise Chinaman and he knew that he was sure to be beheaded.

So he remained silent. He was returned to the hold of the vessel and told that he would be given until the next morning to make a complete revelation of his mysterious society.

But the next morning he was gone—mysteriously—and nothing was ever heard of him afterward.

And with the skirt opening from below the hips to the hem at the back there should be no split seams to trouble you after a few weeks' wear. It's a lovely design for satin or heavy crepe, and if you would like something a little more feminine, why not add lace edging at the hem and the neckline?

Pattern 2053 is available in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, and 48. Size 34 takes 3⅝ yards 39 inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

Winter 4-H Club Program in Full Swing

Judging from the interest and enthusiasm shown by boys and girls interested in the 4-H elub program, Charlevoix county will again carry on a splendid program. This yenr there are a large number of schools that have community elubs instead of seprnte organizations. In the community club activity, both boys and girls hnve the same organizatian, but of course, carry on their particular subject matter.

The girls nre interested in the clothing project, while the boys are busily engaged in the handicraft club activity. It is quite remarkable to see the splendid exhibits an achievement day, which this yenr will be held at Charlevoix on April 26th.

At the present time the following schools hnve community clubs with a membership of slightly over 100: Wildwood, Clarke, Tainter, Ranney, Advance, Woodward, Hilton, Mnrian Center, and Bay Shore schools. Four schools have clothing clubs as follows: East Jordan, Undine, Deer Lake, and Murray Schools. Also four hot lunch clubs are in nperation at the Undine, Advance, Tainter and Murray schools.

This program compares favorably with last winter's activity, and when all communities have started their project activity, close to 20 different clubs will be in nperntion throughout the county. This year in addition to the regular requirements, the boys in the handicraft projects have available a wood identificatinn contest. A new bulletin has been gotten out identifying samples of wood, and there is considerable interest in this new activity. All club members are doing their hest to be recognized an county achievement day. You will not want to miss seeing the articles made by over 200 boys and girls on achievement day, April 26th, at Charlevoix.

Farmers' Week, January 28th to February 1st

The program recently received for Farmers' Week indicates very clearly that it is the most complete and comprehensive of any program thus far developed. Headlining the general meetings are such names us Jnmes Thamson, newly appointed Commissioner of Agriculture; Dean C. L. Christensen, University of Wisconsin; L. J. Taber, Master National Granges; Gov. Frank D. Fitzgernld; Chester A. Davis, Chief Agricultural Administration, Washington, and numeroas others of state representntion. Each afternoon the general program stnrts at 1:30. Each evening there are a number of banquets to attend, ench one follnwed by a rent program. Then each day the various departments of the college have programs, giving the latest information in regard to their research and experimentnl projects.

This year, for the first time, there will be a livestock judging contest for county teams of three farmers each. This means that three Charlevoix county farmers may make up a tenm and compete against other county tenms throughout the state. Each contestant will be required to judge 15 rings of livestock, consisting of three rings of each of the following classes: Dairy cattle, beef cattle, draft harses, sheep and hogs. Ranking of contestants will be bnsed upon placings only. Ten minutes will be allowed far judging each ring.

Also in connection with Farmers' Week is the state seed show, in which will be shown the potato winning exhibits from this county. There will be a county exhibit, far both adults and juniors, and without a doubt Charlevoix county will give excellent account of its leading potnto grnwers. Space does not permit further details, hnt please he reminded thnt you are certainly invited and urged to attend, and if you do not have a program your county agent has n quantity that he will be glnd to give out. Remember the dates of January 28th to February 1st.

Next Sunday's Chicago Herald nnd Examiner will contain 3 more pages of astounding crime pictures. Here are photographs thnt show the horrors that have been perpetrated all over the country.

A girl of thirteen after the same illness, gained 3 lbs. the first week and 2 lbs. each week after. A young mother who could not get or sleep after baby came got her health back and gained 10 lbs. in less than a month.
You simply must try McCoy's at once. Remember if you don't gain at least 3 lbs. of firm healthy flesh in a month get your money back. Demand and get McCoy's. The original and genuine Cod Liver Oil Tablets approved by Good Housekeeping Institute. Refuse all substitutes. Insist on the original McCoy's—There are none better.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL
And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go
If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.
For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.
If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your headaches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.
It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.
But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25cat drug stores ©1931 C. M. Co.

FEED IODINE TO GET HEALTHY LAMB CROP

Goitre Often Causes Heavy Losses in Years Following Drought

Addition of a few cents worth of potassium iodide to the salt furnished to the flock of breeding ewes will save many Michigan lambs next spring, according to the animal husbandry department at Michigan State College.

Two ounces of the iodine compound are added to 100 pounds of salt, which is then placed where the ewes have ready access to it. The iodine prevents the development of goitre in lambs. Lambs affected by goitre sometimes show no swelling of the neck but usually die when only a few days old.

The prevalence of goitre is much greater in years following a drought than in years after a season with normal rainfall. Feeding of the salt containing potassium iodide should begin as soon as possible. A ewe will eat about one-half ounce of salt a day during the winter season.

SUNDAY DINNER SUGGESTIONS

By Ann Pege

Marketing for Sunday dinner becomes increasingly difficult as meat prices continue to rise. In general, prices of smoked meats, veals, pork and poultry have advanced less than those of beef and lamb. A little meat and plenty of vegetables would be the best for budget and health-minded folks for many vegetables are very cheap—particularly potatoes, parsnips, turnips, carrots, beets, onions, cabbage and kale. A salad or fruit dessert is a desirable addition to a main course using only root vegetables.

Navel oranges, bananas, grapefruit and apples are plentiful and inexpensive. The first rhaburb and strawberries are available for very special occasions.

Here are three menus at different price levels made up from seasonable foods:

Low Cost Dinner
Pan-broiled Hamburg
Baked Potatoes Buttered Beets
Bread and Butter
Bread Custard Pudding
Tea or Coffee Milk

Medium Cost Dinner
Chuck Pot Roast of Beef
Potatoes Carrots Onions
Cole Slaw
Bread and Butter
Tapioca Cream
Tea or Coffee Milk

Very Special Dinner
Fruit Cocktail
Braised Marinated Beef
Parsley Potatoes
Mashed Rutabaga Turnips
Green Salad Rolls and Butter
Coffee Bavarian

AT THE MOVIES

Back in Films, Connolly Says He'll Stay Now

Hollywood and the screen public rarely forgive those who walk out on them, but they seem to have made an exception in the case of Walter Connolly, celebrated character actor, featured in the title role of Paramount's "Father Brown, Detective," coming to the Palace Theater Saturday and Sunday. As a consequence, Connolly has decided to stick to the screen from now on.

Featured with Paul Lukas and Gertrude Michael, Connolly plays the title role in "Father Brown, Detective," which was adapted from the famous Gilbert K. Chesterton character, familiar to Saturday Evening Post readers.

The film is devoted to showing how a simple cleric outstrips the bloodhounds of Scotland Yard in bringing to justice a notorious jewel thief and incidentally plays Cupid for the thief and the girl who loves him.

Correlative passages to be read from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, include the following (p. 406:1): "We can, and ultimately shall, so rise as to avoid ourselves in every direction of the supremacy of Truth over error, Life over death, and good over evil, and this growth will go on until we arrive at the fulness of God's idea, and no more fear that we shall be sick and die."

HERE AT HOME

There seems to have been a general resolve at the beginning of the year to make 1935 a year of greater prosperity. In our return to the good old days of yesteryear we are unfurling interested in the things that will bring better times to Michigan. Several years ago Eastern sugar interests made a deliberate attempt to destroy the beet sugar industry in this country. As a result of the propaganda sent out, many of the old prejudices against the use of beet sugar remains until the present time. Scientists tell us there is not a particle of difference between cane sugar and beet sugar, except that for every 100 pounds of Michigan beet sugar consumed some Michigan laborer has eight hours of work that he would not otherwise get. The beet sugar industry helps to bring added prosperity to Michigan farms and to Michigan workers. Michigan housewives should remember to specify Michigan beet sugar on every grocery order. Why spend our money to enrich the people of other states and other lands?—we need it right here at home.

A BRIGHTER FUTURE

Thousands of Michigan investors in Detroit real estate will gain new hope from the annual statement of the American Life Insurance Company, which reports that its rental income from real estate, a major portion of which, it says, is located in the city of Detroit, shows a gain of 48.8 per cent for 1934 over 1933.

It has been predicted that the country will ride to recovery on 1935 automobiles, and that is but another way of saying that Michigan, the automobile state of the Union, will lead the way to better times.

The American Life is a Michigan company and most of its policies as well as its investments are here. The entire statement which its President, Clarence L. Ayers, describes as "in many respects one of the best ever published by the Company" is most encouraging to all those whose investments and future hopes are dependent upon business recovery in Michigan.

FINANCING

"The sad irony of our financing extravagant governmental expenditures through the mechanism of inflation is this fact: that in a subtle way the government is financing itself largely out of the endowment of the nation's public welfare institutions and out of the life insurance policies and savings of the poor."—E. W. Kemmerer.

To his dog every man is Napoleon; hence the popularity of dogs. Aldous Huxley.

In normal times the livelihood of 1,700,000 families is directly dependent upon America's railroads.

Mr. and Mrs. Gorm Reside on Vertical-Jet Fountain

Do you know that vertical-jet drinking fountains retain the disease germs of one drinker and serve them to the next? Four studies made on this question dating before 1920 settled the point, and yet in modern schools, offices, and public buildings vertical-jet drinking fountains are constantly being installed.

This type of fountain is as dangerous as the common drinking cup so abhorred by the general public today!

Angle-Jet Is Sanitary

The bubbling fountain should first flow from an angle so that the water does not touch the jet after it has once spouted out. This prevents disease germs from falling back on the jet.

Second, a guard should be placed above the jet to prevent a person from touching the nozzle. These two suggestions will insure cleanliness on ordinary occasions.

But what if the bowl should clog? In an instance like this the spouting water would have to run through the used overflow. Such an arrangement would not be sanitary. For this reason the jet and nozzle should be placed higher than the top edge of the bowl. Then if clogging occurs and overflowing results, the jet can still pour forth without being contaminated by the overflow.

It is encouraging to know that in 19 states angle-jet fountains are recommended by state health authorities or by state departments of labor as being more sanitary than vertical-jet ones.

To equal the miles traveled by the 432,950,000 passengers on U. S. railroads in 1933 one passenger would have had to travel more than 16 billion miles.

FOUR REPUBLICANS IN RACE FOR MAYOR

Democrats File Slate Headed by J. M. Foster—Many Contests for Ward Offices

Barring withdrawals within the three-day limit, one of the most spirited contests in recent years for the Republican nomination for mayor of Charlevoix at the spring primary election is in prospect.

At the closing time for filing petitions Tuesday afternoon, four had entered the Republican field for mayor. Of the three entered for city clerk, Chas. Lamphear and Prescott Adams have since withdrawn, leaving the field open to Ray S. Hamilton, the incumbent. Practically a a full Democratic ticket filed, headed by J. M. Foster, former alderman, for mayor. Contests for the Republican nomination for alderman are in prospect in every ward.

In all probability the Republican field for mayor will be reduced to three. Arthur Bergeon, mayor of this city 12 consecutive years, positively refused the urging of friends to become a candidate and the filing of his petition is believed to have been done without his consent.

Unopposed in the Republican slate are Robert E. Rife and Horace R. Fowler, candidates for re-election as treasurer and justice of the peace respectively.

Following is the complete line-up:

City Ticket

For Mayor—Dr. F. F. McMillan, E. J. Kibbe, Arthur Bergeon, Leonard P. Adams, Rep.; Joseph M. Foster, Dem.

Clerk—*Ray S. Hamilton.

Treasurer—*Robert E. Rife.

Justice—*Horace R. Fowler.

No County Primary

Judge Parm C. Gilbert of Traverse City, is unopposed for re-election as circuit judge of the 13th judicial circuit. For school commissioner, petitions were filed by Wm. C. Palmer, Republican incumbent, and Tex Bucken of Boyne City. The latter, however, filed upon the condition that his name be withdrawn providing he was Palmer's only opposition. Thus, due to the fact there is no opposition to candidates on the county ticket, there will be no county primary election.

BOYNE CITY TO HAVE 3 DAY ICE CARNIVAL

Plans have been completed for the winter ice carnival at Boyne City on February 3rd to 7th.

It is a preliminary to the Michigan Winter Carnival at Petoskey February 8th to 17th, and will be financed through sale of votes for winter queen. Fifteen girls are competing for the title.

Snowfall has been consistent, registering 9 inches during the past week.

HAVE YOU OBTAINED 1935 FISH LICENSE

It Is Illegal to Fish on State Inland Water If You Haven't

Do you have your 1935 fishing license? Unless you do, you cannot legally fish through the ice on inland waters, says the Fisheries Division, Department of Conservation.

Many fishermen evidently have been slow to understand provisions of the general fishing license law, now in its second year of enforcement. The belief persists in some quarters that a license is not necessary for ice fishing on inland waters. This is erroneous, the Fisheries Division points out. All residents over 18 years of age are required by law to have a general fishing license so as to fish in any manner on the inland waters of the state.

Fishing licenses are not good for a year following date of purchase as some believe, the Fisheries Division states. All resident and non-resident fishing licenses, except the special non-resident license, which is good for only ten days from date of issue, automatically expire December 31st of the year for which issued.

Trout fishermen are now counting the days until the opening of trout-fishing season, May 1. Only 91 days remain, says the Fisheries Division.

In accordance with the usual custom of rotating the district tourney between Charlevoix, Harbor Springs and Boyne City, the district meet for classes C and D has been awarded to Charlevoix again this year.

PENSION INVESTIGATION CALLED TO HALT

County Agent Receives Orders to Refer Cases to Lansing

Frank Crowell, county agent, has received word that all old age pension investigation activities in Charlevoix county have come to an end.

This word came from Grover C. Dillman, state director of public welfare, and is concurrent with Dillman's recent announcement that 100 investigators had been cut off the state old age pension pay roll.

In Charlevoix county all the investigation was done by the county old age pension board at no expense to the state, Mr. Crowell stated. The instructions received ordered all applications from this county be forwarded to Lansing at once and also all expense in connection with the old age pension stopped.

TIBBITTS' BILL SEEKS BOOST GOVERNOR SALARY

Representative Douglas D. Tibbetts, of Charlevoix county, has introduced a bill before the state house of representatives which would provide for a vote on a constitutional amendment to raise the governor's salary to $15,000 a year. The present salary, set by the constitution, is $5,000.

COUNCIL PLEDGES MORE RELIEF AID

VOTE $5,000 OF COUNTY QUOTA OF $30,000.00

Penalty Limit for Payment of Winter Taxes Extended from February 1 to February 28

Charlevoix property owners were granted another extension of time for payment of taxes without penalty by the city council Monday night. The new deadline is February 28, inclusive, an extension from February 1st.

Deliberating before the high school civics class members, who, with their instructor, Miss Bea Ferneau, sat through most of the session, the council transacted a grist of business.

The re-organized Charlevoix State Savings Bank was named as city depository along with the Charlevoix County State Bank through resolution. Another resolution paved the legal way for sale of the sewage disposal revenue bonds amounting to $79,000 to the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works, which transfer will provide funds for construction work now under way.

A payroll aggregating $3,172.62 was approved and steps taken by resolution to release school, state and county tax monies held by the city and impounded with the closing of the Charlevoix State Savings Bank.

Provisions for the annual audit of the city books by a certified accountant were made when the council approved the motion of Aldermun Carey to employ O. Lyngklip of Detroit, to do the work.

Lending its support to the campaign to raise a $30,000 pledge as the county's share of work relief financing for 1935, the council voted $2,500, which added to a previous pledge of a like amount, brings the city's quota to $5,000. The city will be given credit for payrolls of men registered on welfare who are employed on the sewage disposal plant construction. The promise requires no additional cash outlay other than what will necessarily be spent on the PWA project for labor.

The meeting and the banquet will be open to all citizens who have the interest of the community at heart.

Gathering Monday Evening at 7 in High School Assembly Room

Louis Bourisseau, director of music under the FERA recreational program in connection with the Freshman College, has announced a community meeting to be held at 7 o'clock Monday evening, February 4th, at the high school assembly room.

The meeting will be for the purpose of promoting community singing—a general get-together to sing old favorite songs, learn about music and meet neighbors and friends. Everyone interested is invited to attend and enjoy the evening's diversion.

Mr. Bourisseau is also directing the Freshman College adult orchestra which is progressing satisfactorily. Anyone interested in obtaining instrumental music instruction may meet any night with the group.

FIVE MILLION DAILY IS LOANED FARMERS

The Farm Credit administration, lending at a rate of more than $5,000,000 daily, loaned farmers $1,830,000,000 during 1934, Gov. Wm. I. Myers reported. Loan volume was about 2½ times greater than in 1933.

CHARLEVOIX WON MANCELONA GAME

SCORED 33 TO 23 VICTORY LAST FRIDAY NIGHT

Reserves Took Thriller by 21 to 17 Count—Kipmen Play Boyne City Here This Week

Charlevoix basketeers won both games of a double bill at Mancelona last Friday night, the varsity scoring a 33 to 23 victory and the reserves winning 21 to 17.

With Carey and Pearl leading the scoring attack, the Kipmen took an early lead and steadily piled up a margin over the Antrim county aggregation. Charlevoix led 8 and 3 at the quarter, 16 and 10 at the half and 25 to 18 at the third intermission. The same steady brand of team play which resulted in a victory over Traverse City the previous week featured the local team's functioning against Mancelona.

Carey, playing pivot position on offense piled up 13 points for Charlevoix, while Pearl, forward, accounted for 12 points. Foster scored the remaining 8. Mancelona's scoring was evenly divided.

Reserves Victors

Charlevoix's reserves defented the Mancelona seconds 21 to 17 in a game which almost stole the show from the varsity squads for excitement. Charlevoix led 5 and 4 at the quarter and the score was knotted 7-all at the half. The advantage changed hands repeatedly in the last two periods.

The Kipmen return to their home hardwood this week, playing Coach Brotherton's Boyne City aggregation in a return contest. Charlevoix handed Boyne a neat trimming earlier this season, but the east-enders winners of last year's district and regional tournaments, have shown progress in recent weeks and are doped to give the Kipmen a hard battle.

MASONS WINNERS AND STRENGTHEN MARGIN

Team scores were 14,345 for the Masons to 14,272, the Odd Fellow total. Ed. Allen was the high Mason with 966 points, and James McGeagh the high Odd Fellow with 939.

The next contest, which marks the beginning of the second half of the series of eight games, will be held Monday evening, February 4th, at the Masonic temple.

Senator Otto W. Bishop, of Alpena, has introduced a bill before the senate providing for an appropriation of $200,000 for advertising scenic attractions of the state.

Under Senator Bishop's bill the money would be divided equally between the four tourist and resort associations in the state.

COUNTY ASSURED WELFARE RELIEF

REQUIRED $30,000 PLEDGE HAS BEEN ARRANGED

Work Relief, Slowly Ebbing Since November and Discontinued Monday, Will Be Renewed

Charlevoix county, by arranging to carry $30,000 of its relief load, has qualified with the state welfare administration for its share of federal and state relief.

Through excellent cooperation of the various governmental units, the county road commission and the strenuous efforts of a special committee appointed by the board of supervisors and composed of Supervisors William F. Tindall, Roy Scott, William M. Sanderson, Howard Stephens, John Parker and County Clerk Fenton R. Bulow collaborating, the county is able to provide pledges of the necessary amount to insure continuance of work relief.

At a meeting with state welfare officials at Lansing last week, the above named committee, after presenting the financial situation of the county, had the original allotment of $40,000 reduced to $30,000.

The pledges to be presented Thursday to the Welfare Commission, arranged just one day ahead of the February 1st deadline when work relief would have been denied unless the required sum was raised, are the following: road commission $15,268.77, Charlevoix $5,000, East Jordan $1,500, Boyne City $1,500, Melrose $500, Norwood $200, Marion $550, Boyne Valley $200, a total of $24,718.77. Soldiers and Sailors Relief, care of prisoners at the jail and equipment furnished the welfare office provides $1,000; an equal amount is credited through the use of men drawn from the welfare rolls by the Porter interests at East Jordan for land clearing operations. The balance, approximately $3,000 is pledged by the county and will be made available by curtailment of budgetary requirements and any other sources which may be available.

The city of Charlevoix pledged to use welfare labor up to $2,500 in its general operations and a like amount through welfare labor used on the sewage disposal system construction.

It is believed that the county will be able to furnish its quota without using tax money. Welfare labor used on the sewage disposal plant construction above the city's $2,500 pledge will be credited and other credits will accrue from various sources throughout the year, county officials believe, thus cutting down the quota to be furnished from tax funds.

To the road commission's previous pledge of $10,000 to be used in welfare labor was added $5,268.77 due road funds from uncollected 1932 delinquent taxes. The county will transfer the above amount to the road department and hold the delinquent tax collections when paid.

Upon official receipt in Lansing of the county's fulfillment of its pledge, work relief, which has slowly ebbed since November and was completely discontinued Monday night, will be renewed. Many projects throughout the county, already approved, have been held up until the quota was met.

POWER CABLE IS SHORTED, COURIER DAY LATE

Workman on Sewer Job Puts Pick Into Electric Cable

An accidental short circuiting of a submarine power cable at the intersection of Bridge and Antrim streets Wednesday forenoon threw the Bridge street circuit out of commission from morning until about 4:30 in the afternoon, thus the Courier is a day late with publication.

The accident, in which the workman who drove a pick into the cable was fortunately saved from electrocution by the insulation afforded by the wooden pick handle, caused no small amount of inconvenience to power users.

FORMER LOCAL WOMAN DIED AT GRAND HAVEN

Charlevoix residents will learn with regret of the death at Grand Haven last Sunday of Mrs. Agnes Jarvis-Morrison, former well known and beloved woman. Funeral services were conducted Thursday and interment at Grand Haven. Mrs. Morrison is survived by her husband, prominent musician, daughter Rita Jarvis Dare, and sons Robert C. and Dixon Jarvis.

CORRESPONDENCE

NORWOOD

Mr. und Mrs. Isn Alward of Atwood visited Mr. and Mrs. I. L. Buce on Tuesday of last week.

Mrs. Percy Empey and her two weeks old daughter came home from the Charlevoix Hospital last Friday.

Misses Beatrice and Grace Baumbach will reside in Charlevoix during the mid-winter season where they attend Charlevoix high school.

The cold weather and snow storm of last week put the Norwood telephone line out of commission for a few days but it is now in working order again.

Norwood citizens are very sorry to learn that H. E. Voegli had the misfortune to slip on the icy pavement in Chicago and break a bone in his leg. We join in wishing him a speedy recovery.

In spite of the snow-blocked road with its high banks of snow on either side, trucks are drawing hay from the Pereene farm home. Also a truck load of hogs was taken from the Alward farm Monday. Cream trucks are making their weekly route.

Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Jones attended the funeral services of William Heise which were held from the family residence in Charlevoix Friday afternoon. Until about 15 years ago Mr. Heise with his family was a Norwood township resident for many years.

Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Rohleder and two small children, who have resided in Norwood the past two months, left last Tuesday by automobile for Hammilton, Ind., where Mrs. Rohleder and children will stay with her mother while Mr. Rohleder, who is in ill health, will go to a veteran's hospital in Indianapolis.

SOUTH BARNARD

Miss Anna De Groot of Atwood is spending a little time at the John Boss, Jr., home. Miss Christine Heeres was a visitor at this home also on Sunday.

Miss Agnes Potter, who is attending the Charlevoix high school, spent the week-end with her parents. Agnes appears to be enjoying her school work and also finds it a pleasure to live in town.

Hiram Klooster is enjoying a weekly pleasure of footing his way to town. Ernest Brock wended his way towards Ellsworth Sunday. The much snow and stormy weather do not seem to hinder these young men in their quest.

We are thankful to the county road commission for plowing out our roads. No one could offer an excuse about not being able to get to church with their car. In the olden days, our forefathers seemed to get to church, rain or snow, cold or warm, but what is our attitude today? Have many of us become wenklings and only have a summer religion now?

The pastor of the "Little White Church on the Hill" expects to preach on the topic, "Dead—Please Omit Flowers," next Sunday. What hope is there for a dead person? Is there a possibility of a resurrection and can one be assured of such a new birth or new life? One may be alive in a physical sense, although not to the fullest—but dead spiritually. What hope of a resurrection is there for him here? Is God vital to you? Do you feel Christ to be a near and dear friend to you? Think these questions through and then come to church next Sunday afternoon to hear further discussion on them. Everybody is most cordially invited to attend.

CENTRAL LAKE

Torch lake froze over last Saturday night.

The snow is about 16 inches deep at the present time.

With the changeable severe weather, quite a few have had the flu.

Harry Lewis' people report that Harvey Brower arrived safely at the Ann Arbor hospital, and expects to have his operation next Saturday.

The Grand Rapids bread man from Kalkaska called on the trade here and at Atwood A&P stores last Saturday. He says the roads over Kalkaska way are reasonably good.

Mrs. Beatrice McGuire Dawson is still at the William McGuire home in town, where she is quite ill. Mr. and Mrs. John Dawson are out on the Maurice Dawson farm this week looking after the chores. They have resided in town for about two years.

Miss Alice Mohrman, daughter of the county clerk, Minnie Mohrman, is calling on her uncle, Harvey Brower, at Ann Arbor. She is attending school there. Her sister, Freida, now has the same position in the physician's office there that Alice had charge of.

Cecil Mason drove his car to church at Eastport, Sunday, Mrs. Rauch accompanying him. There were no church services, just Sunday school, but 18 people braved the inclement weather to get out. It was the "each one bring one" Sunday. Try it again next Sabbath.

A Mrs. Campbell from Mancelona, we hear, is a candidate for the position of county school commissioner. The incumbent, and the superintendent of Alden schools also are in the race. Antrim county had a lady school commissioner several years ago. Miss Wilson, who then held it, has had a more lucrative position for seven years at Flint.

The cherry proposition still appears to be up in the air as far as next year's price is concerned. The growers are asking the government to set the minimum price at three cents per pound. This is about cost, and they should have 4 cents. However, the canners, according to the papers, do not want to set the price even at 3 cents. Every grower should stick by his guns and get at least the 3 cents, or go out of business. All Michigan growers should sign up to hang together until they get their just price. Next month is "Cherry Month," in which the slogan is, "A Cherry Pie Every Day for Everybody." How much better than the beer slogan!

EVELINE

Emma Anne Clark took dinner with Mrs. Cooper Friday.

There were only 16 present at Sunday school Sunday.

Emma Jane Clark, Everett Combest and Burl Walker visited school Friday afternoon.

Several have been on the sick list. Will Walker and son, Billie, are better at this writing.

Mr. and Mrs. Marion Best and family are enjoying their new radio which they got recently.

Joe Whitfield, Wilbur Spidle and Ed. Kowalskie were the luck fishermen in our neighborhood the past week.

Elliot Howe, Oliver and Ralph Duplessis stopped at Clark en route to Cooper's hill Monday evening to go coasting.

Some of the neighbor children helped Mabel Clark celebrate her 12th birthday Thursday evening, January 24th.

Karl Knudsen, Lyle Walker and Richard Clark went fishing over to Nowland's lake Sunday. The fish failed to bite.

IRONTON

Nancy Price has been ill the past week and unable to attend school.

Beginning next Sunday church service will be held in the Ironton school house.

Last Saturday afternoon Mrs. Marion Jackson gave a miscellaneous shower for Mrs. Ernest Brown. About 25 were present and the bride received many useful gifts.

The young people of the community had an old-fashioned charivari on Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Brown Thursday. The evening was spent playing games and Ernest passed out the usual wedding cigars.

All-Important Little Dinner Hats

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

FROM the supreme court of fashion comes the ultimatum that with the formal dinner gown some sort of a fluttering little hat must be worn. Likewise a prettily frivolous and feminine bit of headgear is an absolute necessity for wear during the cocktail hour, at the theater and for cafe dancing and other midwinter social events. So on with the dinner hat!

Just how might a dinner hat be defined? Well, for one thing it is ornamental if not useful. Yes, indeed, this whimsical little headpiece simply must add a truly decorative touch to the costume, which it does most dramatically this season. It may be created of most anything line and fanciful, a wisp of tulle, a bandeau of glittering sequins or sparkling rhinestones with perhaps a dash of velvet or taffeta, satin or gleaming lame. Most important of all is a veil. By all means add a veil, a flirtatious veil, a coaxing veil, a veil with a "come hither" look, a veil that flatters in that it accents your good points and conceals the others. In short, it must be a veil that crowns your head and hat with glory.

The illustration offers a few hints as to dinner hat trends. The fascinating little hat with a muff—of course, you sighted the muff at first glance, for it is so new, so chic and so charming it needs must attract attention. "Lucky muff," they call them, brings good fortune to the one wearing it, so the story goes in fashionland. A very versatile muff it is, too, for it is as practical and useful as it is pretty, since its attractive exterior conceals within its depths pockets for your vanity case, your "hanky" and your purse.

The hat and muff pictured are fashioned of brown velvet with bandings of gold sequins. The little veil is stiffened just enough to impart sprightliness. Muff and hat sets of this type made up of maline and flowers are ideal for bridesmaid wear.

The toque sketched in the upper left-hand corner is styled of taffeta and maline. Order it in black or any color of your choice. The scalloped edge about the large circular maline veil is a new feature this season. This modest bit of sweet pea colorings makes a ravishing headdress for the bride's attendants.

Sketched immediately below is the new wrap-around turban, a type which is very smart for the matron. Erect folds of maline spiral around and around like a winding staircase to the very pinnacle of the crown. A banding of jet sequins encircles the headline.

A youthful off-the-face hat is next shown. The maline shape has a molded turn-back cuff with a flange of maline on the crown to give it height. Recurring folds of taffeta with tiny bows of the same form the trimming.

The picturesquely veiled hat in the lower left corner features the very smart Marina coronet, the same formed of intricately braided folds of black velvet. The veil is a huge circle with a cut-out in the center which slips over the crown and is then brought down under the chin in bridle effect.

Each of the remaining two hats work satin folds and maline together. The one is a jockey cap type with a wee stiffened eyebrow veil. The veil with the big beauty spot of black satin is one of fashion's latest novelties.

QUILTED TAFFETA

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Designers are doing many interesting things these days with quilted and stitched effects. It is not only that dresses and coats are trimmed with quilted collars, cuffs and belt, for the latest movement is for wraps which are all-over quilted. In the picture the coat which is styled with a flaring hemline and cape-sleeves according to latest fashion dictates, is made of quilted cerise taffeta. The dress is of the same taffeta minus the quilting.

Collars and Cuffs

New collars and cuffs show a fish-net effect, and another splendid idea—there is a wider assortment of collars to be had without the necessity of buying cuffs, too.

Dinner Gown

An unusual material is used for a luxurious dinner gown of white taffeta with stripes of chenille and gold lame.

HAT BRIM SMALLER; BACK IS TURNED UP

There's an epidemic of small vivid hats and scarfs to brighten up the winter scene.

Brimmed hats are still with us, but the brims are smaller and turned up in back, so as not to interfere with the sables and the silver fox.

Debutantes are going for the high-hat Cossack caps of corduroy and velveteen, with matching neckerchief or Ascot, to wear with dark winter suits and coats.

They are round, Russian effects, high-crowned and brimless, that have an undeniable dash.

They come in such cheering colors as scarlet, emerald green, chartreuse, coral and old rose, and add nice accents of color to sober winter costumes.

Popular Afternoon Frock Is of Gray Waffle Crepe

Gray waffle crepe combined with navy taffeta is used to create a very smart formal afternoon frock. The navy blue taffeta forms the high waisted bodice which has a Pierrot collar skirred on a cord and fastens with a small knot at the back.

The ankle-length skirt of gray waffle crepe features a slit on the left side to just below the knee. A box coat of the crepe has wide and full three-quarter sleeves lined with navy taffeta. Gray suede pumps are worn with the dress.

Shades in Spring Hosiery Are Inspired by Cuisine

Fashion will turn to the cuisine for inspiration in the spring hosiery shades. Among the new colors will be "ice tea," "ice coffee," "egg nog," and "frappe." The first is a dark suntan, the second a medium suntan, the third a nude evening shade and the fourth a light neutral shade.

Since fabric colors will be bright for spring, hosiery tints will show a livelier quality.

Skirt Formula

Straight and narrow, slashed and slithering—this is the skirt formula for morning, afternoon and evening. Lengths vary with hours.

Expect Census to Show Changes in Population

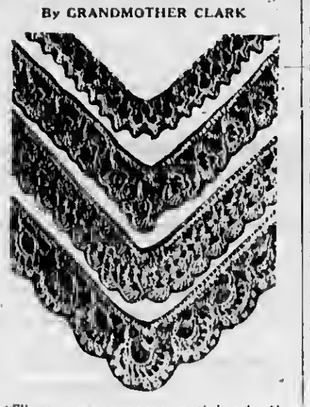
The census of agriculture, which will be taken early this year, may be expected to reveal many and important changes in land tenure in the United States and even show a violent disturbance in the balance between rural and urban population. Signs of the times that have been persisting since the last farm census point the way. The 1930 census was taken in the twilight of an industrial prosperity that has had few rivals and well along in the depths of farm despondency that also stands out in history. The backward march from population centers to the farm had not started in force. So the population result of 1930 was made at what was very close to the peak of the ascendency of urban population over rural.

A similar count for the forthcoming census will reveal a great difference in rural urban population, with a larger number of rural folk living if not working on fewer acres, many of them no doubt on a subsistence basis. Belief is that millions of former city workers who came from the farm have gone back there. To this factor must be added the unquestioned fact that rural births have more than balanced rural deaths, while the birth rate in cities in steady decline supports the thought that the 1935 count of populations will serve to change the ratio by which 56 per cent of the population of continental United States is urban and only 44 per cent rural. It is doubtful, of course, if we ever recross the line that was crossed between 1910 and 1920, when urban population exceeded rural for the first time, but there are many reasons to be found in support of belief that the 1935 count will be nearer balance. What will come to pass when industry is back on its feet and the business of urban centers is humming, as it has hummed before, is another matter. But we must in all fairness consider the happy time to come when the farming industry is back on its feet and humming and renews itself as a drawing card.

There are before us many schemes leading to the country, some of them good and some not so good. We are looking forward to the rehabilitation of the farm and farm life and, in natural sequence, revival of the smaller centers of business and industry that are classed rural and will probably always remain rural in the separation established by the census department. Decentralization of industry has its advocates who view industrial workers in the character of part-time farm workers on their own subsistence acres. Great areas of submarginal land are to be withdrawn and the land that is left worked to better advantage, with more workers on the fewer acres. Unemployables will be farmed out on their own small holdings, and the country made attractive to persons who are unhappy in the cities.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Crocheted Edges and Insertions

By GRANDMOTHER CLARK



There are so many articles in the home that require an edging that needleworkers always want books on the subject so they can refer to them when looking for a dainty narrow edge for handkerchiefs or a wide edge for spreads, scarfs, etc. The edges shown here are narrow for handkerchiefs and give you an idea of the beauty in handsome edgings.

Book No. 23 on Crocheted Edgings and Insertions contains 72 patterns from which to select when an edging is wanted. A few motifs are also included for corners in napkins or tablecloths. The designs are old and new and illustrated in full size, with instructions.

Send 15c to our Crochet Department for this book No. 26, if you crochet and appreciate beautiful edgings.

WHY EAST WIND HAS ILL EFFECT ON SOME CROPS

Although science has been the "plant-killer" of superstition and folk-lore, in some cases it has proved rather than disproved seemingly unfounded beliefs. An interesting example of the proof of an old adage was announced recently at the Department of Agriculture.

Scientists at the department at first dismissed as an "old wives' tale" the statement of truck growers in some parts of Florida that "the east wind poisons crops." But F. L. Wellman heard it so often he decided there must be some basis for the idea.

The facts he tracked down bear out the folk idea that the east winds do injure many of the truck crops, although the poison explanation has no real basis.

In the so-called "celery delta area," 35 to 50 miles from the Atlantic coast, truck growers always have to fight a variety of pests—fungus and insects. They often suffer loss from "burning" of foliage by wind and sun.

It so happens that the east wind, in crossing the Gulf Stream, is warmed and takes up a large quantity of water. When the warm and moist wind reaches the truck area it deposits moisture as dew, which favors the growth of the plant pests.

The warmth and moisture develop fungus diseases. Some of the diseases are carried by aphids, which are waked by the warmth of the east wind. The aphid spread is aided by the wind so that growers can easily see that the eastern part of fields is affected first and most seriously.

Again it may happen that the tender green foliage will not be able to withstand the rise of 30 degrees accompanying an east wind, and it may "burn." So there is a real reason to dread the effects of the east wind, although its poisoning of crops is indirect.—Washington Post.

Spare the Spinach!

The main value of spinach lies in its good content of iron, its alkali-forming mineral, and its vitamin A, B, and C content. All these elements, however, are present in other vegetables. Naturally no two green vegetables are exactly alike in composition, but there is an advantage in this fact in that it provides release from monotony. Try serving some of the other green vegetables to your children and find out what they like; then you can gauge the amounts of these to provide exactly the same things for which you are using spinach.—Dr. Walter H. Eddy in Good Housekeeping.

Almost No Limit to Entre Dishes

Many Substantial Enough to Be Served as Chief on Menu Bill.

The French word entre has become almost Americanized from its constant use on formal menus, and on hotel bills of fare. It signifies side dishes that belong to a hearty group. They are not main dishes, such as roasts, joints, etc., but comprise such dishes as chicken a la king, broiled mushrooms, croquettes, escalloped sweetbreads and other escalloped dishes of meat, fish, fowl, vegetables, etc. In fact, many entrees are substantial enough for main dishes, although they would not be listed as such on menus. However, at hotels, clubs, etc., they are served on a la carte orders at patrons' wishes, instead of the heavier meats, fish, fowl, and bird orders. In the United States cafes include an amazing assortment of foods, even broiled lamb chops, and veal cutlets.

However, it is the preparation of the foods which relegates them to the entre class, almost as much as the foods themselves. Sauces are of great importance, and fancy preparations of dishes. An unusual and yet a simple entre is suited like fish with cabbage tartare.

Sole, flounder, or any fillets, or even slices of fish such as halibut, salmon or cod, are lightly fried in a little butter or bacon fat. These are arranged around the outside of the platter or serving dish, which has in the center the cabbage tartare.

This is made by scooping out the heart of a young cabbage, chopping the heart fine, mixing it with tartare sauce and returning the cabbage preparation to the cabbage shell. This container is cut even around the top, making it closely resemble a delicate green bowl.

The foundation for tartare sauce is mayonnaise. To 1 cupful is added 2 tablespoonfuls each of chopped olives and gherkins, 1 tablespoonful chopped sweet pepper, ½ teaspoonful chopped onion, 1 tablespoonful capers and 1 tablespoonful minced parsley.

A more delicate cabbage tartare is made by using ¼ chopped celery to ¾ chopped cabbage, and the other ingredients as given. Should the homemaker not have all the other ingredients, some may be omitted. For instance, olives, sweet pepper, or gherkins, any one of which can be left out, but there must be diversity enough to change the mayonnaise into a tartare. Zest is necessary. Lemon slices should dress the fish about the platter, and it is attractive to have radishes interspersed.

Frank F. Bird, Register of Deeds Reports Total Federal Aid

A total of about $412,931.00 has been loaned to Charlevoix county residents in farm, home and seed loans from November 1933 to February 1935, according to Frank F. Bird, register of deeds.

Loans recorded in Mr. Bird's office are as follows:

Home Loans	$167,491.00
Farm Loans	207,440.00
Seed and Crop Loans	38,000.00
Total	$412,931.00

The farm loans are ones made since the Land Bank Commission loan policy was started, Mr. Bird said. The home loans are what have been secured so far through the Home Owners' Loan Corporation.

Mr. Bird states that 500 chattels have been filed since April 10, 1934, after the law went into effect requiring they be filed with the register of deeds.

GAMBLING MACHINES ARE TAKEN IN RAID

State Troopers Confiscated Six Machines Here Last Wednesday

Six mechanical gambling devices were confiscated here last Wednesday evening by Traverse City state troopers, co-operating in a state-wide raid under orders from Governor Frank D. Fitzgerald.

It is believed that none of what are commonly known as slot machines were taken locally. Local and county law enforcement officers were without previous knowledge of the state move and, as far as known, have not yet received orders from the state as to present and future procedure in regard to slot machines.

STATE POTATO YIELD SETS A NEW RECORD

Averaged 128 Bushels Per Acre Despite Dry Season

The Michigan potato crop in 1934 was 64 per cent larger than the average of the preceding five years and was grown on an average only nine per cent larger than the average for the same period.

Although the season was the driest in 40 years, the yield of 128 bushels per acre was the highest on record. Fields were generally good in all parts of the state due to late-season rains and absence of early killing frosts.

While the quality was generally good, grading was rather heavy as many potatoes were oversized, hollow, or ill-shaped.

DOUBLE WEDDING WAS SOLEMNIZED SATURDAY EVENING

A very pretty double wedding occurred last Saturday at the Methodist parsonage, with a crowd of young people as guests, when Mr. Henry Ingalls of Detroit was married to Miss Ella Lakies, and Mr. Gordon Dennis also of Detroit, was married to Miss Marion Tuhy. Each bride was accompanied by her elder sister.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold J. Pearl accompanied the first couple, and Clare Studey and Miss Anne Tuhy the others.

The young men were boyhood friends, growing up together in the neighborhood south of this city, and are now both residents of Detroit, where they are employed by the Ford Motor Company. After the ceremony, both couples were invited to a "shower," given by their young friends.

The newly-weds departed Sunday afternoon for their new homes, in Detroit.

CENSUS UNEMPLOYED TO BE STARTED SOON

Is Part of National Program to Get Facts on Idle Persons

A census of the unemployed will be started within a short time in Charlevoix county, according to Dan Martindill Charlevoix county welfare administrator.

Edgar Behren has been appointed squad leader in charge of the census in this county. He is now attending a district meeting at Grayling, which is headquarters for this section, learning the details of the work from L. M. Lyle, the director.

Behren is expected to return soon. His workers will be selected from the welfare list following a three-day school of instruction and examination on census taking. The persons having the best marks will be selected for the work, it is understood.

The census will be a part of a national project of "sampling" certain parts of the country to get a reliable estimate on the number of unemployed and on population drifts. Certain states, counties and townships have been selected for the census and Charlevoix county is one in Michigan chosen.

LITERARY CLUB ANNUAL BANQUET FINE AFFAIR

Woman Furnished Banquet, Husbands Program Thursday Night

The annual banquet of the Literary and Sewing Club at the Methodist church Thursday evening was a very enjoyable affair. Husbands of members were guests of the evening.

The banquet was prepared and served by the women and the men provided the entertainment program. Several songs were enjoyed. Dr. F. F. McMillan gave the toast to the women. Another popular program feature was a short play in which Dr. C. J. Winder, O. P. North and Rev. W. W. Hurd were the principals.

FRED WILLIS CHAMPION SHEEP GROWER

Wins Fifth Place in Wolverine Lamb Production Contest

Fred Willis, manager of the Orchard Bay Farm north of this city and generally recognized as one of the leading sheep raisers in this region, took fifth place in competition with 95 other sheep owners of Michigan in the Wolverine lamb production contest during Farmers' Week at Michigan State College.

Last year Mr. Willis placed 12th in the same contest and was selected as champion flock master of Michigan.

MUSIC PROGRAM IS PLANNED FOR NEXT SUNDAY EVENING

At 7:30 next Sunday evening, at the local Methodist church will occur a unique service of song—with songs to illustrate the artistic and musical development of this country, suggestive of the earlier, colonial advancement, and the progress made since.

Opening with a group of old-fashioned songs by a chorus of young women, the negro music, as characteristic of the South, will be given, followed by the native Indian music, part of this in costume. The pioneer group, illustrative of the "covered wagon" type of the "Westward-ho!" pioneer movement will follow, and after this the more modern music of today, closing with the national and patriotic songs peculiar to this country.

Tableaux, costumes, spotlight effects, and tableaux will aid in illustrating and interpreting the music. This service will be at the usual evening hour, in the sanctuary, under the auspices of the Missionary Society. Admission will be free, with a collection for the work among the southern mountaineers.

DENNIS-TUHY WEDDING WAS SOLEMNIZED LAST SATURDAY

A pretty wedding was solemnized Saturday evening at the Methodist parsonage by Rev. W. W. Hurd when Miss Marion Tuhy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Tuhy, this city, was united in marriage to Gordon Dennis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Dennis of Detroit. The couple were attended by Miss Anne Tuhy, sister of the bride, and Clare Smley. Following a wedding dinner Sunday, the couple departed for Detroit to make their future home.

Keeping Faith with the Public Is a Time-Honored Tradition with the Bakers of MICHIGAN Bread . . .

. . . MICHIGAN Products Will Never be Baked Down to a Price

IN food products, particularly, price competition is an insidious proposition in which the public is invariably the loser. Selfishly instituted by unscrupulous manufacturers, it is a deceptive practice in which the bakers of MICHIGAN Bread refuse to engage.

It requires no great ingenuity to produce a loaf of inferior quality and sell it for a penny or two less. Any baker can do that. But for that apparent saving of just one or two pennies, you may forfeit as high as fifty percent of the food value.

Because bread plays so important a role in maintaining the health and vigor of children and adults alike, MICHIGAN bakers have always considered any compromise with quality, any lowering of standards to permit of lower price, a violation of public trust.

We will not deviate from our fixed purpose of making the finest, most nutritious bread that can be produced — using only the choicest blends of flours, with plenty of pure milk solids, rich shortening, and finest quality granulated sugar; mixed and baked by the most modern methods, under rigidly guarded sanitary conditions. And that sort of bread, you may be sure, will also always be your most economical bread.

All MICHIGAN Bakery Products are Laboratory-Controlled for highest quality and food value. We have our own Laboratory — the only bakery laboratory in the State of Michigan — where highly skilled experts, using specially designed scientific equipment, continuously test every ingredient; where the actual bakery formulae are tested and perfected; and where finished products from each of our plants are weighed, checked and inspected to assure continuous maintenance of our high quality standards.

Get your money's worth. Insist on MICHIGAN Bread and Rolls.

MRS. ALICE LEWIS FETED ON BIRTHDAY

Honored by Pilgrim Circle at Meeting Last Wednesday

Mrs. Alice Lewis, who resides with her son, Eugene, and wife on Mason street, celebrated her 79th birthday last Wednesday by attending the Pilgrim Circle meeting held at the home of Mrs. Kemp.

The hostess provided a lovely cake decorated with candles and the circle members expressed their good wishes in a birthday song. These came as a surprise to Mrs. Lewis but she was equal to the occasion and voiced her appreciation of the features in her honor.

Mrs. Lewis is still quite active and lends a hand with the household tasks. Within the past few years she has pieced several beautiful quilts. She enjoys visiting with friends and neighbors and maintains a keen interest in church and community affairs.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS

Fred Willis, Charlevoix, Places Fifth in Lamb Production Project

Fred Willis again comes to the front as a sheep raiser. In 1933 he was selected as the champion flock master for Michigan, and received the state-wide recognition during Farmers' Week. That year he placed 12th in the state-wide project, while this year he places fifth in competition with 95 sheep owners in the state. Last year, Mr. Willis had 205 grade Hampshire ewes. These 205 ewes dropped 352 lambs, of which 295 were raised. Expressed in percentages, he has a 171 per cent lamb crop, which is hitting on all four cylinders. At the end of 135 days, each lamb weighed 69.7 pounds. Thus, each ewe produced 100.3 pounds of lamb and the adjusted pounds per ewe raised the figure to 137.7 pounds. This lacked only 4½ pounds of being in second place in the entire state.

Mr. Willis' accomplishments reflect very accurately the detailed attention given to production, management and feed practices. It is quite commonly thought that if a person raises one lamb per ewe, it is a pretty good average, even in small flocks, but when the fact is considered that here were 205 head, and that they dropped 352, it is quite remarkable. A study of the results of the project indicate very clearly that the reason the high record, were obtained, was because the ewes were flushed with grain before breeding, legume hay was used, the ewes were grained before and after lambing, individual lambing pens were used, the lambs were creep fed before pasturing, they were supplied with plenty of house salt, they were dipped at least once, and drenched to eliminate internal parasites not less than three time In fact, seven contestants drenched each month.

"Synchromatic" Dodge, Has Improved Engine, New Front Suspension, Streamlined Bodies

Everything contributing to driving and riding comfort, plus "synchromatic" front suspension, and an interesting line-up of novel mechanical features, seems to be provided in this 4-door Touring Sedan model.

Roominess and unified decorative treatment distinguish the new Dodge 2-door Sedan. The body lines show a pleasing streamline silhouette, further emphasized by the rakishly tilted windshield, clean sides and heavier tail deck.

Smartness This Pajama Keynote

PATTERN 2045

There is no reason why pajamas should not be as smart as anything else a woman wears—and every reason why they should. Here are some that are as carefully designed as a suit. Look at the way that girdle business mounts in a becoming V in the front and ties in a clever bow in the back, emphasizing the slender lines of the waist. Those tiny revers are exactly the finish it needs at the neck, and the well-cut trousers are built comfortable and good looking. It is, of course, a two-piece model, nice to make in a neatly patterned cotton or a plain or figured flannel or challis.

Pattern 2045 is available in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Size 16 takes 4¾ yards 36 inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.

Address order to Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 243 West Seventeenth Street, New York City.

Two Scrub Woods Valuable

Wood from two scrubs of the forest, hornbeam and serviceberry, has properties which rank them with the best. These trees, however, seldom attain large size. Serviceberry grows tall and straight, from which long, smooth poles can be cut. TRUE DETECTIVE STORY

by Vance Wynn © Public Ledger

Mystery of the Old Carpet Bag

ONE hundred thousand dollars in gold, packed in iron boxes, and these in turn placed in a safe with a Chubb lock, was stolen during the trip from Folkestone to Boulogne.

That is to say, the gold was in the safe when it left the office of the express company and it was not there when it reached its destination.

To add to the mystification there were only three keys to the safe and the whereabouts of each one was known.

The traffic superintendent in London had one; the head of the Folkestone railway had another, and the captain of the Folkestone-Boulogne boat had the third.

The outside of the safe gave some evidence of having been tampered with, but the iron boxes, instead of holding gold dust, were filled with small shot.

When had the gold been stolen?

Where had the change been made from the gold to the shot?

Who could have been guilty of this audacious robbery?

These were the three questions which troubled the police of two countries.

It was annoying, irritating and all of the other things in the calendar.

The boats running between the two ports were carefully searched. The waiting rooms at both ends of the line were subjected to a keen scrutiny, and altogether the detectives used up all of the tricks of the trade in trying to find a clue to this astonishing theft.

Finally they found an article that cast a ray of light on the case.

It was in the form of an old carpet bag which was located in the station at Folkestone.

The ownership of the bag was traced to a man named Peter Agar.

That in itself meant nothing.

The great big fact was that the photograph of Peter Agar occupied a place of honor in the Rogues gallery at Scotland Yard.

Numerous copies of this photograph were made and were shown to conductors, sailors, storekeepers and others, and as a result of this it was pretty well proved that Peter Agar had been seen loitering in the vicinity of the Folkestone-Boulogne boat on the day the money disappeared.

But if he were guilty of the theft how could he have gotten the money from the locked safe?

In the meantime the police started to look for Peter.

It might have taken them a long while to locate him if Peter had not been conveniently arrested for forging checks.

The detectives visited him in jail and asked him to tell what he knew of the robbery of the safe with the gold dust.

He was quite indignant at this, and intimated that he considered it highly unprofessional to ask a man if he is a safe robber when he is already serving time as a check forger.

In a word, he declined to give the authorities any information.

One morning a woman named Mrs. Kay called at Scotland Yard, and without any preliminaries told the amazed officials that the gold-dust robbery had been committed by Agar, John Pierce and Charles Tester. Tester was employed in the traffic department at London bobbies.

They asked her what motive she had in "squealing."

She answered in one word:

"Revenge!"

It seems that when Agar went to jail on the forgery charges he left $15,000 with Pierce to support Mrs. Kay, who was his "dear friend." Pierce sent her money once or twice and then ceased payment altogether.

It was evident that he intended to cheat her.

She was furious and a furious woman is dangerous.

The state of affairs was explained to Agar and he told the whole story.

Agar and Pierce had conceived the scheme of robbing the safe, but in order to do so it was necessary to get the assistance of some one connected with the railway.

They took Tester into partnership, and the first move came when Pierce visited the Folkestone office with a handful of wax and secured an impression of the key of the safe. After that it was simply a matter of arranging the details.

They arranged to meet the messenger with the safe at a certain point in the journey.

Agar carried the old carpet bag filled with shot and this was quickly substituted for the gold dust.

The loot was divided into three equal parts and the mystery might never have been solved if it had not been for the old carpet bag.

World's Biggest Book

The world's biggest book is in the British museum. It is a gazetteer and atlas of the world printed in Amsterdam in 1570, and is six feet high, four feet wide, and six inches thick. It has a wall space to itself, and students have to consult it as it stands in the position. The British museum also has some of the world's smallest books. Some are slightly smaller in size than a postage stamp. There was a great vogue for these tiny books a century back, and they were carried in the waistcoat pocket.

WILD DUCKS ARE IN SERIOUS WAY

Game Chief Says Steps Must Be Taken to Save Them

Declaring that "what we want is preservation and not post mortems," J. N. Darling, chief of the U. S. Bureau of Biological survey, has launched an appeal for the protection of wild ducks at the American Game Conference.

Darling said that reports reaching the survey indicate that ducks are being so depleted that something must be done at once.

However, the meeting of 800 sportsmen, the largest gathering in the history of the game organization, brought sharp division of opinion on whether a closed season for a year should be declared, and as a result it was predicted that no stand would be taken on the major issue before the conference.

SUNDAY DINNER SUGGESTIONS

By Ann Page

Wintry weather throughout the country has slowed production and movement of most perishable foodstuffs. A severe freeze in Texas has seriously damaged the spinach, broccoli, beet and carrot crops of that region so that higher prices may be looked for. Many vegetables, however, are plentiful and either cheap or moderately priced—among them potatoes, turnips, parsnips, cabbage, kale, cauliflower and green peas.

Grapefruit, navel oranges and apples are the outstanding fruits, though strawberries are beginning to be plentiful and very moderate in cost.

Meats continue high. Butter and eggs are higher, though eggs will be lower as production increases and shipping conditions improve.

Here are three menu suggestions which are timely and suited to three budget levels:

Low Cost Dinner

Beef Liver with Onions
Baked Potatoes Cole Slaw
Bread and Butter
Chocolate Pudding
Tea or Coffee Milk

Medium Cost Dinner

Roast Shoulder of Lamb
Browned Potatoes
Sweet-sour Beets
Tomato Salad
Orange Cream Pie
Tea or Coffee Milk

Very Special Dinner

Grapefruit
Braised Beef New Potatoes
Cauliflower with Parsley Butter
Rolls and Butter
Ice Cream with Strawberries
Coffee Milk

The comunity meeting will be postponed indefinitely because of the bad weather.

An attendance contest is being held in the Sunday school. The Blue side is ahead at present.

On account of bad weather only a small crowd attended the League meeting on Sunday evening.

That is what thousands of people are getting through scientists' latest discovery—the Vitamins of Cod Liver Oil concentrated in little sugar coated tablets without any of its horrid, fishy taste or smell.

McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets, they're called! "Cod Liver Oil in Tablets", and they simply work wonders. A little boy of 3, sickly sick, got well and gained 10½ lbs. in just one month. A girl of thirteen after the same disease, gained 3 lbs. the first week and 2 lbs. each week after. A young mother who could not eat or sleep after baby came got all her health back and gained 10 lbs. in less than a month.

You simply must try McCoy's, at once. Remember if you don't gain at least 3 lbs. of firm, healthy flesh in a month get your money back. Demand and get McCoy's—the original and genuine Cod Liver Oil Tablets approved by Good Housekeeping Institute. Refuse all substitutes—insist on the original McCoy's—there are none better.

IF YOUR BREATH HAS A SMELL YOU CAN'T FEEL WELL

When we eat too much, our food decays in our bowels. Our friends smell this decay coming out of our mouth and call it bad breath. We feel the poison of this decay all over our body. It makes us gloomy, grouchy and no good for anything.

What makes the food decay in the bowels? Well, when we eat too much, our bile juice can't digest it. What is the bile juice? It is the most vital digestive juice in our body. Unless 2 pints of it are flowing from our liver into our bowels every day, our movements get hard and constipated and ¾ of our food decays in our 28 feet of bowels. This decay sends poison all over our body every six minutes.

When our bowels smell our bad breath that we don't) and we feel like a whipped turmat, don't use a mouthwash or take a laxative. Get at the cause. Take Carter's Little Liver Pills which gently start the flow of your bile juice. But if "something better" is offered you, don't buy it, for it may be a calomel (mercury) pill, which loosens teeth, gripes and scalds the rectum in many people. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name and get what you ask for—25¢ © 1934 C.M.Co.

FOUR ROBINS FED AT BONTHRON BIRD STATION

That all robins do not migrate to the south before the advent of winter is attested by Mrs. Robert Bonthron, who daily has four of these birds come to her bird feeding station near her home on Dixon avenue. Starling and several other varieties of birds are also daily visitors.

CHECK-UP IS COMING ON DRIVERS' LICENSE

Violators Are Liable Under Financial Responsibility Act

Dangers which threaten otherwise law-abiding motorists whose operators' licenses have expired, are again emphasized by the Secretary of State's office. Few motorists realize that prosecution under the strict financial responsibility act, can be brought against them for failure to renew an operator's license.

The act was framed in this particular to give the state complete control over drivers who take to the road during periods for which their licenses are revoked. The fact remains, however, that consequences of simple expiration can be equally serious with those arising through willful evasion.

Conviction under the act entails revocation of operator's license for three years, unless the motorist posts with the Secretary of State, in the form of insurance, bonds, or cash, evidence of financial responsibility to the extent of $1,000 for property damage, with $5,000 and $10,000 personal liability added. Insurance companies charge extra premiums for filing the information required of them; the motorist is caused great inconvenience. There are at present, more than 205,000 motorists of the state operating automobiles with operators' licenses expired. Forgetfullness explains the bulk of these instances, but a check-up will soon be started.

Film Foresees National Crisis If War Comes

What would happen if the United States were faced with the prospect of another world war?

The writer of the recent sensational anonymous novel, "The President Vanishes," deals imaginatively and forcefully with that appalling theme, and now that novel is to appear in picture form. Produced by Walter Wanger, who has become noted for his pictures dealing with political subjects, "The President Vanishes," comes Saturday and Sunday to the Palace Theater.

Propagandize Nation

The picture dares to expose the forces and the men behind the scenes who would try to force the nation into a new world conflict.

Arthur Byron, celebrated character actor, is cast in the role of the President and Janet Beecher appears as his wife. The principal romantic roles are filled by Paul Kelly and Peggy Conklin, New York stage star, who is making her film debut.

EXPLAINS CHANGES IN CORN-HOG PLAN

Less Grain, Meat Reduction Asked; Payments on Different Basis.

Plans for handling the 1935 Michigan corn-hog contracts were announced by John B. Wilson, AAA, Washington, D. C., at meetings for county agents and local allotment committees held at Flint, Kalamazoo, and East Lansing.

The major phases of the 1935 contract are similar to those of the 1934 contract which was approved by a majority vote of Michigan hog and corn producers. The government agrees to make certain payments to corn and to hog producers who regulate their production in accordance with the demand for these commodities.

Contract signers are asked to reduce their corn acreage at least 10 and not more than 30 per cent of their base acreage for 1932 and 1933. This is the same base period as was used for the 1934 contract. The reduction asked for corn this year is less than that required in 1934.

For the reduction in corn made by Michigan contract signers, benefit payments of 35 cents per bushel will be made upon the estimated yield of the land retired from production. The growers pro-rata share of the administrative expenses will be deducted from the benefit payments.

Signers of hog contracts are asked to reduce hog numbers by not less than 10 per cent of their base production. Benefit payments of 15 dollars per head on the 10 per cent reduction will be made by the agricultural adjustment administration. The base period for the 1935 contract is the same as for last year's contract. Pro-rata shares of the administrative expenses are deducted from the benefit payments.

Signing contracts is entirely voluntary; local meetings will be held in each producing section to discuss the contract requirements and each grower will determine for himself if he wishes to cooperate with the controlled production plan. Local conduct of the plan will be in the hands of local men known to the producers.

Benefits on the corn contracts will be made in two payments, the first 15 cents a bushel after signing the contract, and the second 20 cents per bushel on proof of compliance with the contract. The payments on hogs are made in two installments of $7.50 per head on the 10 per cent reduction.

Restrictions on planting crops on contract acreages will be somewhat less stringent than in 1934. Each contract signer should talk with his local committee or with the county agricultural agent about the planting restrictions. The restrictions are subject to change by the secretary of agriculture in case of any necessity such as last year's drought.

Any bona fide producer is eligible to sign a contract. Owners of farm land who have ceased the production of hogs or corn can not sign contracts nor obtain benefit payments. Producers who did not sign contracts last year can do so this year if they wish.

We will store your batteries until the first of April and have them charged ready for use for $1.00. Sunoco Oil Station—4t2.

DISTRICT HEALTH UNIT BULLETIN

Prevention of Disease by Sanitary Measures and by Cleanly Habits

In 1933 two Michigan cities have found that typhoid fever is still not a conquered disease; and that there must be no let-up in the application of sanitary measures if the disease is to be kept in control.

Not only typhoid fever, but septic sore throat, undulant fever, tuberculosis and dysentery may be spread through contaminated milk or foods that are eaten raw. They may be prevented to a large extent by proper care of water and food supplies. It is up to the public health authorities in any community to see that the sanitary measures required for this care are carried out.

Raw milk should never be used from sources which are not approved by the State Bureau of Dairying of the State Department of Agriculture and by the District Health Department. In times of epidemic all water should be boiled and no food should be eaten raw except fruits, which should be peeled after being washed carefully in water. Typhoid vaccine may be given as a preventative to individuals whenever there is an epidemic of that disease; but still better, one should routinely receive the vaccine at least every three years.

Food should not be bought for children from street carts or from counters where it is exposed to dirt and dust and flies.

Tuberculosis is not rare in childhood. It is commonly contracted in one of two ways: (1) Either the child has come in contact with some person who has tuberculosis or (2) he has been given milk from tuberculous cows, although this is not common in this area. The child's health should not be endangered by allowing him to come in contact with any person with tuberculosis. Such a person may infect a child directly through the germs in the droplets of spray that he coughs out, or indirectly by germs which are still living on objects which the sick person has handled or in the dust on rugs or floor.

Infants and little children are more susceptible to tuberculosis than other children. They should not live in the same household with a person who has tuberculosis if arrangements can possibly be made for them to live elsewhere. It is a good idea to keep your child away from any person who is coughing, for a chronic cough may mean tuberculosis at any age.

By all means use milk from an approved source. Milk from cows which have been tuberculin tested should be used when obtainable. If raw milk is bought, or if there is any question whether the milk has been properly pasteurized or not, the best safeguard is to boil it. For all children under two, all milk, whether pasteurized or not, should be boiled.

Disease germs may be carried into the body on things put into the mouth, and children should learn early not to pick up things from the floor or street and put into their mouths; not to suck fingers, pencils or other objects; and not to exchange mouth organs, bubble pipes, candy, etc. Dirty hands are carriers of disease. Children should be taught to wash their hands before eating and after going to the toilet.

A mother caring for anyone with a communicable disease must be careful not to carry it to others in the family. It is best for her to wear a long-sleeved apron while in the sickroom and take it off when she goes out. On leaving the sickroom she should wash her hands carefully before touching food or caring for other children, and she should avoid intimate contact with them, such as kissing.

This is the sort of practice that has cut down, and will continue to cut down, the ravages of the communicable disease.

LEGION ACTIVITIES

By F. V. Tyler

Final check-up in the membership contest and the feed to be put on by the losing side has been postponed until Tuesday, February 19th, owing to the illness of "Captain" Charles Hamlin.

Those members who have found the dug-out rather chilly around the edges, these cold days, can be reassured. Due to the ingenuity and kindness of the past commander, "Spike" Goss, an electric fan has been set up behind the stove and works like a charm. Warm air is circulated to every corner of the room and for the last two meetings the circle around the stove has widened out almost to the wall.

WORK RELIEF RESUMED IN COUNTY

TEN PROJECTS STARTED SINCE FEBRUARY 1

Welfare Officials Expect to Employ 700 Men Within Next 10 Days as Work Broadens

With completion of arrangements by the county to assume its share of work relief financing for 1935, operations of the work relief department of the welfare commission are again under way.

A total of 121 men had been returned to work on projects in the East Jordan and Charlevoix divisions Wednesday, 300 were expected to be at work by Friday and approximately 700 within the next 10 days. Work in the Boyne City division, held up until re-investigation is completed, is expected to be resumed on or before March 1. A shut-down in the Charlevoix and East Jordan districts for the same purpose is anticipated later, but probably for a shorter period.

Charlevoix county now has 48 active projects out of 100 originally approved, according to D. T. McHugh, director of work relief. Fifty-two projects have been completed. On the active list as such projects as the Boyne City water front, north shore road at Walloon lake, landscaping lake shore drive on Beaver Island, Boyne City high school renovation, Charlevoix sanitary sewer, East Jordan high school, Whiting Memorial Park, municipal recreation park at Charlevoix, Ironton school, North Bay school, Boyne Falls street job, Young State Park, Walloon Lake school, well at Undine school, East Jordan Sportsmen's park, East Jordan street repairs, the new municipal dock at Charlevoix, curb, gutter and paving at Boyne City, repairs at Charlevoix county infirmary and sewage disposal system at same institution, three nutritional projects in Charlevoix, Boyne City and East Jordan; surplus food distribution, Afton school, cleaning up East Jordan city dump to make site available for garden purposes; driving well at Undine school, re-indexing and filing old county records; repairs and painting Advance school; repairing and redecorating Legion home and county welfare office; municipal ice rink at East Jordan; alterations in community building at East Jordan; two sewing projects for making of comforters, sheets, etc.; maintenance of municipal skating rink at Charlevoix. In addition there are 11 road jobs and two ditching projects.

Ten projects have been started since February 1st and others will soon be underway out of the list outlined above, which give an excellent picture of the diversified program approved for Charlevoix county.

The Masons were winners of the fifth game of the Masonic-Odd Fellow cribbage contest Monday night by the largest score tallied by either side since the series started.

Scoring 18,903 points to 18,703 by their opponents, the Masons increased their lead to 286 points. The Masons have led the series since the first game, although Monday night's margin gave them the greatest advantage they have had so far. KIPMEN WIN AGAIN FROM BOYNE CITY

SCORED 23 TO 10 VICTORY FRIDAY NIGHT

Reserves Win Thriller in Overtime Contest—Charlevoix Plays at East Jordan This Week

In a game featured by the defensive play of both teams, Charlevoix high school basketeers defeated Boyne City 23 to 10 at the local gymnasium Friday night. It was the second victory over Boyne for the Kipmen this season.

Play was on even terms in the first quarter with both teams tallying 5. Charlevoix added 7 points in the second and 5 more in the third to gain a 17 to 5 advantage entering the final quarter. Charlevoix scored 6 and Boyne 5 points in the last period.

Boyne's defense stood out, but was not sufficiently strong to keep the Kipmen from filtering through for occasional short shots. The visitors were never able to break Charlevoix's defense at any stage of the game, scoring but three goals and the balance of their points from the foul line. A total of seventeen fouls were called by Referee Tabraham, nine on Charlevoix and eight on Boyne.

Carey, center, scored 11 points for Charlevoix. Schwab accounted for 5, Radle 3, Pearl and Foster each 2. Kujawski and Green were high for Boyne with 5 and 4 points, respectively.

Charlevoix's reserves nosed out the Boyne seconds by a score of 22 to 18 in a thrilling preliminary which went one overtime period. The count was knotted 18-all at the close of the regulation playing period.

The Kipmen play their last game away from home prior to the district tournament this week. They go to East Jordan for the first of two contests Friday night, and then return to the home for contests with Harbor and East Jordan on succeeding weeks.

WINTER PROGRAM SATURDAY EVENT

MILD WEATHER FAILS TO HALT ACTIVITIES

Skiing Contests, Speed Skating Races and Fancy Ice Exhibitions—Fine Entertainment

Charlevoix staged a winter sports program Saturday that was successful from an entertainment standpoint despite adverse weather conditions. A forty-degree temperature and bright sun was ideal for spectators, but made conditions for sports unfavorable.

Lyle Ross was winner of the dog sled race in the morning from a field of eight starters. Kenneth Staley's entry took second place.

Fred Hardy, who has figured prominently in skiing competition for several years, won the ski contest at Mt. McSauba. A slow track hampered the contestants and eliminated tobogganing entirely. Hardy, scored on the basis of distance, had 136 points to 133 for John Zeitler, who won second place. Hardy's longest jump was 70 feet and Zeitler's 67.

Skating races scheduled for afternoon were held in the evening due to soft ice. Members of the Livingston family took four of five first places in the events. Results were as follows:

Boys 9 to 12 years: 1st Archie Livingston; 2nd Robt. Gill.

Boys 12 to 15 years: 1st, Archie Livingston; 2nd, Charles Mayhew.

Boys 15 to 18 years; 1st, Robt. Livingston; 2nd, Robert Barnes, Petoskey.

Men's free-for-all: 1st, Charles Kleinhenz, Petoskey; 2nd, David Livingston, Charlevoix.

Petoskey's group of speed skaters, in charge of Don Barnes, included Nick VanZon, Dean Sumner, Charles Kleinhenz, Robert Burnes, Carl Giles and Stanley Malec.

The program closed with a fine exhibition of fancy and figure skating by a group of Petoskey visitors and local performers, which included Miss Frances Marshall and Bob Ashdon. The exhibition brought unqualified praise from a large crowd witnessing the program.

TWO CANDIDATES FOR MAYOR WITHDRAW

E. J. Kihbe and L. P. Adams Remain in Republican Field

Two withdrawals since the filing deadline last Tuesday has reduced the Republican field of candidates for mayor to two.

The petitions of Arthur Bergeon and Dr. F. F. McMillan have been withdrawn, leaving the contest between E. J. Kibbe, veteran second ward alderman, and Leonard P. Adams, a new-comer in city political circles.

As a result, the ballot for the March primary will be a short one. Only the names of the two Republican candidates for mayor and alderman will appear. There are no contests for other city offices, nor for supervisor in any of the wards, and consequently the names of the candidates for these offices will not be printed on the ballot.

Due to lack of contests Charlevoix county will not have a primary election.

HARBOR TO HAVE 70-MILE PER HOUR BOB-SLED TRACK

Speed up to 70 miles an hour will be attainable on the Bull Moose bob-sled course nearing completion at Harbor Springs, it was said. Bad news for the sledders was seen, however, in the announcement that the city would not provide trucks to haul the heavy bobs back up the mile and a quarter slide. A cinder path up is under construction.

PETOSKEY WINTER PROGRAM READY

EIGHTH ANNUAL CARNIVAL OPENS FRIDAY

Long List of Outdoor Events Scheduled to Start—Many Outside Visitors Expected

PETOSKEY, Feb. 6—From a magnificent ice throne overlooking the Petoskey Winter Sports Park, Eleanor Buell, charming 16-year-old brunette, will reign over the Eighth Annual Michigan Winter Sports Carnival from February 8th to 17th.

Murray D. Van Wagoner, state highway commissioner, will place the crown on Queen Eleanor's bronze tresses on the evening of February 8th in the first outdoor event of the 1935 carnival.

Colorful pageantry in which 60 girls, all attired in bright-hued winter sports suits, will participate, will mark the coronation. Stanley Kellogg, rising young sculptor who has studied with Lorado Taft, has constructed a snow and ice throne 120 feet in length and 36 feet high as a setting for the coronation. Petoskey's fancy skaters, attired in costume, will participate in the ceremonies amid a great fireworks display.

Ten days of winter sports are offered in the program for the 1935 carnival which opens with a luncheon on February 8th. In the afternoon a hockey game between Traverse City and Petoskey will take place on the enlarged rink in the Winter Sports Park.

Snowshoe trips, general skating and skiing and tobogganing will be enjoyed at the park throughout the day which climaxes with the coronation in the evening.

On Saturday morning there will be a junior hockey game and a one-runner jumper contest, a sport unique in Petoskey. Speed skating races, for local competition only, will be staged in the afternoon. At night the mock coronation of King Winter, the comedy highlight of the carnival, will take place at the park.

Sunday the park will be closed until 1:30 p. m., so that the ice and slides may be prepared for the afternoon and evening events. Amateur skiing events, a hockey game between Grand Rapids and Petoskey, an exhibition of fancy and figure skating by members of the Petoskey Figure Skating Club and other attractions will be staged in the afternoon. Francoins Jollineau, champion straight-blade figure skater, will give special exhibitions.

Every day of the week special attractions are planned along with the general winter sports.

The second big week-end opens on February 15th with the Winter Ball at the high school gymnasium. The main social attraction of the carnival, the ball will draw attendance from all over northern Michigan.

On Saturday the regional speed skating competition will take place with special prizes offered the winners. In the evening there will be a Mardi Gras on ice at the park with awards for costumes. On Sunday the regional championship skiing and figure skating competition will take place at the park along with a hockey game between Alpena and Petoskey.

SUNDAY DINNER SUGGESTIONS
By Ann Page

Meat prices, with the exception of beef, have eased slightly in the past week. Eggs too, are a little cheaper; but there is no prospect of lower butter prices. Imported New Zealnnd butter may prevent native butter from going higher.

Potatoes are the outstanding food value this week. Cheap potatoes are a boon to the low food budget for they are nourishing and satisfying. Other root vegetables, cabbage and lettuce are the next best fresh vegetable values.

Good grnpefruit continues to be cheap. The first Florida Valencia oranges are coming to market, but they will be less plentiful than anticipated because of the December freeze. Several varieties of apples are inexpensive. Strawebrries are fnirly plentiful and moderate in price.

Here are three menu suggestions which are timely and suited to three budget levels:

Low Cost Dinner

Pork Chops with Apples and Onions
Mashed Potatoes Cole Slaw
Bread and Butter
Rice Custard with Rnisins
Tea or Coffee Milk

Medium Cost Dinner

Roast Pork Pnn-Browned Potatoes
Creamed Cabbage
Bread and Butter
Sliced Oranges with Coconut
Tea or Coffee Milk

Very Special Dinner

Consomme Julienne
Baked Ham Parsley Potatoes
Cauliflower in Cream
Waldorf Salad
Rolls nnd Butter
Lemon Meringue Pie
Coffee Milk

CHARLEVOIX COUNTY WINS STATE AWARDS

Placed Second in Potato Displays at M. S. C. Farmers' Week

(By B. C. Mellencamp)

The outstanding achievement at the recent Michigan State Seed Show was the winning of the sweepstakes award in the boys' and girls' club department by Gwendon Hott, East Jordan. This is the second time that this farm boy has won this coveted award. His peck of russet rural potatoes was by far the best peck in this division.

In the county club exhibit which consisted of 5 individual samples, the East Jordnn club won second place. Howard MacDonald won 10th place, Wilbur MacDonald 14th and Elner Olstrom 15th position. The 5th peck shown in this class was exhibited by Robert Reidel, Boyne City.

In the adult division, Fred Korthase, Boyne City, won 1st on a peck of russet burbanks followed closely by Henry Korthase in 2nd place. In the irish cobbler class, Hnrry Behling, Boyne City won 2nd on his peck sample. In the certified seed class, the bushel shown by Lee Sneathen won 3rd place. This sample was a beauty to look at, and failed to win 1st place only because of smaller size.

Charlevoix connty won 2nd place in the county exhibit competiton. Emmet county received 1st place, duplicating their performance at the Gaylord potato show. Within the county exhibits, the peck sample shown by Lee Sneathen won 7th in the open class followed by Albert Omland in 8th, Sneathen Bros. in 9th and Bert Van Hoesen in 12th. The other four exhibits making up the county exhibit of eight pecks were shown by Harry Behling, John Noble, Rowley Williams and Clinton Blanchard.

The show this yenr was somewhat better in both quality and quantity than the 1934 seed show, and it really tnkes the best of exhibits to get n high place at the show. This show represents the last event at which the 1934 potntoes will be shown. A very fine record has been hung up by the Charlevoix county potato exhibitors. Let's hope that another year the same high record can be ntnined.

"Spirit" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Christian Science churches throughout the world on Sunday, February 10th.

Among the Bible citations is this passage (Roman's 8:1,14): "There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not nfter the flesh, but after the Spirit. For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God."

Correlative passages to be read from the Christinn Science textbook, "Science and Henlth with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, include the following (p. 265): "Man understands spiritual existence in proportion ns his treasures of Truth and Love are enlarged. Mortals must gravitate Godwnrd, their affections and aims grow spiritual—they must near the brnnder interpretations of being, and gain some proper sense of the Infinite—in order that sin and mortality may be put off."

Dr. Lydia Ann Lynde Child Care Specialist Makes Second Appearance

The county child study groups will meet agnin Wednesday, Februnry 13th, to continue the study of children's problems. Dr. Lydia Ann Lynde will meet the group in the east of the county Wednesdny afternoon at 2:00 o'clock at the Boyne Falls community rooms, and parents in the Charlevoix area in the high school, Wednesday evening ut 7:30. At both meetings a generni discussion will take place, nnd individual conferences with parents over their own particular problems.

Some of the major problems to be considered at these two meetings will have to do with the school grades, annoying children, adolescents who do not ngree with their parents and teaching children the habit of getting ready on time. It is hoped that the parents who attended the first lecture will invite their friends and neighbors to hear the second lecture. Do not forget thnt fathers are just as cordially invited to hear Mrs. Lynde as are mothers. These lectures are entirely free, and are sponsored by the extension service of the Michigan State College. The Charlevoix P. T. A. are cooperating splendidly in this project, and I nm sure they welcome your attendance for the regular monthly meeting, and especially to have the opportunity of hearing this national authority on child care and training.

UNIQUE GRIDIRON SQUAD

Football in Denmark made history when a German team composed entirely of brothers met a Danish eleven near Copenhagen. The brothers are named Muntze and they hailed from Brauchhausen. They walked onto the field led by their father who, himself an enthusiastic footballer, initiated his sons into the game as soon as each could toddle. It was the first time the team had left their own country, though they had traveled much in Germany; and both father and mother Muntze accompanied the boys. Many at the game found the critical anxiety and swelling pride of father Muntze and the wistful absorption of mother Muntze at least as pleasant and diverting to watch as the game itself. They were genuinely sorry when the gallant eleven, in spite of excellent team work, was beaten 7 to 2.

Velvet Hostess Gown Is Favorite

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

EVERY hostess owes it to herself and to her home to look her most charming when entertaining, and the way to do it is to wear velvet. This call for gowns not too formal and not too informal, which shall "add to the picture" of one's home environment, flings a challenge to designers to create dramatic effects which shall be in a class all their own. The result is that some very marvelous things are being accomplished in most picturesque fashion. For these lovely garments which gracious ladies wear in their homes, velvet has unmistakably proved a favorite medium.

Typical of the newest trends in hostess gowns are the three lovely fashions pictured. The center model, which is so sweetly simple yet so utterly sophisticated when it comes to meeting the demands of a fastidious mode, is fashioned of white transparent velvet with flowing sleeves of chiffon-lined red ombre velvet, the same dyed by hand. The godet in the side of the skirt is treated in the same way.

The cunning with which shirring is manipulated at the back of the bodice of the striking hostess gown, to the left in the group, is enough to cause one to order her dressmaker to go and do likewise when designing the next formal dress. If the lady in the picture would turn around a high cowl front would be seen, in contrast to the low-cut décolleté at the back. A double silver cord girdles the waistline with heavy silver tassels finishing at the front.

A daring color scheme glorifies the sumptuous hostess gown to the right in the picture. Red velvet and gold cord is the formula for this beauteous creation. The neckline is gathered on a gold cord which is repeated at the front of the gold braid girdle.

It is good style to use contrasting velvets for the hostess gown. We have in mind such fetching combinations as dark green velvet with a bright tangerine velvet girdle, also tangerine facings for the long winglike sleeves. Black with aquamarine blue, also black fuchsia with cerise, are likable color alliances.

One of fashion's latest whims is the tailored velvet hostess gown which has a shirtwaist top. A very effective model answering this description is made shirtwaist fashion of french blue velvet, the skirt, of course, being floor length with a tendency to trail slightly. There are touches of coral at throat and at waistline.

Then there is the hostess gown with the peasant waist top. So called since its neckline gathers up on a drawstring. The full bishop sleeves are embroidered in brilliant peasant colors.

A new feature is the velvet gown with quilted cordings, or more ornate motifs which are fantastically quilted both on the sleeves and at the neckline, also here and there about the hemline. Speaking of hemlines the new slashed effects are as popular for hostess gowns as for evening dresses.

SILVER AND WHITE

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

The hue and cry for white with silver is heard throughout all fashionland. This lovely evening dress is made of white and silver lame. A new way to wear orchids, as you plainly can see is to tuck them through your belt and wear them to the side.

Dress Accessories Follow Up Closely Ensemble Idea

The ensemble is now being followed more closely than ever in the line of dress accessories. Colpel, of Paris shows ensembles composed of a handbag and the little sports jacket to match in the same supple brown kid leather that are both fastened with heavy buttons in imitation tortoise shell. Many of these buttons are in square shapes.

At the same house is a handbag and gloves to match in supple leather in two shades of deep and lighter brown. Both the frame of the handbag and the glove cuffs were fastened by a clip in brown plastic material combined with dull gold metal. A model quite similar, had the clips replaced by the wearer's initials.

DRESSMAKERS MAKE OUTFITS FOR BEACH

All the dressmakers are concentrating on beach outfits and ski ensembles. They have done about all they can in the regular town and country ensembles for morning, afternoon and evening. The sunset set, incidentally, either is frolicking in the snow, or splashing in the Mediterranean, or getting ready to do so.

Madame Georgette Renal has made a popular beach ensemble of white linen, printed all over with sailor caps in blue and red. The red caps have blue pompons and the blue ones red ones. The blouse buttons in front in the form of a wide panel with two large pearl buttons on each side. The shorts are plain white linen and there is a jaunty looking jacket to keep the sunburn off the back and arms. Bright red wooden sandals with wide bands of blue canvas complete the outfit.

Shoe Fashion World Comes Out With Some New Ideas

New shoes take us in pleasant paths. Extreme, toeless slippers are out of favor for the nonce, and the pump returns, more high cut than of yore. A new shoe is in navy blue suede with a very high throat. It is trimmed with navy blue kid draped up the sides of the midfoot. The heels are of blue kid. The same shoe is made in deep wine red and dark green. Colored shoes for town in the winter is a new and nice departure. For southern wear there is a beige antelope slipper, high and smooth in front, with a button fastening over the big cut-out at the side. It is piped in black patent leather, which, in turn, is piped with narrow silver.

For Evening

Some of the very newest evening gowns are to be seen in those well-known neutral shades of beige and gray. Both are observed in their most delicate tone and in such materials as satin, chiffon and moire.

Veiled Sequins

If sequins annoy with too much luster their glory can be dimmed with a chiffon veiling. Belong applies this trick to an afternoon dress of dark blue crepe.

REAL WORTH IN "CHILD HOBBY"

Parents and Other Grown-Ups Can Benefit Thereby.

Children are running on the Hobby platform. In The Parents' Magazine Ernest Elmo Calkins urges grown-ups to pledge their support to a recreational program in which very young persons are the major interest, because, as the gentleman puts it:

"The biggest benefit new leisure can confer on you is the opportunity to become acquainted with your children—or, if you have none, with any children."

In the opinion of Mr. Calkins, who has had sixty-seven years in which to garner knowledge, adults who ignore the chance or fail to qualify as playmates for the children miss more than they can know, by not learning how a child's mind unfolds, how it adjusts itself to a new world, full of surprises, a world that the child frequently recreates in his own image.

We grown-ups have our motor cars, our radio sets, our bridge cards and backgammon boards to amuse us; the children have their toys. Play, however, is something wholly apart from playthings. It is a spirit, a state of mind, an attitude toward the surrounding world: It does not exist in tangible things but in the imagination. Evidently it is something which grown-ups have lost and may find again only by playing with children on the latter's own terms.

It was so long ago, though, that we grown-ups put away childish things. What do we remember about the child's world of trees, and birds, and stars? How, then, can we suddenly think as a little child; how make ourselves agreeable playfellows and not interloping hindrances to be gotten rid of as soon as possible?

It's up to us to find the clue in the memories of our own childhood. One thing is sure, all our business and professional knowledge, all our skill at golf or contract, will avail us little.

"Learning to be interesting to your child requires a great deal more than the ability to appraise a rare postage stamp or a piece of glass," says Mr. Calkins. "While you are working out what to do, Grown-ups, here are a few 'must nots': You must not stoop to conquer, you must not pretend, you must not domineer, you must not laugh at, but with, the youngster.

"People bring lots of time and patience to bear in cultivating the friendship of dog, bird, or horse. Try it on a child," says Mr. Calkins. "It is an exhilarating experience, with more variety than gardening, woodwork, collecting, or travel."

New Theory Put Forth to Explain Bird Flight

Flight of birds as a kind of rocket action, like that imagined for stratosphere rockets or for the still more fantastic vehicles conceived as traveling some day to other planets or to the stars, is a new idea proposed in France by Dr. E. Batault, life-long student of bird behavior.

A bird's muscles are larger and stronger in proportion than the muscles of animals which do not fly, but Doctor Batault says there is no proof that this difference is great enough to justify the conventional flight theories. Gliding flight is easy to explain, on the same basis of taking advantage of air currents as is used by human aviators, but this does not account for abilities of birds to do many things inexplicable by gliding; for example, to rise in still air.

Doctor Batault's new theory is that the feathers of a bird's moving wing create a continuous stream of air backward along the wing surface, like the exhaust gases of an airplane engine or the gaseous discharge of a rocket. The forward reaction created by this he believes to be the force that drives the bird ahead. Calculations of the muscular force necessary require forces much smaller than those needed by the conventional theories and more in line with what a bird's muscles actually produce.

A Doctor Knows!

And doctors use a liquid laxative

There's a very good reason why doctors and hospitals have always used liquid laxatives! You'd use a liquid, too, if you knew how much better it makes you feel.

A liquid laxative can always be taken in the right amount. You can gradually reduce the dose. Reduced dosage is the secret of real and safe relief from constipation.

Just ask your own doctor about this. Ask your druggist how popular liquid laxatives have become. The right liquid laxative gives the right kind of help, and the right amount of help. When the dose is repeated, instead of more each time, you take less. Until the bowels are moving regularly and thoroughly without any help at all.

People who have experienced this comfort, never return to any form of help that can't be regulated! The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It contains senna and cascara, and these are natural laxatives that form no habit—even in children. Its action is gentle, but sure. It will relieve a condition of biliousness or sluggishness without upset. It's the ideal family laxative because it's a family doctor's prescription, and perfectly safe and effective for family use.

If you are seeking something that will relieve your occasional upsets safely and comfortably, try Syrup Pepsin. Give regulated doses until Nature restores regularity.

SECURITY

A writer in a current magazine explains that the multitudes of Utopians have in mind different schemes to insure security without work, obligation or responsibility and if one is not satisfied with any of the popularly understood plans he can figure one out for himself. The communist's answer to the query as to what he wants is "security" provided by the government, and he does not seem to be discouraged in his zeal by the tyranny in Russia which under communism probably gives less security to its people than any nation in the world, unless "security" means to shoot those who frown on the idea of forfeiting their products and starving to death.

EDUCATION MONTH

February has been designated as "Education Month" in Michigan. Through various channels the work of making Michigan citizens "education-conscious" will be undertaken. Telling the story of our public school system is a most worthy project. We give our interest and support to those things best known to us. The public school in America is an institution of freedom that should ever be encouraged. It has been the torch-bearer through the dark night of ignorance—the sunlight of today's knowledge and understanding. Join in the activities in your community during "Education Month." It will be your direct contribution to better citizenship.

WILL BE A CANDIDATE

We have been informed that William H. Berkey, editor of the Cassopolis Vigilant who is, at present, a member of the State Board of Agriculture, will be a candidate for renomination and re-election and knowing Mr. Berkey as we do, we are more than glad to indorse his candidacy to the limit.

Having been associated with him as a brother editor for nearly a quarter of a century and never having found him lacking in any of the characteristics which make for true manhood; never having found him lined up with things which were in the least bit questionable, and believing him to be a man, honest and straightforward, ready to do his full duty as he sees it, and also a man well versed from actual experience as a farm manager and business man, to serve on the state board of agriculture, we commend him to the electorate of the State of Michigan.

During his term of office he has rendered most valuable service to the Michigan State College in the management of its affairs, which are under the guidance of the board and has given to that institution the same business ability that he has given to his own business, which has marked him as a successful man.

Michigan needs men of his type and we believe he should be returned to the position he has honored for the past years.—Harold Spicer in the Paw Paw Courier-Northerner.

AGRICULTURAL PLANNING

One observer says national planning for agriculture is more difficult than in any other field. Farmers have long been accustomed to making their own plans, deciding the kind of crops to plant and the kinds of livestock to raise. As a rule, the farmer's judgment on what and how much to raise is safer than that of any outsider. The farmer may sometimes be mistaken and accordingly he may lose, but in the long run he will land on his feet more times than he would if he tried to follow the blueprints of a government official who has but superficial knowledge of agriculture and its problems. Besides being impractical, the attempt to regulate farming and live-stock raising from bureau headquarters in Washington would weaken the sturdy fiber that conquered the frontier and wrung rich production out of virgin prairies.—Wayne (Neb.) Herald.

SLIPPERY PAVEMENTS

Sleet, zero temperatures—roads glassy with ice. These make a death-dealing combination to pedestrian and motorist alike. Traffic clogged by weather condition stirs imaginations. The situation is heralded from coast to coast with big black headlines such as "Sub-Zero Wave Sweeps Nation; 40 Die."

That was in only ONE day of bad weather.

But in only ONE day of any weather, sunshines or dark, warm or frigid, 205 people die of tuberculosis in these United States. Every day throughout the year, 205 human beings!

In Michigan alone, says the Michigan Tuberculosis Association, six are marked to die every day of the same disease, to make up the total of 2,348 for the year.

Cooperation and education have practically won the battle against accidents. They can do the same with tuberculosis.

Do your part. Membership in the Michigan Tuberculosis Association is but one dollar per year. Write today to see how large a share of the fight against tuberculosis your dollar will carry.

HOUSECLEANING TIME

The American people believe in a free press, free speech, freedom of religious affiliation and the right to worship God without censorship; they are prepared to defend this triune of liberty with their lives if that be necessary. What they demand for themselves they gladly concede to others. A few days ago representatives of 1,200 daily newspapers met in New York City to discuss a grave situation the freedom of the press had been assailed.

Yet it is safe to say that in every community represented by those newspapers there is greater danger to a free press and free speech than has ever arisen from an administration ruling at Washington. We mean the menace of the communistic movement in the United States, which has had such rapid growth during these depression years. We believe it has reached a point where some drastic action should be taken. When communism begins placing its slimy hands upon the public schools of this nation, the era of good-natured tolerance is at an end.

Why not take these trouble-makers at their own word? Whenever they start their mouthings in the public square, whenever they are apprehended in the act of distributing seditious literature preaching the rule of the worker, why not round them up and send them to that beloved Russia, for which they profess such undying affection. We entered into a treaty with the Soviet Union under the express stipulation that all communistic efforts would be ended in this country. They never kept that promise for a single hour. The American people are through, they are disgusted. If those in authority in this nation are sincere they will at once begin the big round-up; they will load Russia bound ships with this kind of cattle; for once let us assert our rights as citizens of a free and untrammeled nation.

FARMERS' UNION PROGRAM

Representatives of Michigan's youngest farm organization, the Farmers' Union, held a "legislative conference" lately in East Lansing, and adopted resolutions to let the law-makers know their views on certain public policies. The program adopted contained three requests calculated to cause strong difference of opinion even among the farmers. The Farmers' Union declared in favor of the State's making milk distribution a public utility so that farmers might receive cost of production and consumers might buy milk at cost. Opposition developed in the convention, but a majority approved.

The organization would further enlarge the responsibility of the state by having it turn out prison-made school textbooks and farm implements and distribute them at cost.

Those who know rural sentiments as expressed by the various farm groups predict that the Grange, the Farm Bureau and the farmers' clubs will not be likely to endorse the demands of the Farmers' Union, and without the support of these organizations, the legislature will be slow to act in matters of so great importance.—Detroit News.

HELPING SCHOOLS

Where does Christmas Seal money go?

One of the places is represented in almost a year's supply of child health education material already distributed for 1935, from the offices of the Michigan Tuberculosis Association. Where? Among the 10,000 Michigan school teachers who are served in this manner by tuberculosis Christmas Seal funds, entirely without charge.

Lively, interesting, instructive, the pamphlets, courses of study and teaching helps sent out are designed not only to teach the prevention of tuberculosis but a multitude of other childhood disease dangers as well.

For instance, the Michigan Tuberculosis Association's "Six Point System," recently revised, helps the teacher isolated from nursing service to detect and send to their family physician, the children who need care or who will need it shortly if preventive measures are not begun.

Eleven others were sent to the teachers in the mailing just completed recently, but they're not all. All the year 'round, and year in and year out, these same teachers and their students receive the "Wolverine Health Bulletin," an eight-page magazine, published once a month. It's aim, well realized by the contents, is to make healthful living an enjoyable opportunity to benefit all.

Which, in essence, is one of the aims of all Christmas Seal work.

NEEDS YOUR SUPPORT

Governor Frank D. Fitzgerald has probably learned by this time that the highway to reduced cost of government is not a one-way street strewn with frustration, disappointment and despair. His proposal to eliminate two of Michigan's state normal schools as a matter of economy is an excellent illustration. If his plan had been carried out it would have meant an annual saving to Michigan taxpayers of $700,000, without impairment of our higher educational structure. Balked in his original purpose he now seeks a conciliatory agreement whereby certain overlapping activities will be discarded in keep with his cost-reducing program.

When this tax-saving plan was first conveyed to the legislature in his opening message to the law-makers he was assured of the support of Superintendent of Public Instruction Paul F. Voelker until that gentleman made the sudden discovery that opposition to the governor's plan might prove politically smart in certain section. The breeze created by that estimable educator in his haste to get on the opposite side of the picture made the big wind in Ireland a gentle zephyr in comparison.

It seems a strange anumoly to find the friends of education clamoring for millions of additional aid for the distressed schools of the state, yet violently opposing every measure of economy proposed. Opposition to Governor Fitzgerald's program of eliminating costly surplusage in educational activities may find favor in some places, but it is not going to be popular with Mr. John W. Public, who has grown stoop-shouldered during recent years lagging around a tax burden far beyond his ability to meet.

No man was ever inducted into the executive office at Lansing with a more ardent desire in his heart to mitigate excessive tax loads than Wrank Fitzgerald. In trying to carry out hitospf-etaer eetaETAOINNI ry out his oft-repeated pledge to the people he will get exactly nowhere unless he has their full-fledged support. If he fails hte blame will belong to the people whom he is desperately trying to serve. It's about time we quit our hypocrisy—crying aloud for tax relief so long as it was the other fellow who had to bear the sting of the lash—moaning pitifully whenever it touches our interests, the interests of our friends or our friend's friends.

Personally, we see nothing wrong with the slogan that every individual should have some work to do.

PATTERN 9195

Little Miss Molly here can hardly wait to run outside to show her brother Tommy that even though she is "only a girl," she has pockets, too. And she thinks they're nicer than his—scalloped and buttoned the way they are, and plenty jaunty. She's also more than proud of the way she manages to dress herself in this pretty bloomer frock. Three front buttons to fasten—there, it's all done! And her mother likes those cunning puffed sleeves and the long inverted pleat, back and front. For those who prefer them, simple cap sleeves like those in the smaller

TRUE DETECTIVE STORY

by Vance Wynn © Public Ledger

The Man Who Cut the Wires

SOME years ago Pittsburgh was much wrought up over the robbery of a safe belonging to the Union Express company.

One hundred thousand dollars was taken from the receptacle, and no one knew how it had been done.

The safe came into the Union station in the usual manner, locked and guarded, and was conveyed to the office of the company in the custody of armed men.

But the messenger, who was supposed to be in charge of the valuable property, could not be found.

That fact, however, gave a clew upon which the authorities were able to start an investigation.

Thomas Furlong, one of the ablest railroad detectives in the United States, was put upon the case, and the first question he asked was the name of the messenger who had charge of the safe when it left the other end of the line.

That was easily answered. The man was J. J. Bingham, not only a reliable employee, but a brother of the superintendent of the express company.

"Find Bingham," said Furlong, curtly.

He was found very readily at his home and was just as much astonished to hear of the robbery as the officials had been.

But he was able to give Furlong some significant information.

He said that he had received a telegram the day before from his brother, George Bingham, which directed him to look out for the new messenger, "J. C. Brooks."

The telegram added:

"Meet him at Templeton, en route. Turn over cash and valuables to him and take receipt for same. Then report to superintendent at Parkesburg, who will give you further orders."

Obedience to orders was ingrained in J. J. Bingham, and he did exactly what he was told to do in the telegram.

The suspicion that anything was wrong never occurred to him.

The men in the service were used to being shifted at short notice.

He did not find the superintendent at Parkesburg in his office, and had gone home to change his clothes.

The telegram was a forgery.

Detective Furlong made his decision quickly. He determined to go to Templeton to get the lay of the land.

While he was walking around the station he came across a little girl, sitting on a log.

He got into conversation with the child and she remarked that he was not the first stranger that had been in town in the last two days.

Questioned further, she said another man had been there and had torn a sheet of paper into little bits and thrown them behind the station.

By rare good fortune Furlong found the scraps of paper. He got down on his hands and knees and gathered them, and after that he went into the station, and, by the use of mucilage and a fresh sheet, managed to paste them together.

The result was a blank check on a bank at Carlisle.

But that was not all. While Furlong was doing his Sherlock Holmes act he found a little pocket telegraph instrument.

In itself it meant nothing.

In connection with other things it meant everything.

The detective hastened to Carlisle, where he continued his inquiries.

He talked to the station agent and wanted to know if there was a telegraph operator in town.

There was one by the name of Macauley and only a few days before he had been inquiring where he was likely to obtain a small instrument.

In less than a week Furlong had reconstructed the whole affair.

Macauley, a shiftless character, needed money.

He conceived the idea of robbing the express company.

Getting his telegraph instrument and ascertaining the name of the messenger who would be on duty with the safe of valuables, he had gone to a lonely spot in the wood near Kittanning.

He cut the wire and connected it with his pocket instrument.

He sent the telegram to Bingham, met him at the appointed place and then proceeded with the safe to Pittsburgh.

Having been given the keys, he opened the safe en route and rifled it of the valuables.

Then he locked it and accompanied it to the Smoky city and saw it loaded on the express wagon and started on its destination, duly guarded.

Before reaching the office he slipped away and disappeared with the loot.

The search for him went almost around the world, and he died before being brought to trial.

Skunk Given Rating as Friend of the Farmer

Investigation by the United States bureau of biological survey shows that the main diet of skunks consists of grasshoppers, crickets, beetles, mice, rats, ground squirrels, pocket gophers and sometimes stems of succulent plants. They are not averse to a ground bird if they can catch them, and now and then, they are caught raiding a farm chicken house. However, bureau of biological survey reports show that skunks rarely make these raids, preferring to do their hunting at distances from the haunts of men.

Although usually safe because of its protective "smell-gun," the skunk sometimes falls victim to wolves, coyotes, foxes, badgers, and great-horned owls.

The general color of the skunk is black with a thin white stripe between the eyes. This stripe forks at the shoulders and continues along the sides until it reaches the tail. The tail is furred with black hairs with white bases, and ends usually in a white tuft. There is much variation in width of these stripes, trappers preferring pelts with the narrower stripes.

Skunks vary in size, but usually weigh from five to ten pounds. Their black and white markings, size and bushy tails make skunks one of the easiest fur-bearing animals to recognize.

LET'S GET MICHIGAN'S SHARE OF FOUR BILLION

How much will Michigan get of the new $4,880,000,000 asked by President Roosevelt to speed recovery?

It is the most vital question of the moment to this state, long distressed and long deprived of its just dues in the disbursement of previous Federal relief funds.

The answer rests with city and village councils, township and county boards and other units of government to whom the Michigan State Planning Commission the past week delivered a questionnaire. It is the beginning of an inventory of public works possibilities in this state—and this community.

The Commission, appointed by Governor Fitzgerald, is headed by A. R. Clancy, nationally known engineer and industrialist. Its task is to obtain before February 11th, or as near that date as possible, a complete picture of potential public works in Michigan on which the state can base its demands for a fair share of the giant sum soon to be released.

When the information is in hand, the Commission's staff of engineer's architects, road builders and other specialists will grade the projects in the order of their importance, legitimacy, the immediacy of employment offered by them or their long-term value, etc. The Commission, in turn, has been asked to make its recommendations to Governor Fitzgerald in time for their submission to the National Resources Board at Washington by March 1st.

It is important to note that the signing of the questionnaire does not commit any community to go ahead with the projects it may list. The plan is a census of possible work. It gives every community a chance to be heard. Thirdly, it will enable Michigan to speak with the vigor and audibility of a united state and to place before the Administration a comprehensive list of feasible projects within its boundaries which might be carried out if Federal money, by outright grant or otherwise, is made available.

If Michigan has fared badly in the past the loss must be borne. It is a dead issue, however. What concerns all of us now is that the state shall not be slighted or stinted in the disbursal of the enormous new fund.

Because of the urgency of the situation, this newspaper asks local officials to give the State Planning Commission its full and immediate co-operation.

DOUBTFUL

The promtpness with which Governor Fitzgerald named Joseph C. Armstrong, of Detroit, to succeed W. Alfred Ilebo as state commissioner of pardons and paroles is sufficient indication that the liberal policy of the Comstock administration in opening prison doors for convicted men is going to be replaced by a far more stern and restricted policy in dealing with this class of society.

During the past two years considerable suspicion developed that criminals, back by influential friends and money, had but little dificulty working their way to freedom. Governor Fitzgerald has asked the incoming legislature for the creation of a pardon and paroles commission, to be composed of men capable of determining the prisoner's fitness to rejoin society. It is a most sensible request. With the formation of such a commission much of the suspicion which surrounds a prisoner's release will be eliminated—we still cling to the herd instinct in dealing with our social problems.

Unless thoroughly curbed right at the beginning it is doubtful if Armstrong's appointment will prove satisfactory, even to the governor himself. We say this in a spirit of absolute fairness. During his three terms in the legislature Armstrong led the fight for a capital punishment law in this state. He has an unyielding "eye for an eye" complex in dealing with the wrongdoer, and while the average citizen believes in stern punishment promptly administered, at the same time he is not in favor of a system of legalized vengeance conspicuous in previous administrations. Society found to its sorrow that that was not the correct answer to our crime problems. A commission such as the governor asks, giving its full time to the study of each individual case wholly upon its merits, would minimize much of the harm that unrelenting and unforgiving treatment of the anti-social is certain to produce.

KEEP BREEDING STOCK

Meat supplies are going to be short within the near future. Live stock prices are going to be high in proportion to grain prices, possibly by next fall and certainly by that time if we have a big corn crop next year.

Owners of flocks and herds who are short of feed should think twice before they sell their breeding stock too short. It is a good time to cull the herd closely, but it is no time to liquidate if that can possibly be avoided. Breeding cows will do amazingly well on roughage alone, if that roughage is of good quality.

If a farmer is forced to buy feed, it requires courage to pay present prices, but if it is necessary to do that in order to hold a breeding herd the transaction will surely be justified within a year. The owner will have to wait for the dividends on his feed investment, but they will come eventually. — The Prairie Farmer.

PNEUMONIA WEATHER

The sharp increase in the number of deaths from pneumonia in and about Detroit in the last three weeks is deplorable. But it is not a thing to be surprised at.

We are having pneumonia weather, and in an aggravated form. The sharp changes in temperature, the extreme cold followed by extreme dampness, and the wetness under foot are a combination which are a tax on any human being; and are a pitfall for the heedless or reckless.

On top of this we have just emerged from the holiday season during which the temptation to neglect health precaulions in order to celebrate more extensively than wisely have been great.

Over eating, under sleeping and allied indulgences have immensely aided the weather in taking toll.

The end is not yet. But you need not be a victim. Take care of your cold. Get plenty of sleep. Guard against avoidable depletion of your vital forces and powers of resistance. As far as you can, keep clear of infection.

And if you become ill get a doctor, stay home, and go to bed.

Pneumonia loves to get hold of a tired, worn out, run down person with a neglected cold.—Detroit Free Press.

AN APPALLING LOSS

During the first ten months of 1934 the appalling number of 1,072 persons in Michigan lost their lives in motor accidents, an increase of 21 per cent over the corresponding months of 1933, topping even the all-time high record of the country as a whole. Why discuss the reason for this criminal disregard for human life? Nine out of every ten accidents resulting in loss of life are caused by careless driving. Michigan has a driver's financial liability law, yet a new accident peak is reached. In the seclusion of our homes we seek to find some remedy for this situation, only to go out and witness some fool driver tearing down the highway at an 80-mile clip, regardless of traffic or driving conditions. The only remedy seems an aroused public opinion against the reckless operator of a motor vehicle. Even under a campaign of this nature accidents will cantinue. Nature prevents any substitution of brains in place of what they are now toting around inside their skulls.

WHERE WILL IT LEAD?

We note that one of the strong arguments in favor of government ownership and operation of electric light and power plants is that electricity is so universally used. If the universal use of any commodity means that production and sale of that commodity should be taken over by the government, then food and clothing should come ahead of electricity. Perhaps the government should go into the grocery business; that is as reasonable as having the government engage in any other business. Think what a lot of jobs it would make if the government went into business in all lines which are universally used, such as groceries, shoes, clothing, furniture, etc., with factories to produce breakfast foods; overalls, soap and tooth paste and what have you? Those who are thinking of government ownership of utilities because of their universal use should think a bit further and see just what that could and would lead to.—Cassopolis Vigilent.

"MEN AT WORK"

For years unemployment has furnished the topic for endless discussion by our people. In the midst of depression travail it has always been a refreshing sight when traveling the highways to encounter those warning signs: "Men at Work!" Although our running time was considerably lowered while passing these construction areas, who among us has not thrilled at the spectacle of Michigan workers gainfully employed;—men freed from the destructive influences of charity; men once more able to support their families, just as every worthwhile American citizen desires to provide for those he loves.

Eighty per cent of every dollar spent for new highway construction goes to labor. Beginning July 1 the national government will return to the old Post Road system plan for state highway aid. Michigan's share will total $3,800,000, provided it is matched dollar for dollar with state highway funds. That does not mean the entire amount must be made available at one time, but can be spread over a period of 12 months. Legislative allocations, together with certain fixed expenses, leaves less than one million dollars in the highway fund each year for new construction purposes.

Before legislative adjournment provision to take advantage of the national highway plan, should be provided. With $7,600,000 for new cement roads more than 228 million work hours will be given Michigan labor in every part of the state. Michigan must contribute its share to the national fund even if not a single dollar should ever find its way back. What the legislative decision should be under such circumstances ought to be obvious to every thinking citizen.

RURAL REPRESENTATION

There can be no question as to the attitude of Michigan's small cities, towns and rural districts toward Governor Fitzgerald's proposal for reducing the number of legislators by one-half. This is reapportionment in its worst form. A straight-forward recommendation that the legislature consider the subject of reapportionment would have represented full compliance with his obligation to uphold the Constitution and his campaign platform. No one could have offered any reasonable objection to that.

But it is clear that the proposal of a reduced legislature not only would reapportion, but would also create legislative districts so large that rural and small town influence would be almost entirely eliminated from both Houses.

We mention this, not for the purpose of chiding the Governor upon one small part of a document of state that is highly constructive, but rather to re-emphasize that the interests of the townships and small municipalities are best served by retaining the present plan of districting the House.

If serious consideration is to be given to an amendment of the Constitutional provisions for redistricting the state for legislative representation, we suggest that retention of the present House districts be made a part of the plan.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at druggists. ©1931 C. M. Co.

ORDERS TAX PUT ON ALL LIQUORS

Fitzgerald Will Collect 3 Per Cent on All Sales After Feb. 1

Under orders from Gov. Fitzgerald, John S. McDonald, chairman of the liquor control commission, set in motion machinery to collect the three per cent sales tax on all liquors sold in Michigan.

The governor issued the order effective February 1st on all state stores, specially designated distributors and other retailers.

Beer is included in the order. Liquor by the glass is already taxed and so is omitted from the order.

Gov. Fitzgerald said, "It is high time the state procure this additional revenue because there is nothing against collection of this tax in statutes."

He estimated the tax may net $250,000 to $300,000 a year.

Meanwhile, the senate studied a bill introduced by Sen. Andrew L. Moore, Pontiac, R., providing for a tax on liquors. Moore claims the sales tax act must be amended to cover alcoholic beverages.

RAILROADS CEASE CHARGES OF MANY ITEMS OF BAGGAGE

Junior's velocipede and Betty Jane's doll buggy no longer will be an excess-baggage problem to mother when she travels on Michigan trains, and "Pandemonium," the family pooch, will be only half his former baggage liability, according to Col. Roy C. Vandercook, manager Michigan Railroads' Association. The lines making up the association, he announces, like those elsewhere, have just put into effect a new baggage allowance policy.

Under it parents traveling with small children may now include in their free baggage allowance such articles as baby carriages, go-carts, velocipedes and tricycles on which separate charges heretofore were assessed.

Sportsmen invading the deer, fishing and partridge country also get a break under the new policy as do other outdoor enthusiasts. Guns, fishing rods, golf clubs, etc., bicycles, steamer chairs, sleighs, tobogganss, skiis, snowshoes, camping outfits including boxed provisions and other sporting paraphernalia now enter the category of regular baggage.

The rate on dogs, cats and birds has been cut 50 per cent. Present restrictions as to shape and additional charges for oversize trunks are generally abolished. Single pieces of baggage now may weigh up to 300 lbs. but the present value and weight limits on baggage transported free are continued.

Storage charges at stations on trunks and hand baggage are considerably reduced and the list of destinations to which baggage may be checked for delivery direct to hotels or residences at a moderate charge has been expanded.

Net operating income of U. S. railroads last year was $474,309,206 or about one-third of what it was in 1929.

Increased efficiency in the use of fuel in freight service has saved U. S. railroads nearly a half billion dollars in the last 10 years.

BOYNE CITY HAVING BIG WINTER CARNIVAL

Winter Queen Ball Climaxing Event Thursday Evening

Miss Betty Newville, papular Boyne City high school senior, has been chosen as 1935 Winter Sports Queen. Miss Betty, tall, charming brunette, is the seventeen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Newville of Boyne avenue. The six girls comprising the court of honor are: Virginia Schauh, Maxine Dilworth, Doris McGregor, Catherine Schaeffer, Janette Poirer, and Pauline Deihm.

Races, contests, and exhibitions are being enjoyed each evening this week at the beautifully lighted Forest Lake ice rink. An invitation is extended to friends in neighboring cities to come and enjoy the skating. And if looking for a real thrill, try the "lightning-fast" toboggan slide.

The annual Winter Queen's Ball will climax the week's activities Thursday evening. The high school gymnasium, transfotmed into a winter wonderland setting, will welcome dancers and merry-makers. The party will be officially opened at 10:00 o'clock when, in an impressive coronation ceremony, Queen Betty will receive her crown of honor. From then on, carnival dancing will be enjoyed.

FARMERS GET CROP-HOG CONTROL MONEY

Michigan's Share of Federal Allotment Was $2,729,252

From check-writing in a basement of the Department of Agriculture to nearly 3,000,000 farmers in every state and Puerto Rico has gone $629,614,037 in payments for participation in crop control programs.

Michigan farmers shared $2,729,252 for their participation in the crop control program. Fourteen states received more than Michigan, Texas receiving the most—$80,341,652.

To pay this farm recovery bill, the AAA reported $640,871,403 has been collected in processing taxes on pork, flour, cotton, corn, tobacco, sugar and paper.

Corn-hog raisers got the most, $187,196,042 for limiting their acreage and the litters produced for market last year.

More than 10,000,000 checks have been sent to producers the AAA announced.

Mr. Milliken will be accompanied by a number of Traverse City business men, some of whom have been selected to address the meeting. Dr. C. J. Winder will act as toastmaster.

The secretary-treasurer of the Association will make his annual reports and Dr. Winder, president of the Association, will call for the regular annual election of officers to be held.

Reports from the ticket committee indicate that the attendance will be an unusually good one. A fair representation of the ladies are expected to attend with their men-folks.

MAY USE COPPER FOR CAR PLATES

Claimed Plan Would Re-open State's Idle Copper Mines and Mills

A plan to rehabilitate the copper mining industry of Michigan through the use of copper automobile license plates and road signs will be presented before the legislature shortly, Orville E. Atwood, secretary of state said Tuesday.

Atwood revealed he is not sponsoring the plan through his office but will merely transmit recommendations made to him.

He said at present 2,300 copper miners and 1,900 rolling mill workers are on relief at an estimated cost to the state and government of $8 a week per family or $3,750,000 a year. It is contended by the mining interests that if copper license plates were adopted these men could be put back to work.

DOMESTIC CATS GO WILD NEAR ALPENA

Two of Strange Breed Have Been Captured—Are 3 Feet Long

A strange breed of domestic black cats gone wild is reported in the woods in the vicinity of the Lyle Camp at Monaghan's Landing near Alpena, according to information received by the Department of Conservation.

Two of the cats have been captured, one shot and the other trapped. One specimen measured more than three feet in length, according to the report, and carried a heavy coat of fur. It seemed more muscular than the domestic breed from which it apparently had sprung; the tail appeared shorter and less bushy than that of the ordinary domestic cat.

LOCAL COMPANY COMPLETES ICE HARVEST

Houses of Other Users and Distributors to Be Filled Next Week

The Charlevoix Coal & Ice Co. completed its annual ice harvest Tuesday noon.

Approximately 4,000 tons of ice was taken from Lake Charlevoix for the company's storage place in the old beet sugar factory. The ice was between 12 and 13 inches in thickness and of excellent quality.

It is understood the harvest for other local ice users and distributors, including Booth, Widdifield, Belvedere, The Inn and Hotel Hallett, also the Chicago Club, will be started next week under the direction of D. J. Eckinger.

LICENSE SALES SHOW INCREASE

Registrations for First Month of Year More Than 80,000 Greater

An increase of 82,921 in automobile registrations during the first month of this year compared with the same period of 1934 was reported Tuesday by Orville E. Atwood, secretary of state. He showed that total collections last month were $637,686 higher than for January, 1934.

The gains are shown despite the fact the secretary of state had not yet been authorized by the legislature to sell 1935 license plates on the half year installment plan.

Last month's collections totalled $2,221,692 representing registration of 161,209 vehicles.

RE-ELECT WINDER COMMERCE LEADER

ALL 1934 OFFICERS UNANIMOUSLY CHOSEN

Group Traverse City Speakers Give Inspirational Talks at Annual Meeting Thursday

(By F. V. Tyler)

Eighty-six people sat at the banquet table in St. Mary's hall, last Thursday evening, on the occasion of the annual meeting of the Charlevoix Association of Commerce, among them several honored guests from our neighbor city of Traverse. An excellent meal, furnished by the ladies of St. Mary's church, was much enjoyed.

Dr. C. J. Winder, president of the Association, brought the meeting to order, following the banquet and called on the secretary-treasurer for his reports. A resume of these reports appears elsewhere in this issue under the head of Association of Commerce Activities. Dr. Winder then declared nominations in order for officers of the Association for the ensuing year. He was nominated to succeed himself and the nominations were closed by ananimous vote. It was then moved and unanimously supported to re-elect the three vice-presidents and the secretary-treasurer. Officers of the Association for 1935 are, Dr. C. J. Winder, president; S. M. Rose, 1st vice president; J. M. Foster, 2nd vice-president; Milton Block, 3rd vice president; Fred V. Tyler, secretary-treasarer.

During the intermission which followed the business meeting, Charles Hamlin rendered a very pleasing solo and encore, accompanied by Robert Bridge on the violin with Mrs. Robert Bridge at the piano. Dr. Winder then introduced Don C. Weeks, secretary of the Traverse City Chamber of Commerce, who in turn introduced his colleague, Con Foster of Traverse City. Mr. Foster was for many years responsibly connected with Barnum & Bailey's circus and is the man who gave Traverse her fine zoo, which is one of the best collections of wild animals in Michigan. Mr. Foster stressed the importance of loyalty to one's home town and stated that while he had traveled extensively during his lifetime and had lived in many of the nation's large cities, he had never found a place so dear to his heart as Traverse City and the northern Michigan region.

Mr. Foster was followed by J. C. Milliken, prominent Traverse City business man and former mayor, who brought out strongly the importance of co-operation between the various resort communities of this region. He plead for better support of the Michigan Tourist & Resort Association in their efforts to advertise the state as a vacation land and pointed out the more efficient results to be obtained from collective advertising of the state's resort resources as compared with the necessarily less extensive local advertising. He believes that the tourist business will be one of the chief factors of business recovery in Michigan and that, while it is well to advertise the summer attractions of the state as a whole, it is necessary for each community to spend more money in local advertising than has been the practice in the past. No better way, he said, could be found to spend this money than through the chambers of commerce. He classified the resort business as an industry and pointed out the enormous sums spent by lending industrial and retail concerns in advertising to produce a correspondingly larger volume of

HARBOR HERE FOR TITLE GAME FRIDAY

CHARLEVOIX'S LITTLE "6" CROWN AT STAKE

Kipmen Gave Creditable Performance to Defeat East Jordan 14 to 8 Last Friday

Charlevoix's Tip of Michigan class C conference title will be at stake Friday night when Harbor Springs, the only class C team to defeat the Kipmen this season, come here for a return game.

In view of this fact, the contest promises to be the outstanding home attraction of the season. That Harbor has a strong team is indicated by their recent win over Petoskey, leaders of the Big Six conference and only team other than Harbor to defeat the local quintet this season. Although defeated in both the district and regional tournaments last year by Boyne City, Charlevoix won the conference title and Friday night will pat up n battle to retain it.

Win From East Jordan

Charlevoix hung an another victory last Friday night at East Jordan, winning 14 to 8 from Coach Abe Cohen's tossers.

As the score indicates, the contest was a defensive battle. With Pearl leading the way, Charlevoix piled up an early margin which they steadily increased to the final whistle. They led 6 and 2 at the quarter, 8 and 2 at the half and 10 to 5 at the third intermission. Fouls were numerous and Charlevoix showed poorly on gift shots with a record of nine straight misses. East Jordan tallied 4 out of 7 from the foal line.

Charlevoix's reserves hung up another victory at East Jordan, nosing out the Jordanites by a 20 to 17 core in a close and hard-fought contest. They are scheduled to appear against Harbor here Friday night and have a score to even with the visitors from a previous defeat.

FRESHMAN COLLEGE BEGINS SECOND SEMESTER

Thirty-four Students Enrolled for Opening Monday Morning

Charlevoix Freshman College opened its second semester Monday, February 11th, with thirty-four students enrolled. New courses include Political Science and college algebra. In addition mathematics 7, school algebra and trigonometry are being repeated.

In accordance with a broadening policy, the classes will be open this semester to anyone who cares to enroll. New students, however, should enroll at once in order to avoid missing classes.

Another change in the college schedule is the omission of classes on Wednesday instead of Friday. This change was made necessary by new regulation governing the Freshman Colleges.

BASEBALL LEAGUE GETS UNDER WAY

LARGE CROWD OUT TUESDAY FOR INITIAL GAMES

Increased Interest May Result In Addition New Teams—College and Cubs Top Basketball

The new recreational baseball league got off to a flying start Tuesday evening at the gym.

A crowd of 125 was out for the initial games, the largest group since organization. Director Dean Davenport announced Wednesday that in view of the increased interest, one or two new teams would probably be added to the league to take care of all wishing to play. He has requested all interested to be present Thursday evening, at which time the matter will be definitely decided.

The Broncos, captained by Lyle Beaudoin, opened the evenings schedule with a 12 to 8 victory over Pete Hallett's Eagles. The Pirates, minus the services of their captain, Joe Smith, proved no match for the Lions, headed by Vic Smith, and took a 22 to 8 drubbing. Harry Glossenger pitched his Cardinals to a 16 to 13 victory over Bud Gill's Trojans.

The baseball league will go into action again Thursday night with the following schedule: 7 o'clock, Cardinals vs. Pirates; 8 o'clock, Broncos vs. Trojans; 9 o'clock, Lions vs. Eagles.

The Freshman College and Cubs continue to share the basketball league lead, although both met defeat during the past week. The Cubs were upset 25 to 23 by the Polar Bears, but stayed at the top of the league standing by handing the College quintet a 12 to 8 defeat to knock them off the top rung. The fourth place Indians trimmed the Wildcats, who hold cellar position, by a 22 to 15 count.

Following is the league standing:

Team	W	L	Pct.
Freshman	6	2	750
Cubs	6	2	750
Polar Bears	3	4	429
Indians	3	5	375
Wildcats	0	5	000

College vs. Wildcats, 7 o'clock; Indians vs. Polar Bears, 8 o'clock.

ODD FELLOWS TAKE OVER CRIBBAGE LEAD

The Odd Fellows took the lead Monday night in the cribbage series with the Masons for the first time since the contest opened six weeks ago.

They scored 19,036 points to 18,698 for the Masons, overcoming a lead of 286 points to step out in front by a margin of 52. The Masons had led since the series opened, their lowest advantage being 13 points. Joe Willinms scored 948 points for the Odd Fellows and Harold Withers led the Masons with 933.

Two more contests remain in the series and the next will be played Monday evening, February 18th, at the Masonic temple.

START PLANS FOR JULY 4TH PROGRAM

COUNCIL ACCEPTS LEGION OFFER TO STAGE EVENT

Celebration With Homecoming As Feature to Be Held July 3, 4, 5—With Elaborate Program

While perhaps not just exactly in keeping with the season, plans for a 4th of July celebration in Charlevoix next summer were among the important topics under discussion at the city council meeting Monday night.

Under the tri-city agreement between Charlevoix, Boyne City and East Jordan, 1935 is this city's year to provide the county 4th of July celebration. In view of this fact a committee headed by William E. Goss, commander of Leslie T. Shapton Post, American Legion, offered the organization's services to conduct the program for the holiday. Cooperation of the city was requested and subsequently granted and Mayor See delegated the council advertising committee to work with the Legion.

The Legion plan is to promote a Homecoming, which, by the way, will be the first ever staged in Charlevoix, as a major feature of the 4th of July observance. The program will cover a three-day period, July 3, 4 and 5. According to the Legion committee, preliminary plans call for one of the most elaborate celebrations ever staged in Charlevoix. They will start to work at once on plans for the event.

The hours for the opening and closing of polls at the primary election, March 4th, were set from 7 a. m. to 8 p. m. on motion of Alderman Hallett.

Keeping in step with state-wide activity to obtain Michigan's share of the pending five billion dollar relief public work program, Mayor See was authorized to appoint a local Planning Commission of five members. Three will be drawn from the city council and the other two from the city at large. Mayor See, City Engineer R. F. Sloan and several members of the council will attend the regional meeting of the State Planning Commission at Traverse City on Wednesday, February 20th, to promote Charlevoix's interests.

ALCOHOL EDUCATION NEED IS DISCUSSED

Cited by Woman's Christian Temperance Union at Meeting Friday

The February meeting of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union was held last Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. R. B. Armstrong.

The need of alcohol education for the individual and alcohol legislation for the traffic was discussed under the leadership of Mrs. A. J. Usher. The responsibility for the right kind of temperance education under trained leaders is squarely up to the drys, who cannot be satisfied with the kind proposed by the repealists. Legislation attempting to "control the uncontrollable" has already proven so futile that an early return to some form of prohibition is being predicted in many quarters.

It was voted to extend the membership campaign to June 1st and to accept new members at half the annual dues as the year is nearly half gone.

A tea in charge of Group 4 was announced for February 22nd at Mrs. Emmet Coulters. The March 8th meeting will be held at Mrs. Walker Miles.

SCHOOLS START DRIVE FOR FUNDS

Seeking $25,000,000 to Carry Education Along for Next Two Years

Michigan educational leaders have started in earnest their drive to secure $25,000,000 in state aid to support public schools during the coming two years.

The object of their drive is nearly $10,000,000 more than the amount Governor Fitzgerald has been convinced is necessary.

The educational crusade will be centered around an amendment to the Sias-Thatcher act of 1933 which set up a method of distributing $15,000,000 from sales tax revenues to be used for local school support. In addition to hiking the figures to $25,000,000 the new measure proposes a new plan of allocation which proposes greater benefits for rural schools.

The bill has the support of Superintendent of Public Instruction Paul F. Voelker.

FATHER AND SON BANQUET FEB. 20

FINE PROGRAM PLANNED FOR ANNUAL EVENT

Dr. F. H. Clapp, Traverse City, Prominent Lecturer, Secured to Give Address

The annual Father and Son banquet, originally announced for Thursday evening, February 21st, will be held Wednesday evening, February 20th, at the Methodist church.

The change in date was made in order to secure an able and very desirable speaker, Dr. F. H. Clapp of Traverse City, also to avoid conflict with a similar event at East Jordan.

Dr. Clapp, who will give the address of the evening, recently came to this region from the presidency of a university at Atlanta. He was previously on the faculty of Drew University, New York, and prior to that completed a long educational career at Old Oxford, England. While much of great seriousness will be urged upon his youthful hearers, much fun and mirth is expected when Dr. Clapp delivers his world famous lecture, "Apple Sauce."

The tentative program follows:

Invocation, Rev. G. R. Parker.

Introducing the toastmaster, Rev. W. W. Hard.

Toastmaster, Dr. C. J. Winder.

Toast, "To Our Sons," Dr. R. B. Armstrong.

Toast, "To Our Fathers," Warren Shapton.

Address, "Apple Sauce," Dr. F. H. Clapp.

Closing prayer, Rev. W. H. Raach.

Other numbers will include music and entertainment. However, the plan at present is to not have music during the banquet in order to make conversation easy.

The men of Charlevoix for years have been loyal to this time-honored institution and those in charge, feeling they have provided something very worth while, ask for the same loyal support as heretofore.

ANNUAL POTATO MEETING SET FOR FEB. 14

Any Northern Michigan Grower May Attend Gaylord Meeting

Potato growers of Northern Michigan will convene at Gaylord on February 14th at 2 o'clock p. m. to take part in the annual meeting of the Top O'Michigan Potato Assn.

The Top O'Michigan Potato Association is the organization which sponsors the Top O'Michigan Potato, Apple and Seed Show. The last exposition, held in November, 1934, was the eleventh district show to be held in northern Michigan.

These eleven annual shows have been a big factor in advertising the quality of northern Michigan potatoes and demonstrating to the producers the most profitable methods of production.

Any potato grower in northern Michigan is eligible to take part in the annual meeting which has been called to elect directors for 1935 and to make plans for the next potato, apple and seed show.

SUBMIT SEVEN PROJECTS FOR PUBLIC WORKS

Comprehensive County Program Would Entail Estimated Outlay of Over Half Million

Charlevoix county has put in a bid for approximately $620,000 of the president's $4,800,000,000 public works program and is rapidly completing the organization of committees to carry its requests to state officials.

The comprehensive list of projects was submitted to the State Planning Commission at Detroit by City Engineer Robert F. Sloan, acting for the county at large in the effort to obtain a share in the huge unemployment relief fund which Congress is expected to provide.

The county road commission heads the list with a group of bridge projects estimated to cost $213,000. They include a bridge over the south arm of Lake Charlevoix at Ironton, bridges over Boyne and Jordan rivers and Horton, Bear and Deer creeks.

The county is seeking a new court house to cost $100,000 for which plans have already been prepared.

The city of Charlevoix submitted six projects aggregating $125,000 and including a combination city hall, fire and police station; airport hangar; recreation field; sheet steel dock fronting Boal-Washburn property on Round lake; grade separation at intersection of Ferry avenue and P. M. tracks; completion of the Newman-Sheridan sewer project. Plans for the city hall, airport hangar and recreation field are completed and available.

Charlevoix school district No. 1 submitted a project for a new school building estimated to cost $33,000.

Norwood and Charlevoix townships ask for completion of the scenic highway along Lake Michigan, a total of 47,487 feet, at a cost of $35,000.

Boyne City submitted a project for construction of a complete water main system estimated at $75,000.

Local and county officials will attend a regional meeting to be held Wednesday, February 20th, at Traverse City, at which state officials will be present to advise on projects submitted or in preparation. Fifteen counties will be represented at the meeting.

EMERGENCY OPERATION SAVES LIFE ISLANDER

Dr. Armstrong Taken Sunday by Plane to St. James

Rushed by airplane to Beaver Island late Sunday afternoon, Dr. R. B. Armstrong, local surgeon, performed a major emergency operation to save the life of Charles C. Allers, 86, early island settler.

Bud Hammond, Charlevoix-Beaver Island airmail pilot, made temporary repairs to a disabled ship which was flown here by the pilot's cousin, "Dutch" Hammond, from Hammond's base at St. Ignace to provide Armstrong transportation after requests to Selfridge Field for a plane could not be granted due to absence of the fleet on winter maneavers.

The emergency call was made by Dr. Russell Palmer, island physician, who was unable to cope with the emergency single-handed. Dr. Armstrong has been called to St. James on previous occasions on emergency cases of like nature. Providing complications do not set in Allers will recover, according to information received here Monday.

Dr. Armstrong returned here Monday noon. Minor motor trouble delayed the departure from the island.

It is said that Banks may join Charlevoix county if Antrim county doesn't keep her roads open better. Charlevoix has kept her roads cleared in splendid shape this winter.

Mail carrier Wilfred Davis, is now driving a new Plymouth, lately purchased. He still has to walk into the Bay View sideroad. The Farrel road has been plowed by the tractor plow, and is in pretty fair condition. This might work as well as running them down by skating as one Bellaire man did last week.

St. JAMES

An epidemic of "flu" has laid siege to many of our Islanders. While we think it is abating, there are still many cases of the disease.

The task of putting up ice has been completed, and the ice houses are again filled in preparation for warm weather. Let's hope we're not disappointed in its arrival.

The young folks of the town enjoy the long winter evenings to the best advantage. Almost every evening one sees a procession of sleds going to the hill. They usually find material for a bonfire and thoroughly enjoy their outing.

Mr. and Mrs. Vesty McDonough were pleasantly surprised by a small group of friends and relatives who arrived at their home Thursday evening, February 7th, with many happy wishes on the occasion of their 37th wedding anniversary.

At least perch fishing is profitable enough to enable the "hook and line" men to purchase cigarettes. We wonder sometimes how one exists in a fish shanty all day with such minor rations as a bar of candy and a package of "Luckies." In any event, we are forced to admit that they're not losing weight, and continue to bring home the basket, if not the fish.

BARNARD

Joseph Stutzman has been visiting relatives near Boyne City the past week.

Kenneth Ager visited his uncle Ed. Ager, and family of East Jordan, last week.

Mrs. Richard Potter and Irving Drost have been quite sick with the "flu" but are improving.

We are glad to note that Mrs. Wm. Mayer is improving after her recent serious operation at the hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Gerritt Stoel and family of Atwood visited at the Clyde Smith home on Sunday. Carlton Smith returned with them for a few days' visit.

Wm. Coeling of Ellsworth, has been in the community buying beef cattle. It is encouinging to note that prices are much higher than they have been.

The regular grange meeting was held on Friday evening after an interval of four weeks on account of the bad weather. They are planning a party at the hall on February 23rd.

SOUTH BARNARD

Miss Christine Heeres of Ellsworth was a guest of honor at Barnard Sunday evening.

We are all very happy that John Edward Boss is showing signs of great improvement after his attack of pneumonia. His weakened condition makes it imperative that he stay in bed the rest of this week, but there is a cheery expression on his face now.

Oscar Boss is becoming quite adept with the knife finding himself engaged in much "whittling" of late, while his brother Jake has as his avocation the development of his vocal cords in song, especially the song "Way Down Upon the Swanee River." Harrison Warner and Lawrence Boss have taken a liking to long distance hiking in a "wilburing" way, but this is an enigma to many.

Last week Wednesday Miss Dorothy Bottema was hostess to the young people's Bible class, while this week mndemoiselle Bessie Potter is to entertain the group. More than than a score of young people have been coming out to these meetings. Attention is being given to the study of the Gospel of John. Humorous little episodes accompnny these meetings now and then; such as, the recent contest between Oscar Boss and Dickson Warner in testing out the capacity of their knees and in chopping elm blocks at the Henry Potter home.

Last Sunday afternoon the pastor preached on the topic, "Wells of Joy Along the Straight and Narrow Road." He brought out the fact that the Christian life is not a gloomy, sour, sad, and "long-faced" experience but n joyous, comforting, and strengthening one if a person is truly surrendered to his Master. To have this joyour life, however, one has to have more than a Pharisaical or formal religion—the spirit of Christ must reign within. Next Sunday afternoon nt 1:30 the sermon topic will be: "Falling Asleep in Church—Its Dnngers."

Yes, quite a number of our constituency came from the land of dikes and windmills nnd where people of many nations have found n haven of refuge. We invite you to come out on a Sunday afternoon and look us over, although you will not see any wooden shoes or wide bloomers and blouses such as were worn in that country reclaimed from the sea. However, occasionally before and after the services you will hear the lowland tongue used by a few. The highway commissioner has been very kind in keeping our road open most of the way to the church, although you will have to walk n short distance but then walking is good for anyone's constitution. "The little white church on the hill" welcomes you very heartily. Clarence Boss is expected to sing a solo at the service next Sunday.

If everybody with something to interest you should come and ring your bell, what a nuisance it would be! Think of the swarming, jostling crowd, the stamping of feet on your porch and carpets!

Every day we know of many callers who come to see you. They never jangle the bell—they don't take up your whole day trying to get your attention. Instead, they do it in a way that it most considerate of your privacy and your convenience. They advertise in your newspaper!

In this way you have only to listen to those you know at a glance have something that interests you. They make it short too, so you can gather quickly just what you want to know. You can receive and hear them all without noise or confusion in a very few minutes.

Britain Planting Trees

About 50,000,000 trees are to be planted in the United Kingdom by the forestry commissioners this winter, providing employment for about 3,500 men.

The total area is 21,000 acres, of which 13,000 are in England and Wales and 8,000 in Scotland. About 750 acres are to be added to the New forest, called "New" because it was planted by William the Conqueror in the Eleventh century, and 100 acres to the forest of Dean. The largest forests, totaling 3,400 acres, will be planted in the northeastern counties.

Peasant Influence in Modern Dress

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Big sleeves, blousod bodices, drawstring necklines, cord and tassel fastenings, colorful sashes girdling the waistline, rustic linens and cottons bizarre with color and design, ornate embroideries and hosts of other details equally as fascinating and picturesque, all proclaim the romantic, quaint, peasant fashions of mid-Europe as the source from which modern designers are gathering inspiration.

The prologue to this peasant inspired style program was written months ago when millinery, as we all remember, went so spectacularly and so picturesquely Tyrolean. The movement grew and grew until this season. Throughout all costume design one sees modern interpretation given to peasant themes gleaned from many lands.

To peasant sources may be traced the primitive reds and greens and yellows in beach and sports wear as a change from the subtle pastels, the nautical blues and the softly modulated "faded" tones and tints we loved so well. Peasant-shawl prints enliven the new evening gowns. Self-fringe finishes the edges of rustic fabrics. Rustic accessories is the new note sounded in connection with sports costumes. Starched laces flare about throat and on sleeves. Belts gaily embroidered in peasant colors make costumes look pictorially gypsylike—and so on and so on the story of peasant lore unfolds in modernized version.

Perhaps the most significant reaction to peasant influence is the silhouette which introduces softly blousod bodices and big generous sleeves. The dress on the seated figure in the illustration speaks more eloquently than words of this new movement. Gray jersey fashions this gown, which is a Paris model. Gray, by the way, is accounted as ultravogueish for both day and evening wear by stylists both here and abroad. The huge pleated sleeves are set very high. These, with the gathered neckline and fullness given to the blouse which is confined at the waistline with a massive silver belt, give that "different" look which insures a new-this-season styling.

The dress on the standing figure to the right also features the very new and smart blousod bodice, but in a more conservative way. It is fashioned of a handsome fuchsia colored crepe. There is a bit of smocking slightly suggesting a yoke which gives the required blouse fullness. The big sleeves are gathered in at the wrist in traditional peasant fashion. The frill at the neck also reflects peasant styling.

Speaking of influences reflected in the newer fashions there is another movement under way which is quite as outstanding and important as that of peasant trends. We are referring to the "Regency" period fashions which flourished in the early Nineteenth century (from 1812 to 1820). The Regency influences in dress versus peasant trends inject a versatility to this season's styling which insures against the possibility of a dull or monotonous moment in realms of fashion the whole spring and summer through.

The former bespeaks a formality and sophistication which is quite foreign to the naive rustic beauty of the latter. The characteristic features in either are easily recognizable. Reminiscent of the Regency period modes are the high waistlines which certain French couturiers are introducing, the long skirts often with decorative hemlines and that which you will see displayed in millinery showings this spring—bonnets, real poke bonnets which of course will interest the ingenue and debutante ehemele, far more than women of more mature years.

TULLE TRIMS PRINT

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

The cult of the evening mode is for masses of frothy tulle used in a trimming way on gowns. The very handsome yellow and black silk crepe gown pictured has a froth of black tulle at each shoulder. The cunning cape which tollady holds in hand in readiness to don at sweet will is also of frothy layers of black tulle.

Halos of Plaited Silk

The latest hubs for evening wear are made of plaited silk in a variety of colors, with moleskin capes and muffs, dyed green, plum or navy.

ACCESSORIES EKE OUT SMALL BUDGET

The woman who has to get through an entire season with one evening gown—now there's a problem for you. But it can be an amusing problem if the woman is sufficiently clever and ingenious. The styles are on her side this winter.

All this girl with the collapsed budget need do is watch her colors and accessories. Let her get a white or cream-colored gown built along simple, classic lines in crepe, chiffon, satin or velvet. Then let her change the gown's appearance from time to time with a double capelet of burnt orange tulle, with a mauve sequin jacket, with a high-necked deep blue velvet jacket that buttons down the back, even with a lovebird green chiffon scarf whose ends float airily behind.

Purple Flowers Are Back in Spotlight of Fashion

"Buttercups and daisies here to please the ladies"—are supplanted by violets, pansies and lilacs. The current acceptance of colors in the purple range, sponsored by Schiaparelli, Mainbocher, Lelong, Patou and others, have brought these lovely blossoms back into fashion.

Late last summer Paris began using these together with blues, which frequently have a purplish cast. The violets are varied in type, single, double, large, small; lilacs come in sprays or clusters, following genuine or artificial effects. Schiaparelli uses a spray of pansies over the shoulder. Mainbocher uses lilacs to trim lavender chiffon. Patou poses a bunch of violets at center front.

Black Velvet Favored

Black velvet hits the high spots for afternoon and evening. Velvet suits with peplums and rhinestone buttons or bowknots are chic.

Father of Modern "Photo"

Man Who Had First Idea of Process of Photography Revealed Secret to Daguerre, and Died Poor, Unknown, and Forgotten by World.

The romantic story of the man who invented the process of photography which gave pictures that were subsequently unaffected by light, is recalled by the celebration of the centenary of the Fox-Talbot process of photography, held at Lacock abbey, England, the historic home of the Fox-Talbots.

Joseph Nicephore Niepce had been compelled to resign his commission in the French army through illness and failing eyesight, and, returning to his native town of Chalons-sur Saone, he settled down on a small estate which provided him with a living and gave him leisure to study philosophy. Although neither he nor his brother Claude had had any scientific education, both were interested in science. They fitted up a workshop in the farmhouse.

Among other things, they constructed a new locomotive machine in which rapidly heated air was substituted for steam, and one of the first bicycles ever made with a movable wheel—called the "celeripede"—which Joseph himself rode in Paris.

In 1811, Joseph Niepce turned his fertile brain to lithography, which had been recently invented by Alois Senefelder, and, struck with the idea of substituting polished metal for stone, he tried to reproduce sketches drawn on a metallic plate with lithographic chalk.

He was experimenting one day, when a broad beam of sunlight streaming through the open door threw a reflection of his face on the polished plate over which he was poring. As he gazed on the reflection, he suddenly thought that if he could imprint such images by the mere action of the sun's rays, he would have invented something far superior to lithography. From that hour Niepce was wholly absorbed in the task of imprinting images by sunlight.

Success began to attend his efforts early in 1814, when he learned of the action of sunlight on silver chloride, a discovery made by K. W. Scheele in 1742. After many experiments he produced a faithful reproduction of a design in which lights and shadows preserved their natural position. When he plunged the metal leaf in a preparation of essence of lavender, he found to his delight that the portions of the bitumen not affected by the light had dissolved, disclosing the image protected from the ulterior action of the rays.

It is certain that Niepce was the real inventor of the Daguerreotype. Louis Jacques Mande Daguerre, a clever painter and the inventor of the diorama, had also been experimenting with processes for fixing the pictures on his diorama, but no success had attended his efforts.

He sought an interview with Niepce, and they entered into a partnership which was successful to the advance of photography, though Niepce did all the inventing while Daguerre got the credit. In all fairness it must be said that, having discovered Niepce's secret, Daguerre set himself to improve it.

Two great difficulties remained. Seven or eight hours' exposure was still necessary, and at the end of a certain time the picture became partly effaced. Both difficulties were ultimately surmounted, and success at last crowned twenty years of tireless research.

Unfortunately, Niepce did not live to see the consummation of his life's work. He died at Chalons July 5, 1833, poor and unknown, and forgotten by his fellow-citizens.

Doctors Know!

. . . and they use liquid laxatives

You'd use a liquid, too, if you knew how much better it makes you feel.

A liquid laxative can always be taken in the right amount. You can gradually reduce the dose. Reduced dosage is the secret of real and safe relief from constipation.

Just ask your own doctor about this. Ask your druggist how popular liquid laxatives have become. The right liquid laxative gives the right kind of help—and the right amount of help. When the dose is repeated, instead of more each time, you take less. Until the bowels are moving regularly and thoroughly without aid.

People who have experienced this comfort, never return to any form of help that can't be regulated! The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It contains senna and cascara, and these are natural laxatives that form no habit. It relieves a condition of biliousness or sluggishness without upset.

To relieve your occasional upsets safely and comfortably, try Syrup Pepsin. The druggist has it.

HOUSE RECEIVES BILL LIFTING TAX

Would Repeal Mill Levy for State College and University

The senate has approved and passed to the house for concurrence the proposition that the last remaining burden of state property taxes should be removed from real estate.

Under suspension of its rules, the upper chamber passed three bills sponsored by Sen. Andrew L. Moore of Pontiac, R., which repeal the mill taxes levied for the support of the University of Michigan and Michigan State College.

These two appropriations last year comprised nearly the entire state property tax of $3,500,000 during the last two years and the present administration proposes to support itself entirely from revenues other than those imposed upon the property owner.

FATAL HUNTING ACCIDENTS HIT NEW RECORD

Thirty-five Deaths Reported Greatest Since 1929

Hunting accidents claimed more lives during the fall and winter hunting seasons of 1934-35 in Michigan than in any year since 1929. This fact stands out in the record of hunting accidents kept by the Department of Conservation.

Thirty-five hunters lost their lives in the field either by carelessness with a gun or from causes incidental to hunting. This is eight more than the highest previous total of deaths, which was 27 recorded for the deer and small-game seasons of 1930-31.

In addition to the 35 fatalities there were 30 cases in which hunters received minor and serious injuries in hunting accidents. The record does not include deaths or injuries resulting to hunters in car collisions en route to camp or home.

MANY PREDATORS ARE TAKEN BY TRAPPERS

First Month Under New Bounty Nets 225 Predatory Animals

The first month of the bounty system of predator control netted the pelts of at least 225 major predatory animals, says the report of the Field Administration Division, Department of Conservation.

That was the number certified through the respective district headquarters for bounty payments by the Department. It is believed that more pelts may have been taken, however, and that the trappers or hunters have delayed making applications for payment.

SUPREME COURT DENIES WILSON PLEA

Says Wayne Recount Illegal—Seats Atwood Secretary of State

The last legislature's "lame duck" recount of the November vote for secretary of state in Wayne county was declared by the state supreme court to be void.

Mincing few words, the court held that the recount was illegally ordered both by the Democratic legislature and the governor; that it was a "fatally defective proceeding; and that the action of the solons in declaring that Maj.-Gen. Guy M. Wilson of Flint, D., is entitled to hold the office of secretary of state is void.

CHARLES DICKENS CLUB OBSERVES ANNIVERSARY AUTHOR

February 7th, the anniversary of the birth of the famous author, Charles Dickens, was celebrated in a most fitting manner by the Charles Dickens Club of Charlevoix.

A most delicious luncheon was served at the home of the club president, Mrs. Mildred Webster. Following the luncheon it seemed quite fitting to look back on the career of that great man and try to assess what he meant to his age and what he still means to the world. Because of the recent filming of "David Copperfield," the greater part of the afternoon was spent in a short review of this masterpiece.

It is generally known by all students of Dickens that at one time the author began writing a biography, but he found the memories so poignant that he could not continue. After two or three attempts to continue the biography, he rewrote it completely, making it a third person story and creating the fictitious character, "David Copperfield," who was in reality, the boy Dickens.

Many incidents connected with the novelist's childhood are faithfully told in the story. It is generally believed that he drew the serio-comic character, Micawber, from the experiences of his own father, who, like Micawber, was "always expecting something to turn up." Other characters and scenes are likewise hits from Dickens' own experience. In this picture old costumes are revived, stage coaches wind their way over country roads. Canterbury cathedral looms over David's school days, and the old life of England lives again.

Many lovely pictures of this screen-play and many interesting excerpts of the story had been collected by the various members. It seemed a fitting tribute to a man so universally liked, to celebrate this 123rd anniversary of his birth in reviewing "David Copperfield," probably his greatest work, and which now bids fair to become the outstanding screen production of 1935.

TREMENDOUS TRIFLES

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

A WOMAN'S HAIR

IT WAS long and brown and lustrous—the hair of twenty-three-year-old Jane Mellen—and those who saw and admired it little realized that the destiny of a nation would be woven into its silky strands. But that was before Gen. John Burgoyne invaded New York in the summer of 1777.

Jane Mellen was visiting in the home of fat Widow McNeil near Fort Edward that summer. She had been warned of the danger from Burgoyne's Indian allies but she refused to go to a safer place. Her lover, David Jones, a Tory, was coming back from Canada with the British. She intended to wait for him.

But she waited too long. A war party entered the cabin, dragged the two women out, placed them on horses and started to take them into Burgoyne's camp. Their two Indian warriors began quarreling over possession of the girl. Suddenly one of them turned, shot her and as she fell from the saddle his scalping knife did its ghastly circling around her head.

When the Indian exhibited his gory trophy in Burgoyne's camp the general was furious. But his rage was nothing compared to that of the New York Patriots. "Remember Jane Mellen!" became a rallying cry.

Patriot propagandists spread the tale and that master propagandist of them all, canny Benjamin Franklin, made good use of it in stirring up sympathy throughout Europe for the American cause. It is impossible to estimate exactly the results of war-time propaganda. But there is no doubt that the story of Jane Mellen encouraged Patriot morale at a time when it was very low and had a part in bringing about the final victory in our fight for freedom.

QUI VIVE?

NIGHT shrouded the St. Lawrence river that September night in 1759. Under its cover a fleet of boats filled with soldiers floated silently down the stream. Gen. James Wolfe was embarking upon a desperate gamble to gain a foothold on the plateau above Quebec where he could force his enemy, Marquis de Montcalm, to come out in the open and fight. To do this he proposed to lead his army over a secret path winding up the steep cliffs that rose from the river.

As his boat passed one of the jutting curves of the Palisades, suddenly the sharp voice of a French sentinel cut through the darkness:

"Qui Vive!"

In that breathless moment the fate of the North American continent hung in the balance. Discovery meant an alarm and the certain repulse of the expedition before it had reached its first objective. Then:

"France!"

It was the voice of Captain Fraser, a Scotch Highlander, who spoke French.

"A quel regiment?" demanded the sentinel.

"De la Reine," replied Fraser, naming a French regiment which might reasonably be expected to be abroad upon the river that night.

Apparently satisfied, the sentinel said no more. So Wolfe's soldier-filled boats passed on—down to the foot of the secret path, up which they scrambled and surprised the sleepy guard at the top. Then they deployed out on the Plains of Abraham.

The next morning, Montcalm came out from his walled city to attack them and the Battle of Quebec followed. It brought death to James Wolfe but it also brought the victory which decided that the English, not the French, were to rule North America. It might have been different if a French speaking Scotch Highlander had not been in a boat on the St. Lawrence the night before.

SILICON

SILICON is the most abundant solid element in nature. Young James Abbot MacNeil Whistler, a cadet at the United States Military academy, may have known that once. But if he did, he forgot it. So one day in 1854, when he was writing an examination in chemistry and was called upon to define silicon, he just had to "make a stab at it."

His guess wasn't a good one. He was "found" in chemistry—that's West Point phraseology for "found deficient." Also he was "busted out" of the academy, thereby ending what should have been a promising military career. Both his father, George Washington Whistler, and his grandfather, John Whistler, had won distinction as officers in the United States army.

But as it turned out, the dismissed cadet won even greater distinction in another field. He became one of America's finest artists—the painter of the world's most famous picture, "Mother" [illegible].

Perhaps there were other errors in his chemistry examination paper. But we have Whistler's words for it that "If silicon had been a noxious gas, I might have been a famous general today."

Lumberjacks Stage Their Own Tilt

Scene at the first annual bucking contest at Lincoln, Wash., with some of the West's best lumberjacks entered. These blocks are pine and marked with chalk like you would cut a pie and it takes real skill to hit the line and strength to put the ax through the block with one blow. After the block is cut it looks like a cut pie. Otto Johnson, second man on the right, is the champion bucker, winning by two blows.

Many Making Good Use of Enforced Leisure

"My son," said the old father sending his boy out into the world, "never get into an argument with a man who pronounces words the way they are spelled."

"Why not, father?" asked the youth.

"Because," replied the old man, "a fellow who pronounces words the way they are spelled has dug out his knowledge by himself. He really knows what he is saying."

There is tremendous attendance these days on extra classes. Men and women with much idle time on their hands are seeking to turn the hours to good account. And the home work given out to them is done with amazing faithfulness. Those who have been subjected to such discipline can reasonably expect success when jobs are to be had.

Quite as important are those who are struggling to master subjects by themselves. A young man who recently completed his course for a degree made up his mind that there were several subjects he would like to learn. He started on stenography, typewriting and accounting, on his own. Rising early, he devotes at least eight hours daily to such study. His example has stimulated others. Two have joined him. It is a home-made extension course. The graduate of such a school has no certificate, but he should have sufficient power to do without one—Boston Globe.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS

By B. C. Mellencamp

Great Interest Shown in Potato Meeting Last Saturday

Without n doubt, one of the most important potato discussions ever to take place in the county, occurred last Thursday in the Boyne City postoffice building, when 82 growers, cooperators, managers, directors and others interested in potatoes, discussed ways and means of establishing some type of marketing program.

Fred Hibst, manager of the Cadillac Exchange, C. L. Nash and Arthur Howland, specialists from Michigan State College, were present, and led the discussion, relative to the potato situation. This meeting is in furtherance of the establishment of a government marketing program, which will tend to obtain a reasonable and profitable price of potatoes. At the present time, all of the late-producing states are sponsoring district meetings to obtain an opinion from the potato producers as to what type of program is best to meet the potato marketing needs. The big thing is, that practicnlly all potato producers realize the necessity of having some national curtailed program, and of course, the big problem is to merge these expressions of opinion together in some inexpensive practical and worknble government program.

At the Boyne City meeting, the producers were unanimous in that they desired government supervision. (tne plan was presented and discussed fully. It is called the Warren Potato Act. This Act would make potatoes a basic commodity, the same as wheat, corn, hogs, cotton and others, but without any processing tax. In this plan there would be no acreage reduction, but there will be a quantity of potatoes allotted to each farmer to sell without the payment of any taxes. If a farmer decides to sell more than the quantity allotted him, then he pays a tax of something like 50c per hundred weight, which of course is prohibitive, except when the price of potatoes is extremely high. In this Act, certified seed shall he taxed the same as table stock, and the other requirements the same.

It is too soon yet to discuss this program further, but it is practically certain that a potato program will be started within the next few months. Everyone in close touch with the situation seems to have the same view point, namely, that something must be done, and the sooner the better.

Aona Neagle Rose From Chorus to Fame

The career of Anna Neagle, glamorous star of "The Runaway Queen," which comes to the Palace Theater Saturday and Sunday is the story of a young English girl's meteoric rise to international fame in the space of two years.

Born in 1909, this lovely and vivacious blonde found herself at twenty a Cochran chorus girl. Then she went to America with "Wake Up and Dream"—and things begin to happen. Fired with the ambition to do important things in the world of the theater, she began to study voice, dancing and dramatics. Then came her big chance. Jack Buchnnan was looking for a leading lady for his new show, "Stand Up and Sing." Anna got the job and, after that, there was just no stopping her. She was seen by Herbert Wilcox, noted film producer, and the result was a screen test. She emerged with high honors, and her screen career was launched. Her films include, "Magic Night," "The Little Damozel," and "Bitter Sweet," in which she was teamed with the handsome Fernand Graavey who is again seen opposite her in "The Runaway Queen," which B. and D. Productions made for release through United Artists.

Most of her cousins and her brothers and her uncles were in the Royal Na-vee or the Mercantile Marine, and Anna herself is very fond of the sea. She also likes football games and her pet indoor hobby is reading —biographies preferred.

An ardent film fan, her favorites are Greta Garbor, Walter Huston, Ronald Colman, Loretta Young and Spencer Tracy.

Pork and veal offer the most attractive of meat values. Eggs are again somewhat scarce due to continued cold weather.

Navel oranges and grapefruit continue to he excellent in quality and low or moderate in price. Strawberries are coming to market in fair quantity and are reasonable.

IF YOUR BREATH HAS A SMELL YOU CAN'T FEEL WELL

When we eat too much, our food decays in our bowels. Our friends smell this decay coming out of our mouth and call it bad breath. We feel the poison of this decay all over our body. It makes us gloomy, grouchy and no good for anything.

What makes the food decay in the bowels? Well, when we eat too much, our bile juice can't digest it. What is the bile juice? It is the most vital digestive juice in our body. Unless 2 pints of it are flowing from our liver into our bowels every day, our movements get hard and constipated and ¾ of our food decays in our 28 feet of bowels. This decay sends poison all over our body every six minutes.

When our friends smell our bad breath (but we don't) and we feel like a whipped tomcat, don't use a mouthwash or take a laxative. Get at the cause. Take Carter's Little Liver Pills which gently start the flow of your bile juice. But if "something better" is offered you, don't buy it, for it may be a calomel (mercury) pill, which loosens teeth, gripes and scalds the rectum in many people. ASSN. OF COMMERCE ACTIVITIES
F. V. Tyler, Sec'y

With this week's issue, through the kindness of the Charlevoix Courier, commences a new department of the paper devoted to the work of the Charlevoix Association of Commerce. In this manner, by a series of weekly reports, the public may become familiar with what the Association is doing and what it is trying to accomplish for the community.

The annual reports of the secretary and treasurer, mentioned elsewhere in this issue, are given below in condensed form.

The treasurer's report shows that total receipts for the period beginning December 16, 1932, and ending February 7, 1935, were $294.05. There was a balance of $87.90 in the bank when the present treasurer took over. This makes a total of $381.95 in cash assets for the period. Forty-nine checks were drawn, totaling $328.35. These disbursements, together with $15.31 not deposited but spent by the secty.-treasurer for office supplies; deductions for check tax, bank service charges, etc. and the 50% of frozen assets now in the bank, make a total deduction of $381.95, thus balancing off the account. Total outstanding bills amount of $86.39. One of the first acts of the new organization must therefore be the securing of funds for operating expenses. Fuel expense, telephone charges for the information bureau and other items paid by the City of Charlevoix are now included in the above report.

As corresponding secretary in charge of the information bureau, the writer reports total incoming written inquiries for hotel rates, resort literature and general information. Fully eighty per cent of these letters were with regard to accommodations and attractions at Charlevoix and 49 of them were requests for cottages to rent. In addition to the above were 33 letters inquiring about jobs, making a total of 316 inquiries. Letters written by the secretary in reply totaled 108, the balance of the communications being handled by the mailing of lists and literature.

As branch manager for the Department of State, the secretary sold 1088 full rate passenger applications for 1934 automobiles license, commercial applications to the number of 185 and 98 trailer applications, making a total of 1371 full rate licenses. The number of stickers, or extension permits for the use of 1933 plates in 1934 totaled 561, making the total of applications of all kinds, 1932. In addition, 400 title transfers, title applications, etc., were handled.

CONSERVATION DEPT. WEEKLY BULLETIN

The railroad car, "Wolverine," used for many years in the distribution of fish fry and fingerlings in Michigan, is to be converted into an exhibit car and used this spring for educational Conservation work. The "Wolverine" will go on the road April 1 to visit the cities and villages of the state. At each stop it will be open during the day for inspection by school children and at night for adults. Fish, geology, game, fire prevention, park, forestry, and law enforcement will feature the exhibits.

More than a quarter-million pounds of noxious fish were removed from game fishing waters within Michigan's jurisdiction during 1934, it is shown in the report of the Fisheries Division, Department of Conservation.

Competitive civil service examinations are being conducted throughout the state by the Field Administration Division to qualify men for the positions of fire warden and lowerman for the coming season. Men between the ages of 21 and 45 may obtain application forms at the respective conservation headquarters offices. Examinations will be conducted in de ignated public buildings in each district.

Noxious fish in certain designated non-trout streams of Michigan will become the legal targets of spear wielders March 1 when a two and a half month season opens on carp, suckers, redhorse, mullet and garfish, says the Fisheries Division, Department of Conservation. The season continues open to and including May 15th.

COWS FIND UNUSUAL RATIONS IN MANGERS

Feed Shortage Induces Dairymen to Try Feeds Believed Unsuitable

Michigan dairymen, confronted with a shortage of all kinds of feed and high prices for any kind which they might buy, are trying many kinds of unusual rations and appear to be succeeding in solving the feed problem, according to the dairy department at Michigan State College.

Dairymen in the cream selling sections are feeding skim milk back to the cows which produce it. They find that cows can be fed from 10 to 15 pounds of skim milk at a feed. Eight pounds of the skim milk is equal in feeding value to one pound of cottonseed meal.

Farmers in the central part of the state are using cull beans, either cooked or ground and fed as meal. Ground beans can be utilized as 15 per cent of the grain mixture. Cooked beans can be fed at the rate of 20 pounds per day per cow.

Ground rye which has had an undesirable reputation among dairymen is proving to be a satisfactory feed for many Michigan herds. Some owners are feeding as much as 20 pounds of rye meal per cow per day and have had no trouble with digestive disturbances in the herds.

Low prices for potatoes have induced some herdsmen to use them for feed. The usual practice is to chop the potatoes and feed them at the rate of 15 to 20 pounds a day to each cow. Cooking potatoes seems to be a waste of time and money as the cows readily eat the raw ones.

Addition of one or two quarts of molasses a day to the cow's ration adds to the palatability of the other feeds and increases the energy of the ration. Sugar beet molasses is being used by dairymen living near Michigan factories.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCH
205 Clinton Street

Sunday morning service, 10:45.

First Wednesday of month, 7:45 p. m.

Reading room Saturdays, 3 to 5 p. m.

We cordially invite the public to our service and reading room.

"Soul" will be the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Christian Science churches throughout the world on Sunday, February 17th.

Among the Bible citations is this passage (Job 23:10, 13): "But he knoweth the way that I take: when he hath tried me, I shall come forth as gold. But he is in one mind, and who can turn him? and what his soul desireth, even that he doeth."

Correlative passages to be read from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, include the following (p. 335): "Because Soul is immortal, it does not exist in mortality. Soul must be incorporeal to be Spirit, for Spirit is not finite. Only by losing the false sense of Soul can we gain the eternal unfolding of Life as immortality brought to light."

CORN-HOG PAYMENT TO COUNTY FARMERS

Second Installment of $1,098.91 Distributed Monday

(By B. C. Mellencamp)

After a long wait, the checks for the second installment on the 1934 corn-hog reduction program have been received by Wm. H. Mayne, treasurer of the County Control Association. These were passed out last Saturday and Monday. This amount of money represents approximately one-fifth of the total to be paid out by the Federal government. At the present time, the co-operating farmers have received three-fifths of their payment.

Within a very short time, the 1935 program will be initiated in this county. The payments for this year will not be as much as last year, but farmers will not need to reduce their hogs for market only 10 per cent, as compared with a 25 per cent reduction last year. It is possible for farmers to sign up this year who did not sign up last year, so I would suggest that when the announcement of educational meetings comes, that you attend and secure all the details. It is expected that this year's program will be somewhat easier to carry out, and especially in the case of those who co-operated last year. It will only require their signatures to the new contracts.

RE-ELECT WINDER COMMERCE LEADER

business. One must spend money to make money, he averred, and the resort business was no exception. Mr. Milliken believes that, through consolidation and greater efficiency in county and township government, great savings could be effected that might profitably be spent in advertising the resort business. He cited the ridiculously top-heavy number of school and county officials for a population of a little better than 50,000 in Grand Traverse and adjacent counties. Townships should be abolished, he thinks, and county offices consolidated.

An intermission followed Mr. Milliken's address and "Professor" Joe Dvorak of Charlevoix was called up front to entertain with a number of accordian solos. His performance was enjoyable and well-received.

Mr. Weeks then introduced George Anderson, Henry Olson, Charles Sawyer, Guy DeLong, Leo Callaher and Hugh Johnson, who had accompanied himself and Mr. Miliken from Traverse. Mr. Callaher was asked to speak, but begged to be excused on account of a severe cold which had impaired his voice.

Hugh Johnson, regional manager of the Michigan Bell Telephone Company, being called on by Mr. Weeks, the temporary chairman, addressed the meeting. He believed that courtesy should be the keynote of a resort community's treatment of its visitors, especially as respects police and traffic regulations. He heartily supported the ideas for greater cooperation put forward by the previous speakers and said that, in his opinion, Northern Michigan began down at Reed City.

The hour being late, Dr. Winder then adjourned the meeting. It was evident that a better spirit prevailed among the members of the Association than at any time in years and that the remarks of the visitors especially those of Mr. Miliken, had proved a real inspiration to greater effort in the future.

ODD FELLOWS EXTEND THEIR CRIBBAGE LEAD

Enter Finals Next Monday Night With Margin of 434 Points.

The semi-final contest in the Masonic-Odd Fellow cribbage series Monday evening resulted in a decisive Odd Fellow victory and placed them in a most favorable position to win the series.

Already leading by a margin of 52 points, the Odd Fellows scored 18,013 points to 17,631 for the Masons, adding 382 to their advantage. The margin of 434 is the largest accumulated by either group during the season and appears sufficient to carry the Odd Fellows to a series victory. Bob Stafford was high for the winners with 944 points, while Lige Greer led the Masons with 961.

The final contest of the eight-game series will be played Monday evening, February 25th, at the I. O. O. F. hall. A "feed," provided by the loosers, is the reward to the winning group.

SEE HABEAS CORPUS BROOKS CASE

ACTION HEARD IN COURT HERE LAST MONDAY.

Hearing Postponed to Saturday Pending Extradition Before Gov. Fitzgerald Wednesday.

Hearing of a petition for habeas corpus seeking release of Dr. Edward L. Brooks and wife, Grace Brooks, held in Benzie county since January 30 on a Chicago warrant charging operation of a maternity hospital in that city without license, was continued to Saturday, February 23rd, at Traverse City, by Judge Parm C. Gilbert in circuit court here Monday afternoon.

Brooks' counsel in his petition set forth the warrant under which the former Congregational minister is held was a copy and not the original; that the misdemeanor charge under which Brooks' extradition is sought is not sufficient to warrant his removal to Chicago under Michigan law, along with other contentions.

Jack Howich, Benzie county prosecuting attorney, expressed favor of Brooks' petition. Questioned by Judge Gilbert as to whether the Chicago state attorney's office had been notified of the habeas corpus action, Howich stated he telegraphed the Chicago officials at 10:00 Monday morning and had not received reply. Judge Gilbert directed Howich to telephone Chicago officials, who in turn notified Howich that they desired the court action be held up pending extradition hearing to be held Wednesday before Governor Frank D. Fitzgerald at Lansing. Upon this information Judge Gilbert postponed the hearing.

Brooks gained state-wide notoriety recently through a one-man grand jury investigation of his alleged "baby farm" operation at Beulah. He appeared in court here Monday.

SPORTSMAN'S CLUB PLAN SUMMER WORK

Will Rear Steelhead Trout and Plant Wild Rice in Lakes.

At a meeting held in the community room at the high school building Monday evening, the Charlevoix Sportsman's Club outlined a tentative program for the 1935 season.

A requisition for 200,000 steelhead trout spawn to be hatched at the government hatchery and reared to fingerlings at the Stover creek rearing ponds, will be made. The Club also took under consideration a plan to obtain wild rice for planting in nearby lakes in an attempt to establish feeding grounds for ducks. Other phases of the program for the summer were also discussed.

Officers of the Jordan River Sportsman's Club were guests of the evening. Refreshments followed the business session.

A resolution was passed at the meeting endorsing William J. Pearson of Boyne Falls, for appointment as Conservation Commissioner to succeed Harold Titus of Traverse City.

KIPMEN WINNERS THRILLING GAME

TAKE HARBOR 22-20 IN OVERTIME CONTEST

Victory Virtually Cinched Second Conference Title—Play East Jordan Here Friday

Charlevoix's Kipmen virtually cinched the Tip of Michigan's class C conference basketball title for the second consecutive year by nosing out Harbor Springs 22 to 20 on the local court Friday night.

The contest, a thrilling one from start to finish, went one three-minute overtime period to decide the winner and the rapid exchange of score advantage in almost every period brought the crowd to their feet repeatedly. Charlevoix must win Friday night from East Jordan to win the championship.

The Harbor game pitted the Kipmen against the only class C team to win from them this season. Charlevoix led at the close of every period only to see the visitors even the count and repeatedly take the lead. Charlevoix's advantage at the quarter was 4 and 3; at the half 10 and 6 and at the third intermission 18 to 11. Harbor came through with a pair of goals while holding Charlevoix scoreless in the fourth quarter to even the count 20-all at the final whistle.

In the overtime period Foster's long goal from mid-court provided the winning count. Carey, fouled just as the whistle sounded to end the game, missed a chance for another point which was not needed.

Pearl, forward, scored 8 points for Charlevoix. Radle and Carey each accounted for 5 and Schwab and Foster each contributed 2. Backus was high for Harbor with 9, while Graham was next with 5. Gordon Tabraham of Cadillac, refereed the contest.

Charlevoix reserves had previously opened the evening's bill with a 15 to 14 win over Harbor's reserves. The local team trailed almost to the final whistle before putting over the winning goal.

Charlevoix closes its pre-tournament schedule against East Jordan on the home court Friday night.

SCHOOL BAND CONCERT PROGRAM ANNOUNCED

Will Be Given Thursday Evening at Gym Benefit Nursery School.

The Charlevoix high school band will present a concert program, interspersed with several solos and group ensemble numbers, at the gymnasium on Thursday evening, February 21, at 8 o'clock.

The selections to be played on the program, taken from the 1935 contest list, have proven very interesting and stimulating to the band. The band members, this year including many new young members, are working to pass requirements outlined to improve their musicianship in order to receive a band emblem. These emblems are of red and white chenille, a white lyre with the word "band" in red.

There will be no admission charge to the concert, but a collection will be taken to help support the Nursery School fund.

It's the Tire That Leads Them All

Firestone

Equip Your Car Now With New Tires And Avoid Trouble Later

Just as sure as tomorrow follows today tire trouble follows the first sign of weak and worn spots in your tires. Of course sometimes it's a matter of just how soon tire trouble will "catch up" with you. But it's a definite and positive matter that it will come sooner or later once a worn or weak spot is discovered. Every motorist agrees to that.

Then with tire trouble a definite matter in the future once these worn spots are discovered, why not avoid the disastrous things that very often occur when a tire suddenly goes flat, by installation of a new set of FIRESTONES. Don't take chances. You can't afford to for your own sake and for the sake of those who ride with you.

Every FIRESTONE tire is constructed of the very best materials that can be obtained and with the finest workmanship that enters into the construction of a tire. The manufacturers of FIRESTONE tires have long recognized that their good name is back of every tire they manufacture and consequently they have maintained their enviable reputation as tire manufacturers by building the best. FIRESTONE is satisfied with nothing less than the best and that is your guarantee of satisfaction with every purchase of a FIRESTONE tire.

FIRESTONE tubes are likewise constructed of the best materials and workmanship and they go hand in hand with FIRESTONE tires. The two make a perfect combination. So when next in the market for tires and tubes why not change to FIRESTONE and enjoy the complete satisfaction that comes with the knowledge that you have the best?

CENTRAL LAKE

Nice weather for a few days last week.

Johnnie Aardema slipped on the ice last week, breaking a bone of the lower leg, and will be kept out of school for a few weeks.

Henry Schroeder, a former live wire merchant of Maneelona is our new county administrator to succeed Harold Lamb, as reported by the press.

Miss Iris Burlew is ill with the flu. At present the case looks rather serious. Several around here are ill with colds or the grip. Mrs. Philip Ohman, who, with the family recently moved here from Creswell, has been ill in bed, may have to have an operation. Her husband is wheelman on a car ferry out of Ludington.

Louis Greenman and two chums hitch-hiked it last week where they expect to find employment, at Flint. Jay Emery and wife are expected up from there to attend the funeral at the Doyle Morse home. Herbert McGuire, who recently hitch hiked there has found employment. About three days out of the week, they say, is the best they can do at getting work.

Mrs. Eva Morse Peterson and baby and Lyle and Wilmer Morse left Sunday morning by auto for Detroit where Mr. Peterson has employment. The boys are expecting to get work there also. Maybe they can bring home a slice of that four billion plum pudding the Democrats are passing out. Mrs. Lyle Morse accompanied them to Bellaire where she will stay with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Fuller.

Rev. Mumby stayed over for Sunday school here last Sunday. There was an attendance of 73. Congregationalists had 51 present, and Pentecostals, 26, Free Methodists, 17. Rev. Mumby on Sonday evening of last week was entertained, with Mr. Morse, at the E. R. Jones home for lunch. The Jones hospitality is known for miles around, and it's hard to get away from there without refreshments and a casual conversation with E. R.

Rev. and Mrs. Rauch were absent from Eastport Baptist church services a week ago Sunday on account of the death of the mother of Rev. Rauch. Aid Society is expected to be held at the church Tuesday. Antrim county Pomona grange is scheduled for this week Wednesday—an all-day meeting. A fine program is expected. Maple Hill at Eastport Gleaner hall, Grass Lake near Bellaire, and Forest Home granges will participate at the Bay View Gleaner hall at East port. We'll tell you about it next week, and how the three goats act when they get together.

Tom and Andrew Wynsma, Albert Snitseler (the long fellow) and O. R. and J. W. Morse invaded the sanctum sanctorum of the Antrim county road commission last week and prevailed on the chairman, Barney Mitchel, to snow plow the Bay View-Holland church road. The crew, Ora Johnson, Frank Lakies, and Gilman Wilson in command, came on Valentine's Day, and didn't the snow fly! Well, it was the nicest Valentine party that we'uns have had for many moons. The next day, the cars were scooting by, and everybody was happy again.

David Doyle, infant son, two weeks old of Central Lake, passed away there Saturday night. Cause of death appears to have been influenza. It was the only boy of the family, there being three girls, Betty; and twins, Doris and Dorothy. Funeral was held at the home Monday by Rev. Mumby. Mrs. Minnie Davis, wife of the rural carrier, sang. Remains were laid to rest in Southern Cemetery. The bereaved have the sympathy of the community. Misfortune appears to have followed Mr. Morse persistently. About ten years ago, his mother was burned to death while building a fire, his father was shortly afterwards injured seriously by being run down by a car at Detroit, he himself was seriously ill for several weeks and now the death of his son.

"Catwalk"—New Dodge Auto Term

The Dodge Brothers people, in addition to body and mechanical innovations, also add something to motor car nomenclature this year.

The Dodge models of 1935 have "catwalks," two of them. The term refers to the horizontal strips at each side of the hood, which become especially noticeable as the car is viewed from the front. The formation is unusual on automobiles, yet any one who, ever trod the "catwalk" of a submarine or is otherwise familiar with boats, immediately appreciates the aptness with which the word has been tacked onto a decidedly attractive portion of the Dodge automobile.

Persians Take New Name for Historic Kingdom

Revive "Iran," Once Designating Entire Region.

Washington.—New Year's day for the Persians, which is March 22, will bring to the ancient kingdom of Persia a new name—"Iran."

"Persia" was derived from the province of Pers, or Parsa, the seed from which the modern nation sprang. "Iran" is the ancient name for the entire geographical region, which includes parts of Afghanistan and Baluchistan. In recent times, however, "Iran" has been used as a secondary title for the Persian political unit. (It should not be confused with "Iraq," the similar name of the nation which borders it on the west).

"Persians have always called their country Iran—'Land of the Aryans'—and themselves 'Irani,'" says a bulletin from the Washington (D. C.) headquarters of the National Geographic society. "But at the same time they have looked upon Fars (the modern name for Pers) as the most typical Persian province, and even as the cradle of the Aryan race.

"The official change in name turns attention to the country as a whole, and emphasizes Iran's 3,000 years of strong nationalism. Its people have demonstrated again and again their ability to revive from major catastrophies.

Often Subjugated.

"At different periods in its development Iran has been overrun and even subjugated by Greek, Arab, Turk, and Mongol armies; but the Irani have clung tenaciously to their national characteristics and culture. Iran's two great poets, Firdausi and Omar Khayyam, helped to preserve the Persian language and national spirit through many troubled years. Firdausi's best known work, Shah-Namah, is one of the world's epics; and Edward Fitzgerald's translation of the Rubaiyat focused the attention of Europe on the culture of Iran.

"Iran, two and a half times the area of Texas, is covered by a network of modern highways, in varying degrees of repair, following ancient trade routes. Until 1931 Iran was a country without railroads, with the exception of a few extremely short stretches of narrow-gauge line. But now railway construction is progressing both in the north and in the south. Plans call for the meeting of these tracks within the next few years so that the fertile provinces bordering the Caspian sea in the north will be linked with the Persian gulf.

"Teheran, the beautiful capital city, is now reached by airplane, motor car, or camel caravan, but before long it will be included on the trans-Iranian railroad. The capital has a population of 320,000; but it is utterly unlike most of the modern capitals of the world of comparable size. Its wide boulevards along which traffic is directed by helmeted policemen, lend an outward air of modernity to the city; but the lumbering caravans of camels and donkeys soon dispel the modern appearance of the main thoroughfares.

"Side streets of the capital are narrow, crooked, and dark, and add further to the popular conception of a typical oriental city.

Modern Buildings.

"There is, of course, a section of beautiful modern buildings including the post office, the Imperial Bank of Persia, the legislative buildings of the Majlis (the Iranian congress or parliament), and the Pahlevi palace, home of his imperial majesty, Riza Shah Pahlevi, Shah-in-Shah of Iran.

"Until 1906 Iran was an absolute monarchy. In that year, the reigning shah was forced to grant a constitution, under which the national consultative assembly of Majlis was established. In October, 1925, this assembly voted to depose the young sultan. Riza Khan Pahlevi, then prime minister, was appointed to head a provisional government. In December of the same year, he ascended the throne as king. Under the present constitution, Iran's government somewhat resembles that of Great Britain. The prime minister is the constitutional executive and head of the cabinet, and all executive action is subject to the approval and support of the Majlis.

"The country is divided into 26 provinces, headed by governors-general (Wali) and governors (Hakim). Both are directly responsible to the central government. All towns and villages have chiefs called Kalkhuda, who are usually appointed by the governors, although sometimes elected by the citizens.

"Iran is modeling its educational system after that of England. The Valiahd (crown prince) is attending a school near Geneva, organized very much on the plan of an English public school. A large number of government students, women as well as men, have been sent abroad to schools. A university has been founded, in addition to a number of teachers' colleges, technical and secondary schools."

Hoax Starts Arizona Gold Rush

One of the most gigantic hoaxes in the history of Arizona was engineered by Charles Williams of Phoenix when he started a new gold rush. The miner came out of the mysterious Superstitions mountains after he had been missing 85 hours. With him he brought 12 ounces of pure gold, which he said he found in a rich cache. Later investigation and assaying proved that the gold was dental gold and melted down coins. Williams has admitted his fraud. Left to right: Charles Williams; Ed Layton, prospector into whose camp Williams stumbled as he emerged from the mountains; and Officer Guss Dobrinski, inspecting one of the gold "nuggets."

Build on Faith and Trust

Writer's Opinion Is That Vows to Keep Faith, and to Be Honest, Are All That May Reasonably Be Exchanged at Matrimonial Altar.

By HELEN WELSHIMER, in the New York World-Telegram.

Mrs. Virginia Overshiner Cogswell announces that she is disillusioned about men and marriage. Why shouldn't she be? She says she wants to terminate her seventh marriage. To take back your heart seven times is a procedure monotonous enough to bore anyone.

While Mrs. Cogswell's attitude is not difficult to understand, the contention remains that it isn't sporting of her to tell girls, "Don't marry!" Not every one tries seven times without finding a satisfactory husband. By a little pre-marital consideration, a man and woman can often determine whether the chemical allure which drew them together has a chance for survival.

Certainly no man and woman—though their marriage score be seven times seven—must continue the nuptial relationship when love has vanished and isn't expected back. Dictates of sound judgment, good taste and health suggest that such people at least live apart.

First of all, two enamored human beings should determine whether their affection for each other is real or synthetic. It is best to fashion wedding garments only when love is all wool, a yard wide, guaranteed not to shrink, fade or run.

Compatibility — mental, physical and spiritual—is an important marital prerequisite. People who have been reared with a common background, who have a community of tastes and interests, who have studied the same textbooks and found the same answers to their problems, have a much better chance of success than those who represent different worlds.

Adoration is a nice part of love. But when there is nothing but a tender emotion, it is surprising how quickly small differences can toughen it.

Two people who believe that they can follow their own interests apart from the affection bestowed on each other soon find that the moments of worship in each other's presence have lost their savor. Anybody can worship a honey-colored idol on a shelf or admire a colored glass window in a cathedral. But when you marry you must observe that the object of your devotion can't sit forever on a pedestal.

Probably the greatest mistake that people make is to take the marriage ceremony literally. Two people promise to love, cherish and protect each other until death parts them.

The first vow should be cut.—No one can promise to love anyone else forever. We can promise to keep faith, to be honest and honorable, to cherish our affection, to guard it and nurture it. But if it passes with the spring or summer, all we can do is surrender with grace. We cannot bank on finality in any human relationship.

The Bible, which says that two people shall become one flesh, makes no mention of one heart or one soul. After all, marriage can't succeed if love is held with bonds. It has to be a voluntary offering. We can't restrain the wind, the tide, the rain, the spring, or love. Love, most of all. It comes and goes at the giver's bidding.

But love is not as variable a quality as we may suppose from this freedom of disposal. When two people's hearts click, and those two are understanding and compatible and respect each other's freedom as individuals, the chances are that love will last.

A marriage built on a cornerstone of possessiveness may topple in the first high wind. But one erected on faith and trust will stand, although the waters rise, the winds blow and the storms come.

The last few years of economic sacrifice and struggle have taught youth—and youth's parents, too—that it is considerably more important for two people to be able to laugh together, weep together and plan together than to have frosted rolls in the cupboard and several cars in the garage. Marriage has to be woven from spiritual stuff rather than material. Or it will fall down—seven times out of seven!

Love, in brief, can't be put on a mercenary standard. It requires respect more than adulation.

If, having come to marriage prepared, Mrs. Cogswell found unhappiness in seven instances, fate has played her a distinctly raw deal. We don't blame her at all for warning other women against the glorified state. But it is nice to know that most people have had better luck!

Help Scientific Study

Miniature earthquakes, created by setting off small charges of dynamite, are helping scientists study deep-lying rock structures of the earth, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. Sensitive instruments record the "earthquakes." By studying the effects of these explosions it is possible to locate accurately underlying strata of rock as deep as 40,000 feet below the surface. The apparatus also is used to locate earthquake faults, to study the velocity with which earth tremors are propagated, to locate oil shale and to measure the depth of alluvial deposits. Dynamite charges vary from one to forty pounds. The explosive and recording instruments are carried on a special truck outfitted by scientists of the California Institute of Technology.

Handicap to Be Lifted

Gold Prospectors Now Attending School

Ontario Mines Bureau Holds Classes for Novices.

Toronto.—The lure of gold in the northern Ontario bush brought 440 men and four women to the prospectors' classes held in Toronto by the Ontario department of mines. During eight days these men and women were taught how to recognize various minerals, how to make chemical tests and many other things which a prospector should know. In the afternoons field work, chemistry, spotting and allied subjects were discussed. In the evenings illustrated lectures on prospecting were held.
